while the new firefighters are trained. Phelan said O'Connell informed him that there are sufficient funds in this year's $600,000 overtime budget.

"The chief has a budget and he has informed me that he has sufficient funds in the overtime account to last the entire fiscal year," said Phelan. "And it's up to him to make it work. We have confidence in his ability to do that."

a Proposition 2 1/2 override vote." Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick estimates the measure would cost approximately $8.5 million by the time it is fully implemented.

Phelan said the ordinance restricts the fire chief's ability to operate the department.

"This ordinance would restrict the Quincy Fire Chief's ability to perform his duties as Chief and undermine his ability to properly allocate personnel," Phelan said.

Instead, the council should work with the administration to conduct an independent fire study to assess the needs of the fire department, he said. Currently, the administration is in the process of compiling a Request for Proposals (RFP) to begin the process, he said.

Supporters of the measure dominated Monday night's meeting, as the council heard from representatives of firefighters' unions, including William Arienti, president of the Quincy Fire Fighters Association Local 792; Robert McCarthy, president of the Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts; and Michael Mullane, 3rd district vice president of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

"This isn't about money, this is about priorities," said Arienti. "This is about keeping people safe."

Mullane, a Quincy resident, urged the council to override the mayor's veto. "It's a wonderful city to live in, and it should be a safe city to live in," he said.

McCarthy asked the mayor's office to work together with the council to adopt 1710. "We just want the minimum standard, minimum," he told the council. "It should be a collaboration between the union and management."

The council also heard from retired Quincy fire Capt. Joseph Farley, who was injured on duty in 1999. A firefighter for 30 years, Farley collapsed from smoke inhalation after his air tank ran out while fighting a blaze on 165 Quincy Shore Dr. An understaffed engine truck hindered his situation, he said.

"One extra firefighter on the scene makes all the difference in the world," Farley told the council. "I could have used that extra firefighter on 165 Quincy Shore Dr."

O'Connell, in an emotional rebuttal, said the city had many chances to hire more firefighters during the robust 1990s, but did little. Under the circumstances, the city is doing the best it can, he said. "We are trying our hardest," said O'Connell.

Councillor John Keenan said the city can afford to pay for the costs of hiring additional firefighters.

"It's a lot of money, but let's not be fooled into thinking it will bankrupt the city," Keenan said. He added that the city should try to tap federal grant money to help offset the costs of the measure. But Tom Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, said the city would have to raise taxes to implement the measure. He also complained that the meeting had taken on the appearance of a public hearing, with only supporters being invited. "I think it's unfortunate that the taxpayers haven't been heard on this issue," said Largey.

Raymondi said the adoption of a minimum manning standard would cut down on overtime costs within the department. Last year, he said, the city spent $1.7 million on overtime — almost three times the original $600,000 line item — due to an understaffed department.

"This is the same situation that happened last year," said Raymondi. "And what happened? We exhausted the overtime budget by Labor Day. Once again, the mayor has purposefully underfunded the overtime budget."

Phelan said the ordinance that was approved includes only the part NFPA 1710 that is palatable to the firefighters' unions. "Portions of the NFPA 1710 standard are conveniently ignored; portions that deal with the health and welfare of our firefighters," Phelan said.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said: "I can tell you honestly that this was never a political or union issue. The rumors last fall of the pulling out of Engine 4, followed by the intermittent loss of Rescue 1, kick-started this issue. It was like kicking the sleeping dog."

MBTA Coordinating With Quincy Police Police Presence Increased At Quincy Center T Station

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The MBTA police has stepped up its efforts in patrolling the Quincy Center T station, residents were told at last week's Crime Watch meeting.

Held at City Hall, the meeting was sponsored by Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, Council President Dan Raymond and Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley.

About 40 residents quizzed members of the Quincy Police Department and MBTA Police to learn how they are coordinating their efforts to combat crime in the downtown area.

The Crime Watch meeting also gave residents the opportunity to meet several Quincy police and MBTA officers, including Quincy Police Lt. William Stenmon, Sgt. John Ryan, officers Bob Hannah and Jack Haynes, MBTA Lt. Michael Shea and MBTA Sgt. Mark Gillespie.

Many residents expressed concern about policing tactics near the Quincy Center MBTA station in the wake of a stabbing incident there last April.

Shea told residents that the department has added another police officer to patrol the Quincy Center T station. Currently, two officers patrol the area until 11:30 p.m. nightly, he said.

In addition, Shea said MBTA police officers also ride the train between the four Quincy T stops.

Shea and Quincy Police Chief William Falco assured residents that the two departments are successfully coordinating their efforts.

"They do intermingle and they do swap information," said Falco. "We do work together."

Gutro said it is important for the two departments to coordinate their efforts because people are constantly moving from T locations to Quincy areas and vice versa.

But overall, the increased police presence is having a positive impact on the downtown area, he said.

"By all accounts we are seeing a stronger police presence in Quincy Center," said Gutro. "Sustaining it and stepping up coordination between the T and Quincy police will continue to benefit the neighborhoods around the center. The daily interaction between the Quincy community police officer and the MBTA police is essential because most people at the T are transient," he said.

Gutro added that it is important for officers of the two departments to know each other, exchange phone numbers and interact on a daily basis.

Residents were introduced to Haynes, the department's community police officer in the downtown area.

Falco also provided an update on the status of the department's efforts to improve conditions in the downtown area.

Thus far, the results have been positive, he said.

"I think that most of the people I've talked to are happier," Falco said.

Falco promised residents that the stepped up community policing efforts would continue through the fiscal year. He said the department is slowly expanding the area of coverage for its community policing efforts in the Quincy Center area.

"It has expanded but not as far as we'd like it to be," he said.

But the chief stressed that increased coverage in the downtown area has not come at the expense of other areas of the city.

Officer Bob Hannah said approximately 65 of the department's 200 June arrests came in the downtown area.

In general, most residents seemed to agree that the increased police presence is making a difference.

"There has been a change for the better," said Quincy resident David Portesi. "Most residents seem to know what is best for their community."

Once again, however, residents expressed concern with what they perceive as a high concentration of social

'A Tactic To Distract Me,' Hanley Counters Hanley Should 'Step Down' As Councillor, Phelan Says

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley has no intention of vacating his seat even though Mayor William Phelan said he should "step down" as councillor and abstain from voting on a controversial firefighter staffing ordinance because "he is not a resident of the city."

"I do have a problem with his vote," Phelan said of Hanley. "He is not a resident of Quincy. If someone is going to vote on something that impacts the tax rate for years to come, then they should reside in Quincy. I think he should step down as councillor and not vote on the issue."

Hanley, who moved to Pembroke in June 2002, is one of the strongest supporters of an ordinance that adopts a set of national fire department manpower standards. Phelan maintains that the costs associated with the measure would force the city to override Proposition 2 1/2, remove fire equipment from service or close fire stations.

Phelan said his criticism is not personal, but "I believe if you are going to serve as an elected official in the City of Quincy you should reside here. Clearly, he does not."

Hanley said the mayor's criticism is an attempt to distract him from debate on the firefighter issue.

"I want to serve the residents of Ward 1 to the best of my ability," said Hanley. "I was duly elected as Ward 1 councillor. I don't want to be trapped by a tactic that distracts from the issue at hand. It's unfortunate that the mayor has to resort to these tactics.

"I can sleep at night knowing that I'm servicing the residents of Ward 1," he said.

"The mayor didn't have a problem with my residence when I was voting on his side regarding the open space initiative or the budget, so why does he have a problem now?"

July 4th Day Of Irony

(This column originally appeared in July, 1992 and has been updated for this week as we celebrate the Fourth of July holiday.)

July 4th, you could say, is a day of irony in American history.

America was born on July 4th and the two men who played major roles in that historic event also died on July 4th -- 50 years later.

Friday marks the 227th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence and the 177th anniversary of the deaths of its two main architects -- Thomas Jefferson and our own John Adams.

Adams, like Jefferson, was a super patriot.

And certainly a better patriot than he was a prognosticator. He predicted July 2 -- not July 4th -- would be celebrated down through the years as America's birthdate.

Adams made that somewhat erroneous prediction in a letter to Abigail Adams July 2, 1776. In the letter sent from Philadelphia to Abigail here in Quincy, he declared:

"The second day of July, 1776 will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America."

The man who would become second President thought this because the Declaration of Independence was adopted by 12 states on July 2. But, it wasn't signed by anyone until July 4.

And, only two of the 55 signers actually affixed their signatures on July 4th. They were Quincy's John Hancock, who as President of the Second Continental Congress, was the first to sign, and Charles Thomson.

HANCOCK

Most of the others signed the precious document on Aug. 2. But six signed after that. And, Thomas McKean, of Delaware, didn't get around to it until five years later.

Jefferson and Hancock usually get top billing in the history books when it comes to the Declaration of Independence. Jefferson as its author and Hancock as its first signer. Hancock's signature -- bold and with a fancy flourish so "King George III can see it without his spectacles" probably is the most famous autograph in history.

But Adams played a key, if not as glamorous a role in putting the Declaration together.

Jefferson himself acknowledged that when he praised Adams "... the most efficient agent in procuring a public Declaration of Independence."

Ironically, both Jefferson and Adams died on July 4, 1826 -- the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Adams collapsed here in Quincy in a wing chair in his second floor study in the Adams Mansion on Adams St. -- the home of four generations of the illustrious Adams family and the summer White House for two presidents.

Adams and Jefferson had had a falling out but reconciled in later years through the efforts of Abigail as a peacemaker.

Among Adams' last words as he lay dying were, "Jefferson survives."

He thought Jefferson had outlived him. But actually, Jefferson had died earlier that same day at Monticello, his home in Virginia.

He was 83.

News didn't travel very fast in those days. There weren't many daily newspapers around back then. And, of course, no radio or television and no such things as instant news bulletins.

If there had been, the deaths of Adams and Jefferson on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence would have made instant news the world over.

Adams was just three months and 15 days from his 91st birthday. He survived Abigail, his wife of 54 years, by eight years.

He had lived to see his son, John Quincy Adams, become the sixth President in 1825. But Abigail, the first woman ever to be the wife of one U.S. President and the mother of a second, never knew the second honor.

She died Oct. 28, 1818 a month before her 74th, seven years before her son became president.

ABIGAIL

Four days before he died, John Adams was asked to give a holiday toast to his fellow Quincy residents. The old man replied:

"I will give you independence forever."

Asked if he would add to that, he declared: "Not a syllable."

"Independence forever" -- those are words to cherish and remember.

If you've never been to the Adams Mansion, you're missing a visitor's treat.

Affectionately known as "The Old House" by the Adams family, it has since 1946 been under the supervision of the National Park Service and is a national historical site.

The late Wilhelmina Harris, as long-time superintendent, gave the Mansion her personal loving care. Present Supt. Marianne Peak has carried on that tradition.

They have kept the house in a "lived in appearance."

Strolling the beautiful rooms, you get the feeling that John and Abigail are just out for a little walk and will be right back.

the popular vote but an overwhelming electoral vote. As President, Taft had previously visited Quincy as a guest of honor at the 1910 Harvard aero meet at Squantum where military uses of airplanes were first demonstrated. After his defeat he came again to Quincy in 1915 and spoke to the Quincy Women's Club on the need to have a U.S. military force equal to Germany's. Allan Pierce, a Quincy photographer with a studio in the Adams Building, published the postcard.

More than 150,000 people thronged Merrymount Park to greet 2,000 holiday marchers at Fourth of July festivities and listen to speeches by Cong. Richard B. Wigglesworth (R-Milton) and State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley (D-Boston).

"Let the men and women of Quincy today," said Hurley, "band their shoulders in loyalty and friendship to the great work of our day; the building up of the United States under our common leader, President Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Mayor Charles A. Ross touched off the midnight bonfire in the park, which had been guarded by police after Quincy Legion Post Cmdr. Lorimer F. Brown told them a "certain element" from Neponset planned to ignite it ahead of time so it wouldn't conflict with theirs.

The day before the Fourth, Quincy Legionnaires hosted some 5,000 children with merry-go-round and Ferris wheel rides under the direction of Harry Ingalls, who also led the youngsters in a community sing.

The Red Men's band from Wollaston, under the direction of Douglas Haydock, gave concerts on two nights from the acoustic shell in the park and the New England Troubadors played for dancing in the pavilion on the pageant grounds.

A last minute sale of fireworks at the Quincy Fireworks Store, 1586 Hancock St., had Yankee Boy two-inch flash salutes, five boxes for 10 cents; Globe torpedoes, 10 cents a dozen; and a dozen packages of No. 1 sparklers for 35 cents.

Raymond Young, 13, of 77 School St., was taken to City Hospital with burns about the face and body from an exploding firecracker.

Tax Collector Edward G. Morris spoke at the celebration at Merrymount Beach, where Helen Gavaza and Paul Benzaquin won prizes for the best costumes in the Horribles parade.

COPELANDS WIN

Jack Kolson pitched six-hit ball and George Bennett belted a home run as the Copelands defeated the Quincy Trojans, 12-2, in the holiday opener of the second half of the City League Schedule.

Copelands: Halloran, SS; J. Hughes, 1B; Bennett, 2B; Hebert, CF/C; Skoler, RF; Baker, C; Bonafini, LF; Rouillard, 3B; P. Hughes, RF/CF; Kolson, P.

ing attitudes. We appreciate all the extra work what you do on this special day. "Thank you" to the Quincy community for responding so positively and generously in giving to help others. "Thank you" to the volunteers for bringing the food from the post offices to the Crisis Center and for sorting and boxing the many pounds of food. The Quincy Crisis Center is very grateful to be a recipient of the food that is so generously donated. Each person involved has fulfilled the Quincy Crisis Center's mission of "advancing a culture of compassion." Even today, your giving and hard work continues as volunteers prepare bags of non-perishable food for delivery by other volunteers to those who call the "Food for Families" pantry asking for assistance. On behalf of those we serve we say "thank you" to everyone for equipping us to respond to their need.

Declaration Of Independence Re-Enactment At Adams Park Friday

Ever wonder what it was like that July day in 1776 when the Continental Congress declared us to be free and independent?

The U. S. National Park Service is planning to give you an opportunity to find out on the Fourth of July 227 years later.

Members of the audience will assume the roles of delegates from the colonies and debate passage of the Declaration of Independence.

There will be three performances on Friday, July 4, at 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m., with the Carriage House at the Adams National Historic Park substituting for Philadelphia's Independence Hall. The Park is located at 135 Adams St. in Quincy.

The fun, family event is free.

John Adams, the "Atlas of Independence," will lead the sometimes heated debate before the final vote is taken.

After the debate, each delegate will sign his or her name to the document, ring the Liberty Bell, and receive a copy of the Declaration of Independence to keep as a memorial and eat a slice of liberty cake.

ABIGAIL ADAMS (portrayed by Karen Yourell) and Benjamin Harrison (portrayed by John Stanwich) will welcome delegates to vote on the Declaration of Independence at the Adams National Historic Park Friday, July 4. There will be three re-enactments of the historic debate: 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. at the Carriage House, on the grounds of the Adams National Historic Park, 135 Adams St., Quincy. Harrison was chairman of the whole when the Continental Congress passed the Declaration of Independence in 1776.

A candlelight parade, led by the Middlesex County 4-H Fife & Drum Corps, will follow the evening performance, ending at United First Parish Church where the Declaration of Independence will be officially read.

Boardwalk Arts Affair Aug. 2-3 At Marina Bay

The eighth annual Arts Affair on the Boardwalk at Marina Bay will be held Saturday, Aug. 2, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sunday, Aug. 3, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

More than 300 pieces of art will be on display by professional and amateur artists who are members of local art associations in Quincy and seven surrounding towns. For more information, call 617-479-2147.

Family Day Today In Houghs Neck

Houghs Neck Family Day will be observed with a giant block party from 12 noon until dark today (Thursday) at Edgewater Beach.

Youngsters will contest basketball and beach games for T-shirts and ribbons and many neighbors will hold open houses.

The festivities will be topped off by a view of the fireworks across the Fore River in North Weymouth.

Activities are free and only nominal prices will be charged for refreshments.

Houghs Neck Family Day is sponsored by the Fourth of July Committee in conjunction with the Houghs Neck Community Council.

The Morrisette Legion Post Scholarship Committee recently awarded scholarships totaling $8,250 to 10 high school seniors going on to college.

The recipients: Courtney E. Rand, Lauren M. Ready, Meaghan D. Mooney and Joseph J. Scribi, all of Quincy; Alissa Sheehan of Randolph, Kathleen Leavitt of Weymouth, Caitlin P. Diehl of Hanover, Kimberly Gray of Pembroke, Lara Pollara of Marshfield and Megan M. Jessee of Carver. Scholarships are available only to the children or grandchildren of Morrisette Post members.

The recipient choices, made after interviews by committee members Paul Hunt, chairman; Lou Assad, Ed McAllister and Larry Norton, were approved by the full committee including Tom Stansbury, Henry Bradley and George Nicholson.

The committee members said they were impressed by the academic achievement of the students interviewed and also by their strong commitment to community service.

The largest donation to the scholarship fund was once again presented by William Corcoran representing the Charlie Sacchetti Scholarship Fund, most of who are Morrisette Post members.

A large donation was also again made by the Quincy Sons of Italy Lodge through the special efforts of Harold DiMattio, an officer of the Sons of Italy and chaplain of the Morrisette Post. Numerous donations were also received from post members and friends.

Rice, Sausage Cakes

During rainy weather, I cook foods one usually eats in the cold weather. This particular time, I had made rice a side dish for chicken.

The next day, for breakfast, we had breakfast sausage and had three of them left over. Of course the following recipe can be made with ordinary sausage.

With the leftover rice and sausage I made a rice pancake with a couple of simple ingredients. In today's recipe, I used what was left over for this recipe, but it can be expanded upon with more ingredients.

Mix all ingredients together. It should be easy to form a patty type cake. If you find it

1 cup cooked rice
1 egg
2 tablespoons flour
1/4 cup grated parmesan cheese salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons olive oil and 1 tablespoon vegetable oil (or either one alone) too moist, add a bit more flour. In the hot oil, drop each patty and turn until browned on each side. Drain on a paper towel and keep in a warming oven if you make them ahead.

The next day, they were pretty tasty popped in the microwave.

Elect MARYANN MAHONY WARD 6 COUNCILLOR

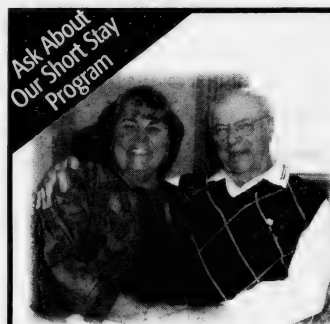

A Candidate You Can Count On To Get The Job Done!

Have A Happy And Safe 4th of July

To elect Maryann as your next Ward Six City Councillor is to give our community the strongest leadership and representation and together we can make a difference.

Authorized and paid for by: The Committee to Elect Maryann P. Mahony, Steve Cauty, Treasurer

Allerton House at Harbor Park resident Phil Tetreault with his daughter Judy Murphy.

"Quite simply, only the best is good enough for my father. We chose Allerton House."

It's all about peace of mind at an Allerton House Assisted Living Community. Here you'll discover a new kind of independence, built around a real home, new friendships and a caring staff.

It's a place where people who value their independence, depend on us. It's a choice you can feel good about.

Maryann Mahony Announces For Ward 6 Council Seat

Maryann Mahony of Hummock Road, North Quincy, announces her candidacy for the open Ward 6 city council seat.

"The city is facing tough economic times and budget cuts," Mahony said. "The issues are very important. My priorities have been and continue to be public safety, education, development and making sure our tax dollars are being spent wisely."

Mahony said while campaigning door-to-door she has learned more about the concerns of residents and business owners from North Quincy to Squantum.

Their concerns, she said, are:

Taxes, public safety, traffic problems, land development, inadequate lighting, street and sidewalk repairs and, for business owners, parking problems around their businesses.

Mahony said she is also concerned about the cleanliness of Wollaston Beach "since the existing program by the MDC will be ending due to state budget cuts." She said she would work with city departments to make sure Wollaston Beach is properly maintained.

"As the development of the 223 affordable housing units for the elderly at Squantum Gardens begin, I want to assure residents of Ward 6 they will have strong representation and voice during all phases of development."

Mahony, noting she has been a community activist for more than 40 years, cited

a number of her accomplishments and activities.

She helped establish and re-start the Citywide Parents Council, is co-president of the Quincy Foundation for Excellence in Education and is chairwoman of the grant committee that awarded grants to the Park, Squantum, Atlantic Middle and North Quincy High schools.

She is a member of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association, a member and former vice chairman of the Ward 6 Democratic Committee, past president of the Myles Standish, Atlantic Middle and North Quincy High schools PTOs. She was a member of the committee to build a new NQHS.

She is a qualified den leader, coach for the Cub Scouts/Boy Scouts and was associated with the first Marina Bay committee.

Mahony and her husband, John (Moe) Mahony, have been married 44 years and have a son, Jack Mahony, and two grandchildren, Ryan and Morgan.

Her husband is her campaign manager, Steven L. Canty, treasurer, and Judith Brams, secretary.

Mahony is employed at Boston Gear as a customer representative and was manager at the former Best Buy on Quincy Shore Drive.

Mahony said if she is elected she will hold community meetings and office hours and will respond quickly to telephone calls days and evenings.

A fund-raising reception will be held Tuesday, July 15, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at Raffael's, Enterprise Drive, North Quincy. Suggested donations are $20 per person and $35 per couple.

Buckley Urges Partnership To Boost Quincy Education

Brain Buckley, a candidate for School Committee, has urged all members of the Quincy community to "join the winning team" for the future of the young people of the city.

"All too often, we think of ourselves as individuals and lose sight of working together for education," he told a recent coffee hour.

If parents, officials, businessmen and other residents realized that education is the city's number one resource, it would make even further strides in serving its children.

Buckley told the gathering that he is a firm believer in recognizing the direct correlation between Quincy's property values and its public education system.

"Quincy's home market value has never been higher and one of the major contributors to this fact is the reputation and success of its school department," he said.

Buckley said that because of his experience he sees himself as the ideal liaison between the various parts of the community and the public school system.

If other residents dedicated their services as hard as parents worked for their children "it would drastically benefit the city and the children of Quincy."

"The schools have just begun to open their doors to the community," said Buckley, "and additional invitations and service offerings are needed."

Yogurt Campaign Seeks $100,000 To Restore Adams' Declaration Copy

Colombo Yogurt is riding to the rescue of the Adams National Historical Park's deteriorating copy of the Declaration of Independence with a summer-long campaign to raise $100,000 to restore it.

The copy, a framed proof on vellum or dried calf skin, was one of 200 made in 1820 at the urging of John Quincy Adams, who feared the then 44-year-old original was beginning to show the ravages of time.

The announcement of Colombo's second annual "Preserve Our Heritage" fund-raising campaign was to be made yesterday (Wednesday) morning by Bob and Ann Colombosian, members of the family that founded Colombo Yogurt in 1929.

With them at kickoff party in the carriage house of the Adams Mansion was David McCullough, Pulitzer Prize-winning author of a best-selling biography of John Adams, who read a passage from the Declaration.

Artifacts from the Old House, guarded by a local police detail, were to be displayed during the announcement and, afterward, some 20 or 30 local youngsters were ready to sign a copy of the document.

The Colombosians plan to raise funds for the Park by offering to contribute 20 cents for every specially marked Colombo Yogurt cup lid returned by Sept. 30 until the goal of $100,000 is reached.

Clean lids can be brought to the Adams National Historical Park or mailed to Preserve Our Heritage, Box 2317, Maple Plain, MN 55592-2317. That's the home of General Mills, Colombo's parent company.

A special collection will be taken at the Boston Harborfest celebration, which started yesterday (Wednesday) and will run through Sunday.

Priority for spending the funds raised will go to restore the Declaration of Independence but whatever is left over will be used to rehabilitate some of the other artifacts that are preserved at the Old House.

Phelan Collects Nearly 1,000 Nomination Signatures

Mayor William Phelan stepped up his campaign for re-election over the weekend as he and volunteers collected nearly 1,000 nomination signatures.

Only 50 valid voter signatures are needed on nomination papers of candidates for city-wide office to obtain a spot on the election ballot.

Phelan and nearly 30 volunteers greeted voters and gathered the signatures at public locations throughout the city on Saturday.

It brought to over 1,000 signatures collected by the Phelan committee so far, a spokesman said.

"I am truly excited by the response we have received," Phelan said. "When I ran for this office two years ago I promised a fresh, honest approach to city government for a change. Despite facing significant hurdles, many unforeseeable at the time, I believe we have delivered on that promise and have begun to move Quincy forward again. It is clear from talking to voters this weekend that they are pleased with the direction we are heading."

Dan Jaehnig New Weekend Anchor

Quincy Native Beaming Into Homes On Fox 25 News

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Although his face is recognizable to thousands of people in the Greater Boston area, Dan Jaehnig never strays far from his roots.

A Quincy native and long-time resident of the city, Jaehnig is beaming into homes as the new weekend anchor at WFTV Boston for the station's Fox 25 News At Ten broadcast. His hard work and perseverance as a journalist garnered a 2002 New England Emmy Award for news reporting. It is proudly displayed on a mantle in his Quincy home.

"I knew from as young as I can remember that I wanted to be a journalist or run for public office," he said. "I chose journalism because I thought I could make more of a difference than in public office."

Jaehnig, 33, isn't letting success and notoriety go to his head. He prides himself on staying grounded and never forgetting where he came from.

From his humble beginnings as a volunteer at Quincy Cable TV, to his current job seen by thousands every night, Jaehnig's focus has always been on getting the story for the average person.

"When I am at a press conference or doing an interview I always say that I'm asking these questions for the person at home that doesn't have the privilege to ask questions," he said. "And it's really my job to get the story. I didn't get into the business to be recognized. I got in to tell good stories."

The youngest of seven brothers, Jaehnig was born and raised in the Quincy Point area. He attended the St. Joseph's School and started the school's first newspaper. He did the same while a student at Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth.

Jaehnig got his first taste of television broadcasting at the age of 12 volunteering at Quincy Cable TV.

While pursuing a career in journalism at Suffolk University, he took an internship with The Quincy Sun newspaper. He started off writing obituaries and other news items. Jaehnig recalls Publisher Henry Bosworth approaching him with a story idea about the Farmer's Market in Quincy. "I remember Henry coming to me and saying, 'Kid, we are going to let you do a story,'" said Jaehnig.

QUINCY'S DAN JAEHNIG, who once interned at The Quincy Sun, can now be seen on Fox 25 News as a reporter and weekend anchor.

"I was just thrilled to have my work published."

After leaving The Sun he took an internship with WJVI Channel 56 in Boston.

"I volunteered to do anything, getting coffee or cleaning the floors," said Jaehnig. It was here he decided to pursue a career in front of the TV cameras.

"I thought I could tell stories better visually, rather than writing them strictly for a newspaper," he said.

Financial times were tough in the beginning, but Jaehnig was more concerned with learning the business and gaining valuable experience. He made ends meet by waiting tables at the former Quincy Adams Restaurant in Quincy Point. He met his future wife, Jane, while working at the restaurant.

In 1992, Jaehnig graduated with a degree in broadcast journalism. Soon afterwards, he was offered a full-time position as an assignment editor with Channel 56. The hours were long, and the work was equally hectic.

"I used to work Christmas Eve, New Year's Eve, and the worst hours. But I loved it so much that I didn't care," he said.

Jaehnig took a brief sabbatical in 1993, traveling to Africa and preparing for his eventual marriage to Jane.

He resumed his career in Providence, Rhode Island by taking his first, full-time paying job as an assignment editor at WPRI.

Jaehnig's career took off in 1996 when he secured a position for the NBC-affiliate WWLP in Springfield. He worked as an investigative reporter and experienced his first live broadcast in front of the TV camera. His work covering such new topics as the mafia and the Pope's visit to New York was gaining attention. He married Jane, and the couple moved to Westfield, Mass.

His career took him back to Rhode Island and WJAR, an NBC-owned TV station. During his five-year tenure, he covered such stories as the death of John F. Kennedy Jr. and the crash of Egypt Air Flight 990.

Jaehnig said he is particularly proud of his work since moving to Fox 25 last year. Last month, he received the Emmy Award after being judged against his peers in the New England states. He plans on staying at Fox 25 and its new, state-of-the-art facility in Dedham.

Jaehnig said he enjoys Fox 25's "hands-on" approach of allowing news anchors to write much of their own material for broadcast. "We try to put our own mark on stories," he said. "The anchors at many of the other stations are just news readers."

For now, he will divide his time between weekend anchor and general assignment reporter.

"I don't think I could anchor full time, because I really love being out with people," he said.

He also feels obligated to help those who are just starting a career in the media industry.

"I believe in giving back, because I remember those people who helped me, like Henry Bosworth. He gave me a chance to write a story. Now that you're in it you can't ignore it, now it's your chance to give someone else a chance."

Now a father of twin girls, Jaehnig continues to visit his alma mater as a guest lecturer, offering advice and sharing his experiences with college students.

He said he most identifies with fellow broadcaster Tom Brokaw.

"He is very down-to-earth and grounded," Jaehnig said. "He really has respect for the working person. That is something that I've always wanted, is to stay grounded. In this business you have access to a lot of things - you get invited to all the big parties, interview stars or big players, and you can get carried away. But I've always remembered my days at the Quincy Sun, or those stories where I've gone out and talked to the average person."

Jaehnig credits his wife with helping him maneuver through the tough times.

"She really helped me when I was struggling," he said. "Now that I'm an anchor in Boston, things are much better, but I never forget the way things were. Now we get invited to things like the Governor's Ball, but I would much rather stay at home with the kids. You have to remember where you came from."

Anderson Bicycle Opens At 380 Washington St. Andersons Cycle Into Quincy

By SHEILA HALLORAN

It's 10 a.m. on Monday morning. Paul Anderson unlocks the doors to his newly opened bicycle shop at 380 Washington St. in Quincy.

Anderson is immediately greeted by customers. He tends to a young father shopping with his two small children. The family receives Anderson's undivided attention as well as his expert knowledge of bicycles.

Anderson's son, Joshua, is behind the counter, adjusting a bike seat for another eager customer.

Lauren, Anderson's daughter, is tending to the consistent phone calls.

Emma, the Anderson's black lab and store mascot, wanders around the store.

Anderson has been in the cycling business for over 30 years. Prior to opening Anderson Bicycle, Paul owned and operated Les Bowles Cyclery of Abington.

Paul began working part-time as a bike mechanic at Les Bowles at age 15. He purchased the shop in 1985. After a careful study of demographics, Anderson closed Les Bowles on June 1 to relocate on Washington Street in Quincy.

"It was time to move," said Anderson. "There wasn't enough people in our small community to appreciate what we do and there was no bike store in Quincy. 90,000 people and no bike shop and Quincy is much more of a cycling community."

"Do you carry jogging strollers," a young mother interrupts. Anderson immediately walks over to the young woman, and while there are no strollers in stock yet, Anderson inquires about the type of stroller she was looking for.

"I can call around some places for you," offers Anderson, as he takes down the woman's name and telephone number.

Anderson is not your typical salesman. He does not try to push products on his customers. Rather he is more concerned with identifying the needs of each individual consumer who enters his shop to ensure that they are using the products that are right for them.

ANDERSON BICYCLE, which recently opened at 380 Washington St., Quincy, focuses on bicycles for the whole family as well as service. Paul Anderson (right), a factory trained bicycle

"I want to develop clients not customers," said Anderson. "I try to identify their own personal needs so that the next time they come in the store they know what they are buying."

Anderson Bicycle offers bikes for any level of expertise, from bikes for infants and children to adult mountain bikes. The Andersons' focus is on families and Anderson himself rides the products he sells, to ensure that the bikes he sells are high quality bicycles.

The store has a wide selection of bicycles. Fuji, Diamondback, and Iron Horse bicycles are the store's featured bike lines. Adult tri-wheelers, and motorized bicycles are also available through Anderson Bicycle.

Accessories, such as car racks, baskets, helmets, tag-alongs, and everything that makes cycling more fun are all in stock and ready to go.

Service is also underscored at Anderson Bicycle. Paul is a factory-trained bicycle technician. Repair technician and bicycle shop operator, and his son, Joshua, tend to two two-wheelers.

stands are in sight of customers as they enter the store. All bicycles are assembled on site and once they are displayed on the floor they are ready to ride away.

Anderson says he is pleased with the positive reception that he has received in Quincy. While he has not done much advertising so far, the word about his shop is circulating and people are stopping by to check out South Shore's newest bicycle shop.

An avid cyclist, Paul rides regularly, both mountain and road, casual and extreme. He says he hopes to someday go cross-country on his bike. "I'll have to wait until the kids are on their own," said the father of three. "It takes about six weeks to go cross country but I will do it—someday."

Anderson lives in Pembroke with his wife Karen and children Timothy, Joshua and Lauren.

Anderson Bicycle is open Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Phone number is 617-769-9669.

Helping Your Home Survive Extreme Weather

(NAPS) — Your home handles a lot of extreme weather. To help it stand up to the elements, consider the products used to construct or renovate. They protect what's inside.

Consider the roofing shingles, siding, windows and trim of your house. Look for loose or worn products and replace them quickly to ensure the "envelope" of your home is protected.

"One of the key ways homes can lose hundreds of dollars in energy each year is through cracks around windows," says Bill Lazor, senior brand manager at Simonton Window, a leading manufacturer of vinyl replacement windows and patio doors.

"The multitude of small gaps add up. Homeowners start heating and cooling the outdoors and wasting energy. When the wind blows or driving rain targets the house, it's important to have windows that fit snugly in their openings and protect your home."

These tips may help:

- Seek out ENERGY STAR compliant products. Windows meeting those guidelines can reduce heat loss and gain, making the home more comfortable and reducing gas and electric bills.

- To combat extreme elements, consider low maintenance products, such as vinyl siding, urethane millwork and vinyl windows that resist humidity, insects and rot. They're easy to clean and made to handle rough weather. Ask for stainless steel components in your windows for smooth operation and increased corrosion-resistance in coastal areas.

- Do you love natural sunlight, but hate how it fades your carpeting and furnishings? When it's time to replace your windows, select Low E glass and advanced glass packages. These reflect harmful ultraviolet (UV) rays away from the windows.

- To protect the interior from the outdoor humidity and moisture, ask about insulating glass (I.G.) units when it's time to replace your windows. These units are made up of two more panes of glass separated by a spacer system. Argon and Krypton gas can be sealed inside the unit to reduce the transfer of heat and cold, saving you energy dollars.

- Play it safe and get impact resistant glass. During storms you don't need to worry about "shuttering up." Impact resistant glass, much like automobile windshield glass, resists wind-borne materials, such as flying lawn furniture during a storm. Even when struck forcefully by blunt objects, such as a crowbar, this glass stays in place. It also reduces sound and UV ray penetration, while making the house less inviting to burglars.

Hints For Homeowners

Adding Value To Your Home? Start At The Top

(NAPS) — If you're thinking about improving your home, you may want to start at the top. Your roof not only keeps the rain out, it can add to your home's value. Nailing that thought a bit more simply, experts point out that a new roof is one of the best ways to keep you dry while adding to your home's curb appeal and marketability.

Homeowners are usually surprised when real estate agents tell them that 40 percent of their home's curb appeal actually comes from the roof. A web site has been created to help homeowners see how shingle colors and designs can affect the appearance of their homes.

How It Works

Just visit www.gaf.com and click on the Smart Choice icon. There you will find four options: Roof Selector Key Danger Signals, Weather Stopper Systems and Smart Choice Warranties.

- Roof Selector — This section provides a wide selection of home styles so that you can find one that looks similar to yours. Then select colors for the home and trim. By viewing the home with various roof shingle designs and colors, you can get a better sense of the curb appeal that you can create.

- Key Danger Signals — This helps you to spot roofing problems before they can turn into damaging leaks. For example, it explains how a faulty roofing system can cause your energy bills to go up or even blistering of your internal or external paint.

- Weather Stopper System — This section explains why a good roof job is more than just banging up some shingles. It helps you understand the primary elements of a properly designed roofing system.

- Warranties — The Smart Choice Warranty section explains the different option you might select to protect your new roofing investment.

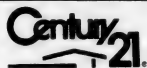

To learn more about your roofing options, visit www.gaf.com or call 1-888-LEAK-SOS.

REAL ESTATE

In-Ground Pools: Major Investment, A Lot Of Fun

People build in ground swimming pools for many reasons — social, aesthetic or for health reasons.

Whether you are a practical consumer or an extravagant dreamer seeking a tropical paradise with tumbling waterfall, the Better Business Bureau advises you to keep in mind your needs, desires and budget before making any purchasing decisions.

Before choosing a dealer or builder, think about how your family will use the swimming pool. Do they like to play a lot of water sports, swim laps or just splash around?

Thinking about usage and then designing with those needs in mind is the key to building a pool that your entire family will be happy with for years to come.

When you decide on the type and design of your pool, you want to select the right contractor or builder. You should select a pool contractor or dealer as carefully as you would an architect or builder for your home.

The Better Business Bureau, along with the National Pool and Spa Institute, suggest the following before signing a contract:

- Obtain at least three bids and compare them. Make sure the contractor's bid specifies the materials to be used, including quantity, brand, size, color, etc. Keep in mind that the lowest bid is not always the best.

- Make sure the contractor's paperwork is in order. Ask to see the contractor's license and certificates of insurance. Contact the licensing board to verify. Contractors may be required to obtain licenses from state, city and/or county agencies.

- Ask for references and check them out.

- Check out the Better Business Bureau (www.bosbbb.org) to see if they have a satisfactory record.

- Find out who will be doing the actual work — the contractor's employees or subcontractors. If the firm uses subcontractors for some of their work — such as from a tile company — you will need to research both the tile firm's reputation as well as the contractor. You also want to determine who will be responsible for problems down the road. Issues such as these should be resolved before construction begins.

- Find out if the builder can make any necessary site and soil evaluations of your property. The contractor should also know about existing zone, building and grading requirements.

- Some pool builder's offer financing, but you want to shop various lenders to find the best terms.

- Do not be pressured into signing a contract right away. Take your time and review the contract carefully. If you do not understand the contract, do not sign it.
- Make sure all warranties for labor and materials are in writing.

- When paying for your pool, never pay in cash. Use your credit card, check or money order. And, never play the full amount up front.

Moving Ideas

Tips For A Smooth Do-It-Yourself Move

(NAPS) If you're moving, you're not alone on that road. This year more than 50 million Americans will relocate and nearly 80 percent will decide to make the move without professional movers. As the moving season gets underway, Penske Truck Rental offers these tips to help do-it-yourself movers have a smooth, stress-free experience:

- To help you select the proper truck for your move, many truck rental companies have an online capability to assess your moving needs. This tool enables you to calculate, room by room, the truck size, packing equipment and moving accessories required to move your household efficiently.

- Be sure the truck rental company you choose has free 24-hour emergency road service along your route.

- When loading the truck, start with the heaviest items, such as major appliances and large furniture. Get help moving these items and consider renting hand trucks with load-locking straps and stair climbers so you can move large and/or heavy items safely.

- Stack cartons in the truck by weight, from the heaviest to lightest, floor to ceiling. Keep fragile items toward the top, securing them with rope so they do not shift during transit.

- Driving a truck is very different from driving a car. Take some time before your move to familiarize yourself with the operation and handling the vehicle. Trucks are taller and wider than cars and weigh three to 10 times more, requiring greater overhead and side clearance as well as a greater stopping distance.

- A cell phone is a great convenience that will keep you in touch with people assisting in your move and help you locate services needed during the trip. For your safety and the safety of others, please do not use your cell phone while driving. Park at a rest stop or pull off the road to make calls.

- Pack an "open first" box that includes essentials needed on arrival to your new toiletry items and a change of clothes. Be sure to load this box into the truck last, so it is easily accessible when you reach your destination.

Quincy Rallies For 6-5 Win Over Morrisette

Quincy continued its magic thus far in the American Legion baseball season with another comeback, rallying for a 6-5 victory Sunday afternoon over city rival Morrisette at Kincaide Park.

Down 5-4 in the seventh inning, Quincy pushed across a pair of runs for its third come-from-behind triumph of the season, improving its record to 5-3-1 overall and placing them fourth in the nine-team District 6 East division. Quincy has already matched the number of wins it had last year.

"The team is playing good ball," said manager Mark Jaehnig. "We're getting good leadership from our three 19 year olds, co-captains Pat Jaehnig, Mike Feetham and Dennis Thomson. They've been carrying the load. And we're getting excellent pitching from two 16 year olds, John Santon and Dean Sandomato. Hopefully we can keep it going."

The two city teams will meet again today (Thursday) at 5:45 p.m. at Kincaide Park. Next week, Quincy hosts Stoughton Sunday, Braintree Monday and Weymouth Wednesday, while Morrisette (3-4-2) travels to Braintree Sunday and Canton Tuesday.

Quincy scored a run in the top of the first and could have had more, except Pat Bregoli made a tremendous catch in the outfield to save a pair.

Morrisette answered with three runs in the bottom half. Bregoli (2 for 2, 2 walks, 3 runs) walked and Joe Priscella reached on an error before Brian O'Hanley smacked a two-run triple. Ray Marchand (2 hits) drove home O'Hanley with a single.

Morrisette extended its lead to 4-1 in the third inning when Tom Hughes stroked an RBI double that scored Bregoli. In the fourth inning, though, Quincy evened the score on Kevin Richardson's RBI single and Sean Sullivan's two-run double.

Morrisette regained the lead in the fifth. Bregoli singled, stole second, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Marchand's sacrifice fly to left field.

In the seventh, first baseman Pat Jaehnig ripped his second hit of the game, a clutch two-out single to left field to tie the game and Feetham scored the go-ahead run on a wild pitch.

Left fielder Jamie Chiochio and center fielder Dave Jaehnig each gunned down runners at home plate with perfect throws to catcher Steve Williams to keep the game within reach.

LEGION BASEBALL

Feetham, who had three hits including a triple, notched his second win of the season with six strikeouts. For Morrisette, Anthony Boyle pitched 6 1/3 innings, allowing four earned runs on eight hits with seven strikeouts.

In previous games for Quincy, it exploded for an 11-6 win over Canton last Friday as it pounded out 15 hits. Sandomato improved to 3-1 on the hill.

Leading the offensive attack were Thomson (4 hits, 2 doubles), Feetham (4 RBI, double, home run), Dave Jaehnig (3 hits, 3 runs), Chiochio (single, triple) and Pat Jaehnig (2 hits). Richardson executed a perfect suicide squeeze bunt to provide an insurance run.

Last Thursday, Quincy staged an improbable comeback against Braintree to eke out a 6-6 tie. Trailing 6-1, the resilient Quincy team scored a pair in the sixth inning and three runs in the seventh to shock Braintree.

Williams (2 hits) ignited the sixth-inning rally with a surprise drag bunt which scored two runs when the catcher threw wildly into right field.

In the seventh, Richardson started things off with a pinch-hit single. After a hit batsman, Dave Jaehnig ripped an RBI single up the middle. Feetham (2 hits, 2 RBI) drove in another with a double before Pat Jaehnig tied it up with a sacrifice fly to deep right field.

Dave Jaehnig saved two runs when he laid out to snag a sinking line drive in the right-center gap. Santon pitched five strong innings before giving way to Paul Capson (1 inning).

Sandomato induced a 4-6-3 double play to strand the winning run at third to preserve the tie. Drew Loud, seeing his first action since a shoulder injury during the high school season, made a nice play to turn the twin-killing.

Last Wednesday, there were some bright spots in Quincy's one-sided 10-4 loss to league power Weymouth. Thomson had three hits, including a booming shot off the fence in left-center that missed a home run by a foot.

Scott Flaherty collected his first Legion RBI with a sharp

DRAWING A FLUSH

Over time, a vehicle's cooling system performance can be degraded. Weak acids from the breakdown of antifreeze can eat away at cooling system components. In addition, using hard water in the system leaves mineral deposits that can build up and restrict the flow of coolant. That's why it is recommended that only distilled water be used. With more aluminum components being used in engines, conventional antifreeze is being formulated with phosphate and silicate additives that inhibit pitting and corrosion of aluminum. As these additives fall out of solution, they form abrasive, gel-like mixtures that restrict coolant flow, form deposits, and cause water pump seals to wear prematurely. All are good reasons to flush coolant at least every two years.

For most of your car's maintenance needs, including its cooling system, rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon.-Fri. 8am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer" and your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: The normally recommended 50/50 mixture of antifreeze and water in a vehicle's cooling system provides the best combination of heat absorption and freezing/boiling protection.

ABOUT 140 STUDENTS and several teachers participated in the recent first annual Point Middle School Great Race.

40 Students, Teachers Run Point-Webster Road Race

Point Webster Middle School recently held a one-mile road race through the neighborhood streets surrounding the school.

Organized by Scott King of the school's physical education department, the "Great Race" attracted about 40 students and several teachers. All runners received a T-shirt or other prize.

The winners for the girls were: Amanda Fonseca, first, 6:36; Kristen Simmons, second, 6:40; Sylvia Louw, third, 6:41.

The winners for the boys were: Besmir Ymeri, first, 5:21; Brian Karimi-Pashaki, second, 5:25; Maroun Matta, third, 6:04.

Fifth-grader Kyle Freeman (6:14) also ran an excellent race.

Point Webster Middle School thanks the Quincy Police Department for helping monitor the race course and for cooking hot dogs and hamburgers for all runners and volunteers.

The school also thanks the following people for their assistance: Peter Conroy, Gretha Lovejoy, Tom DiTullio, Barbara Driscoll, Becky Gordon, Amy Burns, Jim Maguire and Dan Ramondi.

Cardinals Capture Championship

The Cardinals captured the Squantum Little League championship last week with a 12-4 victory over the defending champion Royals at the Squantum School field.

Taylor Shephard, 10, pitched a complete game for the win and also batted out three hits at the plate. Lamonte Toombs blasted a home run in the sixth inning and Nick Hutchings collected a pair of hits.

The league, for children ages 8-12, is comprised of four teams, each playing a 14-game schedule in the regular season. The season opened April 25 and concluded with the double-elimination tournament. The other two teams are the Pirates and A's.

Last Saturday, the league held its awards ceremony and all-star game, featuring the top seven players from each team.

For the Cardinals, Shephard received team MVP honors. She joins Kathleen Lynch as the two girls on the Cardinals — the first team to have any girls on its roster.

Others receiving awards were: Toombs, Best Off-sive Player; Hutchings, Best Defensive Player; Kyle Roache, Rookie of the Year; John Green, Most Improved Player; and Daniel Green, Tough Guy Award.

Brian Joyce, Martin O'Neil Lead Consumer Home Mortgage

Brian Joyce and Martin O'Neil combined on a four-hitter to lead Consumer Home Mortgage to a 9-7 victory over Kenny's Lock in recent Quincy Youth Baseball Triple A action.

The loss knocked Kenny's Lock from playoff contention. CHM overcame early control problems in its season finale.

Andrew Beaton batted out four hits and O'Neil (3 runs) added a pair. Rob Bergonzi smacked a triple. Brian Killeen, Ben Strico and Joyce each had two hits and led the late-inning rally. Tom Dow turned in a great defensive game at third base.

For Kenny's Lock, Lucas Reilly and Matt Costa reached base three times. Christian Ryder played well. Masons 24, Encompass 8

Sweeney Funeral, Garden Center, Nation One Mortgage Winners

Ryan Kearney delivered the game-winning two-out, two-run single in the bottom of the sixth inning to lift Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home to a 21-20 victory over Eastern Exposures in recent St. John's Baseball action.

Trailing 16-2 after three innings, Dennis Sweeney staged a miraculous comeback with seven runs in the fourth, 10 in the fifth and the two in the sixth.

Robert Bennett (2 for 3) smashed a grand slam in the fifth inning that tied the game. Kearney went 5 for 5 with four RBI. Mike Ferris went 3 for 3 with a home run, three RBI and four runs, and Cory Woodward also went 3 for 3 with three runs.

Nick Allison, Kayla King and Julia Murphy combined for seven runs and five RBI. Christine Callahan ended the top of the sixth with a double play at first base with the bases loaded.

Donovan Flynn pitched three scoreless innings with four strikeouts. Mark Mullen struck out five in two innings and Kevin Jackson punched out the side in the sixth for Southern Artery Garden Center.

Bryan Jackson hit two doubles, drove in two runs, and he was also the middle man in a 6-4-3 double play with Drew Leahy and Steve McCormack. Flynn went 2 for 3 with a triple and two RBI. Peter Princiotta, Michael Kelly and Joshua Quigley played well defensively.

Garden Center 14 Motor Parts 5

Bryan Jackson had a big hit in the fourth inning to knock in three runs for Southern Artery Garden Center against Johnson Motor Parts. Marc Mullen, Drew Leahy and Donovan Flynn all had doubles. Roger Kinneavy walked four straight times. Ricky Long, Joe Spargo, Michael Kelly and Lucas Demoura played well defensively. Kevin Jackson fanned two in the sixth.

Garden Center 12 Reggie's Oil 7

Donovan Flynn (3 runs) and Kevin Jackson (4 RBI, triple) each went 3 for 3 to power the offense. Bryan Jackson went 2 for 3 with two RBI and two runs scored. Lucas Demoura walked twice. Michael Kelly and Marc Mullen each pitched two innings and combined for five strikeouts. Ricky Long, Joe Spargo and Roger Kinneavy played well defensively.

Nation One Mortgage 13 Family Tire/Auto 6

For Family Tire and Auto, Patrick Jenner smashed a grand slam and ripped an RBI double that scored Peter Giunta. Giunta reached base when he was hit by a pitch. Joshua Adams pitched well, escaping a bases-loaded jam. Jenner played well defensively.

Nation One Mortgage 9 A.H. Campbell 8

For A.H. Campbell and Son, Edward McDonough stroked a two-run double and Rudy Tryon lined a two-run single. Thomas Kineavy also had two RBI. Michael Litir and Tim McNally each had RBI singles. Seamus Keaveny singled and scored. Zachary Kineavy and Dave Summering pitched well.

Scott Williams Oil 12 Impressions Plus 0

A.H. Campbell 14 Gilcoine/Burke 3

Rudy Tryon stroked a two-run single and Michael Litir also had two RBI to lead A.H. Campbell. Cody Huntington ripped an RBI double and made a great play at second base. David Colletti and Tristan Sleeper (run) had RBI walks. Edward McDonough and David Summering pitched well.

Family Tire/Auto 14 A.H. Campbell 0

For A.H. Campbell, Michael Litir and Edward McDonough pitched well. Dave Summering and Cody Huntington pitched well. McDonough made a great defensive play with Zachary Kineavy. Thomas Kineavy played well.

Elm Oil 9 A.H. Campbell 8

For A.H. Campbell, Edward McDonough powered the offense with a three-run home run and Cody Huntington lined a triple. Rudy Tryon had an RBI single and pitched well. Michael Litir and Tim McNally also singled. McNally turned an unassisted double play and Mike Darcy and Dillon Darcy also made a great defensive play. David Colletti played well.

Wollaston Defeats Cedar-Grover

Senior Babe Ruth

Wollaston opened its season with a thrilling, come-from-behind 14-13 victory over Cedar Grove in recent South Shore Senior Babe Ruth action.

Wollaston, which returns 15 players from a year ago, trailed 13-7 in the top of the seventh inning before Jason Fidalgo stroked a game-winning, two-run double. Steve Reardon notched the win by pitching five innings in relief of the injured Gary Dalton.

Leading the 18-hit attack were Chris Dolbear (3 hits, 2 runs), Mike McLaughlin (2 hits, 2 runs), James Zapata (2 hits, 2 runs), George Phipps (2 hits, run) and Dan Cosgrove (2 hits, 3 runs). Andy McAllister, Rich Zapata, Chris Kirshner and Reardon each singled and scored.

Wollaston came up short in its next game, a 3-2 loss to Hanover. Ryan Conley pitched well. Kirshner had two hits and two RBI and Reardon also had a pair of hits with a run scored.

Wollaston rebounded with a 5-0 win over Hingham as Reardon tossed a three-hit shutout with seven strikeouts and no walks. Dolbear ripped a double and knocked in two runs.

Taking on undefeated South Boston, Wollaston dropped a 5-2 decision to even its record at 2-2. Southie trailed 2-1 in the sixth before it smashed a grand slam to spoil pitcher Jeff Tam's first start.

Zapata paced the offense with two hits (double) and an RBI. Mark Dondero, Reardon, Kirshner and Phipps each had a hit.

Rounding out the rest of the roster are Shawn Gibbons, Matt MacNeil, Kellan Losi, and Terance O'Connell. The coaching staff consists of Steve Reardon, Peter Delgado and Rich Zapata.

With Adams Field being renovated for the 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series, Wollaston will play all homes at Bishops Field.

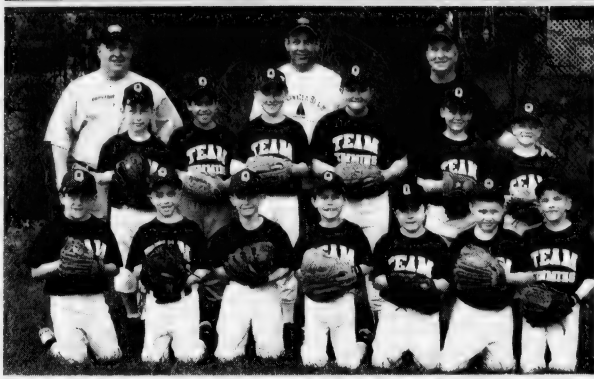

Rob Gardiner Powers Advanced Auto Glass

Rob Gardiner batted out four hits and had two RBI to lead Advanced Auto Glass to a 17-9 win over Graeber and Davis in recent Babe Ruth International League action.

Mike Dougherty had three hits and two RBI. Mike Naughton had two RBI and Brendan Marsters added two RBI and reached base three times. Andrew Creedon pitched well and drove in three runs.

For Graeber and Davis, Matt Guerriero had two hits and scored three runs. Matt Boyle smashed a triple and added an RBI. Sean Cook reached base twice and knocked in two runs.

TEAM TIMMINS captured the 2003 Quincy Youth Baseball Junior Farm Division championship this past season. Team Timmins Wins Junior Farm Title

The division is comprised of boys and girls ages 8 and 9 who played three games a week in April, May and June. All games were close, with no more than a run or two deciding the winner.

The 9-year-old veterans of the team were Adam Nazzaro, Matt Goodrich, Anthony Andronico, Jake Daly, Zack Stearns, Andrew Leone, Tyler Braun and Walter Hannon.

Nazzaro, who didn't allow a run all year while striking out many batters, earned team MVP honors.

"Adam is our dirt dog, always playing hard and never quitting," said manager

Everett Goodrich. "A multi-position player who could catch, pitch or play in the field."

Matt Goodrich helped the team with his timely hits and he broke into the rotation. Andronico played first and third and his strong arm also landed him a spot in the rotation. Daly played well in the outfield and swung a great stick.

Stearns played any position. Leone made strides all year, either making a catch or getting an important hit. Braun's strong arm earned him a spot in the rotation. Hannon helped out with the bat and glove.

Eight-year-olds Pat Gould, Dan Gould and Tommy Garland were the hearts of the team, Goodrich said. Garland saved many games as a relief pitcher. Dan Gould played first base and also pitched and Pat Gould held the infield together.

Goodrich said rookies Jack Monahan, Richard Jones, William Campbell and Quentin Harrington played well and contributed to the team.

Goodrich thanked his coaching staff, Tom Nazzaro, Paul Gould and Al Braun, league president Sandy Verhault and the league's sponsors: Egan Sunoco, Atty. Jim Timmins, South Shore Co-Op, Yellow Cab, O'Donnell Landscaping, Donovan Automotive, BZ Auto, Sean's Barber Shop, Stephen Tobin, Mr. Foley, Greg Hanley and Pat McDermott.

single to left. Brendan McDonald also had an RBI single, while rookies Matt Tobin and Mark Jaehnig received their first Legion accolade and played well defensively.

Last Monday, Quincy dropped a 3-0 decision to Milton as Feetham was outduelled by the Milton ace. Williams and Chiochio collected Quincy's only hits and Don Delgado made a great backhanded play at third base to save two runs.

On June 20, Quincy held off a scrappy Stoughton team for a 3-2 win. Sandomato earned the win without allowing a walk. Dave Jaehnig and Feetham had two hits apiece while Pat Jaehnig and Williams each belted RBI singles.

Second baseman John Fitzgerald (single) continued to be the defensive glue of the infield as he handled several tough chances flawlessly. Thomson, who has been a catalyst since moving into the leadoff spot, scored two runs on hustling base running.

In previous action for Morrisette, it dismantled Weymouth, 8-3, last Friday at home. John Folino went the distance for the win, giving up three runs on seven hits with five strikeouts.

Ahead 4-1, Morrisette put the game out of reach with a four-run fifth inning. Marchand blasted a two-run double that scored O'Hanley and Neal Gavin and Matt Tobin legged out a two-run triple that plated Hughes and Marchand.

Last Wednesday, Morrisette rallied from a 5-1 deficit to salvage a 5-5 tie at Stoughton as the game was called after 10 innings due to darkness. John O'Connell yielded five runs in nine innings with six strikeouts and Folino tossed the final inning.

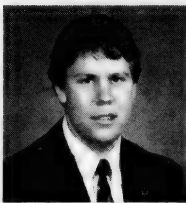

Morrisette evened the score with four runs in the fifth. Steve Priscella singled, Gregoli doubled and Joe Priscella was hit by a pitch to load the bases. O'Hanley emptied the bases with a triple and scored on Gavin's groundout to second base.

Max Wyatt Attends USRowing Junior Men's Selection Camp

Max Wyatt, grandson of Harry and Annetti Johnson of Quincy and son Helen Johnson and Tom Wyatt formerly of Quincy, is attending the USRowing Junior Men's Selection Camp at Boston University DeWolfe Rowing Center.

Wyatt was selected to the US Junior Men's National Team Selection Camp at Boston University, his mother's alma mater, who was also an instructor of women's swimming at BU while completing her undergraduate studies at the College of Communication.

The Junior Men's National Team Selection Crew Team practices on the Charles River pre-dawn and evenings, six days a week.

The head coach is Evans Liolin of USRowing. Other coaches are Colin Campbell of Peddie School, Bill Manning and Linda Muri, both of Harvard, Justin Angle of Yale, Stan Bergman of Penn, Paul Cooke and Matt Carlson, both of Brown, and John Douglas of Cornell.

The camp has 59 rowers and nine coxswains, which will be reduced to roughly 30 to race in the Independence Day Regatta July 4-6 and the Cromwell Cup July 12. The team will head to Athens for the Worlds in August under the auspices of National Rowing Foundation.

Wyatt will begin his senior year this fall at the Shawinigan Lake School near Victoria, B.C. He has won individual races and competed in the national championships with his school's crew team. He also holds an individual national record.

In between rowing and academic studies, Wyatt played the role of Jean Valjean this spring in Les Miserables.

Braintree. James Flaherty, Billy Kiley and Furey also scored. Brian McKinnis had an assist.

Quincy topped Canton, 6-5, as Campbell (assist) and Bowes each pocketed a pair of goals. Owen Kilcullen and Storella-Mullen added goals. Tommy Dow, Helfrich and Halloran collected assists.

Furey one.

Quincy dropped a 5-4 decision to Scituate despite a hat trick from Campbell. Doug Haskins added the other goal. Josh Bergin, Kyle Roach, Furey and Halloran all had assists.

Lipton Cup Regatta July 11-13 At Squantum Yacht Club

The 17th annual Lipton Cup Regatta will be held July 11-13 at the Squantum Yacht Club in Quincy.

Festivities will begin with registration Friday, July 11, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Lipton Cup Regatta will host 1,000 sailors from Canada to Florida. Classes of sailboats expected to race are: N10, Optimist, Laser, International and Club 420, One Design 14, Hustler, Thunderbird, Rhodes 19, 210, Vanguard 15 and Sunfish. A multihull event is scheduled to be run from the Bravo racing line.

The Lipton Cup trophy, originally given to Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs Association in 1930 by tea magnate Sir Thomas J. Lipton, was first awarded to Herbert Allbright, a victorious skipper of the Indian Class sailboat.

After more than 55 years of inactivity, the Lipton Cup Trophy, nearly three feet tall and Silver Victorian splendor, is once more the object of grand sailboat racing competition in the waters of Massachusetts.

Pre-registration forms are available at the Squantum Yacht Club on Wollaston Beach (617-328-9759) or by calling Don McGilvray at 617-328-5730.

American Stroke Association's 'Train To End Stroke' Marathon

The American Stroke Association is currently recruiting participants for its "Train to End Stroke" marathon training program, which combines a comprehensive five-month fitness program with the opportunity to support stroke research and education and help save lives.

Participants will have two marathons to choose from: P.F. Chang's Rock 'n' Roll Marathon in Phoenix, Ariz., or the Walt Disney Marathon in Orlando, Fla. Both races are scheduled for Jan. 11, 2004; training will begin in early August.

"Train to End Stroke" was created to raise critically needed funds for stroke research and education. Participants either run or walk a full marathon (26.2 miles) or half marathon (13.1 miles) in exchange for donations collected for stroke research.

Most participate in honor of a "Stroke Hero," someone who has experienced a stroke.

In addition, each participant who meets the fund-raising goal will receive transportation to the marathon, accommodations, training clinics and a chance to help save lives.

Throughout the course of the program, experienced coaches hold weekly training sessions and conduct clinics focusing on nutrition, footwear and injury prevention. Each participant also works with an ASA staff person who helps with their fund-raising efforts.

At the end of the five-month period, participants will feel physically healthy and prepared, as well as emotionally charged and inspired to reach their goals.

Stroke is the No. 3 killer in America and a leading cause of serious, long-term disability. In fact, about 700,000 Americans will suffer a stroke this year, and a quarter of them will die.

The American Stroke Association, a division of the American Heart Association, raises awareness to reduce disability and death from stroke. In fiscal year 2001-02, the association spent almost $131 million on stroke-related research and programs.

For more information on the "Train to End Stroke" program, potential participants can call Zack Blackburn at the American Stroke Association at 508-620-1700 or visit www.StrokeAssociation.org. They may also attend a free information session July 17 at 6:30 p.m. at Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy.

Free Eye Care Available For Qualified Seniors

Risk Of Stroke Increases With Age

(NAPS)—Most boomers are quickly reaching age 55 where, according to the NHLBI's Framingham Heart Study, their risk of stroke will begin to double with each successive decade.

In the recent American Stroke Association survey, when participants were asked, "when does your risk of stroke increase?" many said an age greater than their own. More importantly, they were not worried about stroke as a health threat in general.

For more information, call the American Stroke Association at 1-888-4-STROKE or visit StrokeAssociation.org. The site lets visitors fill out a confidential risk assessment and learn more about risk factors, solutions and resources.

Today at least one-third of Americans 65 or over have some form of vision-impairing eye disease and may experience no symptoms, according to the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

To ensure that income is not a barrier to adequate prevention and treatment of eye disease, more than 7,500 volunteer ophthalmologists nationwide provide medical eye exams at no out-of-pocket expense to qualified seniors.

Seniors or family members can call the toll-free helpline at 1-800-222-EYES (3937) for free information or to be referred to one of the eye care programs offered by EyeCare America, a public service foundation of the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

DENTISTRY

for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

UNSAFE IN ANY FORM

Let anyone think that switching from cigarettes to smokeless tobacco helps avoid the risk of cancer, let's look at the facts. Like cigars and cigarettes, smokeless tobacco products contain a variety of toxins associated with cancer. At least 28 cancer-causing chemicals have been identified in smokeless tobacco products. Signs of oral cancer include soft tissue irritation or a sore throat that will not heal; pain or tenderness anywhere in the mouth; a lump or bumpy patch inside the mouth; color changes in the oral soft tissues that deviate from a healthy pink color; and difficulty chewing, swallowing, or moving the jaw. Smokeless tobacco can also irritate gum tissue, causing it to recede from teeth, increasing the risk for tooth decay.

Please don't use any kind of tobacco. We offer high quality dentistry for all family members. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals, thoroughly trained, skillful, and sensitive to your individual needs. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our goal is to make each visit a comfortable and positive experience. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Even if you do not inhale cigar smoke, you are still at risk for oral and pharyngeal (throat) cancers.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Through the years the success of the American Revolution has been an inspiration to struggles against tyranny worldwide.

But the primary significance of the Fourth of July is for the American people themselves.

The Proclamation of Independence of July 4, 1776, translated our forebears from being subject of a royal majesty into being free citizens of a nation that they themselves had created...

Citizenship is an active, not a passive condition. Citizenship carries with it responsibilities, as well as rights and privileges... Unfortunately, too many Americans are content to allow others to exercise the responsibilities of citizenship for them, taking but passing interest in the decisions being made locally and nationally for them.

On this Fourth of July, let us all breathe a solemn vow to commit ourselves to active, rather than passive, citizenship.

Let us remember that apathy is democracy's greatest enemy, and can do more to unravel our liberties than whole battalions of invading troops...

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Before you adventurous Arians charge right into those new projects, take a little time to learn where you'll be going so you can avoid getting lost before you get there.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your time is devoted to career demands through much of the week. But Venus, who rules your sign, might be planning how (and with whom) you'll spend your weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Don't be put off by the surprising turn in the way your project is developing. You've invested enough time in it to know how to make all the necessary adjustments.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The workweek goes smoothly for the most part. But a weekend visit to a place in your past could hold surprises for your future, especially where romance is involved.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A sudden attack of shyness for the usually loquacious Lion could be a sign that deep down you're not sure enough about what (or whom) you had planned to talk up in public.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Deal with that job-related problem on-site — that is, at the workplace. Avoid taking it home, where it can spoil those important personal plans you've made.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's a good time to let those favorable comments about your business dealings be known to those in a position to be helpful. Don't hide your light; let it shine.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Avoid added pressure to finish a project on deadline by steering clear of distractions. To put it somewhat poetically: Time for fun — when your tasks are done.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be uneasy about an offer from a longtime colleague. But before you reject it, study it. You might be surprised at what it actually contains.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Deal firmly with a difficult family matter. It's your strength they need right now. You can show your emotions when the situation begins to ease up.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A recent dispute with some co-workers might not have been completely resolved. But other colleagues will be only too happy to offer support of your actions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Let go of that PISCES pride long enough to allow someone to help you with a surprising development. That could make it easier for you to adjust to the change.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your willingness to open up to possibilities is why people like you are often among our most popular political leaders.

Brighton Captures Irish Emigrant Soccer Cup

The Irish Village of Brighton captured the recent seventh annual Irish Emigrant Cup of New England at Varsity Field with a victory over an old nemesis.

Having dropped the previous four soccer championships to the Quincy Bohemians, Irish Village topped them in a shootout, 4-2, after a scoreless tie in regulation — for their first trophy.

Irish Village goalkeeper Matt Caffelle stepped up in the shootout, saving the first kick he faced from Bohemians captain Kieran O'Brien. Quincy's fourth shot hit the post.

Jim Kane 5-Mile Road Race July 24

The L Street Running Club announces there will be a new award handed out at the annual Jim Kane Sugarbowl 5 Mile to be held July 24.

The club will remember a longtime member, the late Paul Harold of Quincy, through the presentation of the Paul D. Harold Award given to the first Quincy resident to cross the finish line.

An avid runner and Quincy politician, Harold died last August from stomach cancer. He was honored posthumously as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year for 2002. His political career spanned 28 years served as Quincy city councillor, council president, state senator and Norfolk County register of deeds.

"This is a small token of appreciation to a man who loved the sport of running and who contributed so much to the success of the Jim Kane Sugarbowl 5 Miler," said John McDermott, club president.

The club encourages

Quincy residents to run and join in the tribute to Harold.

The race features a fast, flat course and is organized by a team of over 400 race knowledgeable and enthusiastic volunteers.

A Runners Expo will be held prior to the race open to all registered runners and family members.

The race benefits many charities, including Father Bill's Place in Quincy, Boys and Girls Clubs, The South Boston Collaborative, Children's Hospital, programs for the homeless, The Curley Recreation Center, Christmas baskets for the needy and more.

Race applications are available at the Dairy Freeze ice cream shop, 635 Adams St.; McGinns Cigo, 627 Newport Ave.; Village Photo, 304 Victory Road; and The Erie Pub, Dorchester. They're also available by calling 781-335-5121 or visiting www.lstreet.org.

Race day registration will begin at 4:30 p.m. at the Bayside Expo Center and the race will officially start at 6:30 p.m.

Coffee Hour For Leo Kelly July 8

A coffee hour for Leo Kelly, candidate for Ward 1 city councillor, will be held Tuesday, July 8, at 6 p.m. at the Harborview Residents Committee office, 12 Figurehead Lane.

The event is being sponsored by the Harborview Residents Committee.

assisted in bringing about needed change in several areas," she said.

She noted in particular that there is now better communication between the Special Education Parent Advisory Committee and the school committee.

Her decision not to run is expected to open up the field of candidates for school committee this year.

There are five candidates now.

Incumbent Linda Stice is seeking her fourth term.

Elaine Dwyer, who was elected by a joint convention of the city council and school committee to fill the seat vacated by William Phelan after being elected mayor, is running for that seat this year.

The three other school committee candidates at this time are Brian Buckley, Ronald Iacobucci and Stephen Golden.

There will be a preliminary election Sept. 16 if there are seven or more candidates.

service agencies and organizations in the city.

Gillespie said he was "amazed" at the number of social service organizations in the city.

"The City of Quincy is our brother's keeper," he told residents.

Portesi agreed: "It's not that people don't have compassion for others, but there seems to be too many social service agencies in one area. I believe these agencies and organizations need to compile statistics and information about the people that use their services. Do these people live in Quincy or do they come from out of town?"

Councillor Frank McCauley and Joe Keegan, candidate for the Ward 1 city council seat, attended the meeting.

Downtown residents or business owners may contact Haynes on his cell phone at 617-839-9355.

The next Crime Watch meeting has been scheduled for August 6.

City of Quincy, Massachusetts Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy!

Quincy has played a unique role in the formation of our great country—and we continue to play that role today! The Massachusetts Declaration of Rights, the model for the United States Constitution, was drafted in our historic city by John Adams, the second president of the United States and father to John Quincy Adams, our country's sixth president. Patriots, statesmen and women of science and of letters—Quincy has nurtured many of the seminal figures that brought our nation to greatness.

I encourage you to use this fine publication as a guide to historic Quincy. Visit the Adams National Historical Park and the presidential homesteads. Stop by the "Old House" and experience the colonial lifestyle. Tour United First Parish Church, which serves as the final resting place for John, John Quincy, Abigail, and Louisa Catherine Adams. Live the history of our City and of our nation.

Don't neglect to enjoy what Quincy has to offer today. Quincy is nestled between the Blue Hills Reservation and the Atlantic Ocean. Enjoy our twenty-seven miles of coastland, natural salt marshes and magnificent parklands. Explore our downtown, watch our outdoor concerts, play golf, or enjoy Quincy's booming restaurant scene. There is something for everyone to enjoy.

We are proud of Quincy and hope that you have the opportunity to experience all that our historical and cosmopolitan City has to offer.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. PHELAN
MAYOR

The Adams Cottages

First Father - Son Presidents Born Here

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands on the gently rolling hills some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and cordwainer, and his wife, Susanna, 26.

Their home was a weathered gray farmhouse with a high peaked roof and attached lean-to kitchen set on seven acres of farmland at roughly Milepost 11 of the Coast Road, just where it turned up the wooded slopes of Penn's Hill toward the Monaquot River ford.

He was a pillar of his rural community. Mr. Adams was a deacon in the First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia and a town constable with a forceful personality and tact that enabled him to collect taxes from his neighbors.

He was a hard-working farmer whose cider was acknowledged best in town, he worked in leather during the winter months, and he had an eye on an adjoining piece of farmland, 9 1/2 acres owned by the Billings brothers, complete with a farmhouse similar to his own.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston of Brookline, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735. (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the sixth president of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001, John Adams and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that office. George H. W. Bush was the 41st. The Harrisons, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

THE ADAMS BIRTHPLACES, where John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, the second and sixth Presidents of the United States, were born, is the only location in the country where two presidential birthplaces stand side-by-side. It is a National Historical Site under the supervision of the U.S. National Park Service.

The precise age of the two cottages at 133 and 141 Franklin St. at the foot of Penn's Hill is not known.

When the John Adams Birthplace was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner, and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace as early as 1663, when it was little more than a one-room shack with fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service in 1979.

What do Thomas Morton, John and Abigail Adams, Howard Johnson, John Hancock, Lee Remick, Francis Parker, Ruth Gordon, Squanto, John Cheever, Henry Beston, the Bunker Hill Monument, Myles Standish, modern railroads, Anne Hutchinson and America's most famous warships have in common?

He Wanted To Paint It White But John Adams Birthplace Has Original Look

The birthplace of John Adams, second president of the United States, looks like it did when he and his family lived there. Deacon John and Abigail Adams lived there.

It was a state of affairs that, after a partial restoration, is now on display in the 1980s.

Visitors to the John Adams Birthplace, which preserves the structure of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace on Franklin St. South Quincy, can now see more than 100 years of the birthplace.

The house is well furnished and looks like it did when John and Abigail lived in it.

The birthplace was built in the late 17th or early 18th Century for less than $1,000 in the pounds of the day and the cabinetry was hand hewn from trees that grew in its fields.

The house is a testament to the power of John and his wife and is a testament to the fact that John Adams was a man who preferred it white.

John Adams, 80 years old, was the first to paint the house at the foot of Penn's Hill. But research turned up the fact that Abigail Adams, the wife of the second president, wanted them stone and white.

Since what Abigail wanted, Abigail usually got in the summer of 1980, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the stone color determined to be a sort of off white, mixed especially for the occasion from a late 18th Century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white so that both houses would look as they did in 1807, the year the last Adams lived in them, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The birthplace, parts of which date back to the 17th Century, were taken over by the National Park Service on May 1, 1979 after years of semi neglect due to lack of restoration and maintenance funds.

The John Quincy Adams Birthplace reopened in 1982 for the first time in three years after undergoing a $175,000 rehabilitation faithful to the lives of the prominent family that lived there.

If you close your eyes and give your imagination full rein you can see them now as they were more than 200 years ago.

There is Abigail Adams in the new pink gingham dress. There is the curly haired infant, Thomas Bowdoin Adams, bouncing on his father's knee. And there is John Adams, home from the Continental Congress in Philadelphia for the first time in a year, sitting at the table and drinking a cup of tea.

The setting, right down to the pewter plates and candlesticks, is reproduced faithfully in the corner room of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace.

The furnishings of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace are precise reproductions of those that were in the house when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historic Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution, on which the U.S. Constitution was modeled.

The law office is furnished pretty much as John Adams had it.

There is the hutch table on which he wrote the State Constitution, the book case filled with books that probably were there in John Adams' day, judging by an inventory of his law library, his old writing desk and two chairs that were copied from those in his second law office in Boston.

Pastels of Abigail and John, originally done in Salem, were photographically reproduced by photographer George Dove and now hang in Abigail's sitting room. The originals are in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Abigail's old kitchen cabinet was discovered serving as a bookcase in the Old House.

The cabinet was reproduced and installed in the kitchen of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace along with copies of the blue china that John purchased when he was emissary to Holland.

The Adams Birthplaces are at 133 and 141 Franklin St. They are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $3 for adults and children over age 16, which also includes admission to the Adams Mansion within seven days. Park passes are available. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors' Center, 1250 Hancock St. Last full tour leaves Visitors' Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

From our origins as a town that was home to great American Patriots like John Hancock, Abigail Adams, John and John Quincy Adams, to the promise of our youngest citizens today, Quincy is proud of its contributions to America. Nearly every period of American History bears the mark of Quincy. Distinguished public servants in government, the military, education and business have called Quincy their home.

Names like Actresses Lee Remick and Ruth Gordon; entrepreneur Howard Johnson; and the exceptional men and women of the Fore River Shipyard are found among the pages of history books. Quincy granite cuts and carved by immigrants to our city bear testimony to the richness of the American Dream.

All who visit our city take pleasure in our vast coastline, our immense historical and cultural resources, and the beauty of our neighborhoods. Close enough to Boston to make a commute reasonable... far enough away to preserve the suburban charm; Quincy is a memorable stop for any traveler.

Realizing the great promise of the future is the primary concern of the Quincy City Council. Together, representing every neighborhood and constituency, our council deliberates the important issues of the day and strives to enhance and sustain the quality of life for all Quincy residents.

Welcome to our great city.

Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Joshua Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

It being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, be the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest, and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent.

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public men was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tuffs of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct if Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historic Site.

TOMBS OF PRESIDENTS John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa in First Parish Church.

United First Parish Church, 'Church Of The Presidents' Where 2 Presidents, Their Wives Are Entombed

In 1792, when the present First Parish church was built, the Old Stone Church was 141 years old. It was built by the same group that the church's oldest members had built in 1639, when before it was known as the late first man William Brewster, the church was called up to the name of the first president, that involved the building of the church in the church of the late first man.

When the first settlers of the country, who had built the church, there was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56—which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

An active Unitarian Universalist Church, it is open to the public for tours daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, Sunday from 12 noon to 5 p.m., mid-April to mid-November. Admission is $3; under 16 are admitted free. For further information, call 773-0062.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see." Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it "Quin-zee," including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-zee."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

First Wife, Mother Of Two Presidents

Abigail Adams: A Woman Ahead Of Her Time

What do Barbara Bush and Abigail Adams have in common?

Both are noted for being the wife of one president and the mother of another.

Barbara's husband, George W., was the 41st president from 1989 to 1993 and her son, George H. W., is the 43rd president who moved into the White House in 2001 and is still there.

Abigail's husband, John, was the second president from 1797 to 1801 and her son, John Quincy, the sixth president from 1825 to 1829.

And her grandson, Charles Francis Adams, ran unsuccessfully for vice president on the Free Soil ticket in 1848.

Their husbands share another distinction, too. John was in the section of Braintree now known as Quincy. George H. W. was born in Milton, the next town over.

But this is Abigail's story.

An early advocate of women's rights, the former Abigail Smith wrote to her husband, John, who was in Philadelphia helping his fellow Founding Fathers hammer out a Constitution for the new republic.

ABIGAIL ADAMS

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors."

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

Sadly, unlike Barbara Bush, Abigail Adams did not live to see her son become president. She died in her 74th year, Oct. 28, 1818, seven years before he entered the White House.

Although she is traditionally remembered as the wife of one president and the mother of another, Abigail was more than that.

She was a remarkable woman in her own right and one ahead of her time.

Born in neighboring Weymouth Nov. 11, 1744, the daughter of the Rev. William Smith, a Congregational minister, and his wife, Elizabeth Quincy Smith, she had no formal schooling.

But through tutoring by her father and mother and reading, she became a well-known writer of letters that have served to chronicle American history.

She was a brave and resourceful woman, too. She was often left alone for long periods of time to care for her children and run the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill while her husband was away in the service of their fledgling country.

Early in their marriage, he was in France trying to develop strong ties with that country and she sailed to meet him in Paris. They had not seen one another in five years.

John and Abigail Adams were the first president and first lady to occupy the White House. When Adams took office, succeeding George Washington on March 4, 1797, Philadelphia was the nation's capital. John and Abigail moved into the White House in November, 1800. It was called the President's Palace at the time.

No fancy airs about her. She won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room. She was just being practical. Many of the rooms had not been finished when they moved in and the East Room was one of the warmer ones, better for drying wet clothing.

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the man who succeeded him as president, were close friends who worked together to produce the precious Declaration of Independence. But they had a falling out and became political enemies.

When Jefferson defeated Adams in his bid for reelection to a second term, Adams was so bitter that he refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inauguration in 1801 and came home to Quincy.

Abigail became a peacemaker through letters to Jefferson and, thanks to her efforts, the two former presidents reconciled in their later years.

Both succumbed July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

John and Abigail were married 54 years and it was a happy union despite frequent and long separations in the early years.

Abigail was the woman behind two men — a husband and son — who encouraged and helped them in their distinguished service to their country on their way to the Presidency.

She and her husband, son and daughter-in-law, Louisa Catherine, are entombed in the crypt in the United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue depicting Abigail at about age 32 and John Quincy at age 10 with her hand on his shoulder in a motherly touch, was erected in 1997 just a few feet away.

The very spot from which she now looks out onto Quincy Square is where she walked when the area was an open field.

A Mother's Advice

Abigail Adams had this motherly advice for her son, John Quincy Adams, the future sixth president, in a letter written to him when he was 10 years old and in Europe with his father, John Adams, who was on a diplomatic mission:

"Improve your understanding for acquiring useful (sic) knowledge and virtue, such as will render you an ornament to society, an Honour to your Country, and a Blessing to Your parents.

Your affectionate Mother
AA"

ABIGAIL ADAMS and her son, John Quincy Adams -- the future sixth President of the United States -- look out over Quincy Square from beside historic First Parish Church. The handsome bronze statue depicts her at about age 32 and him as a 10-year-old boy. It was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and created by noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie. Quincy's Granite Was Famed The World Over

There are just holes in the ground now, attractive and perilous nuisances that, over the years, have filled with water and lured swimmers to their doom, unaware of the dangers that lie in the cool green depths.

But there was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the Quincy granite quarries swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Ipswich, the granite industry in Quincy just grew.

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Common to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries, and in one of them, Jonathan Swingle's quarry, men dug for granite at a depth of 345 feet below the surface.

The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purpose. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped; other times it served as a fort in case of an Indian attack.

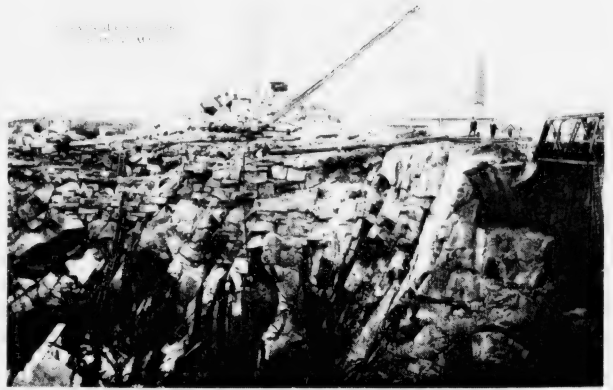

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an exact science in those days.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

SWINGLE'S QUARRY in West Quincy, which eventually reached a depth of 345 feet below ground, was one of more than 30 in operation at the height of the Quincy granite boom some 100 years ago.

(From the Collection of Tom Galvin)

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for obtaining and working the stone.

The new method of transportation, devised by Gridley Bryant, involved the construction of the first commercial railroad in the United States to carry stone from the quarry to the Neponset River.

Willard's inventions and new methods inaugurated what is known as "the Stone Age" of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry flourished along with it.

Quincy granite, known for its durability and its ability to take a high polish, was shipped all over the world under the trade names "Quincy Light," "Quincy Dark," and "Quincy Extra Dark."

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Swingle's, went out of business in 1963.

Thank you for making our community a better place to live.

Thomas Crane Public Library A Romanesque Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, came to come manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutting trade, and left at the age of 26 to seek fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century. Then one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial, preferable a library, to his father.

Mr. father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy, was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestley, and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to your ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's owned the building?" asked Albert Crane.

"You are, but you wouldn't have it if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1938.

A new $18 million addition that almost doubled the size of the existing library was completed in the spring of 2001 with money from the Crane endowment used to purchase the property and the rest paid for with a city bond issue.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. It is closed on Saturdays and Sundays during July and August.

At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

John Hancock's Declaration Of Love

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road, on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with its blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and, at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third. (There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line; two nephews.)

The house was the social center of old

Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British regulars on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later Vice President of the United States) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial

John Quincy Adams:

The Old Flame Still Burned

The old man's bitterness glowed from every word as he penned them in his diary on June 17, 1843, the day the Bunker Hill Monument was dedicated.

"What a name in the annals of mankind is Bunker Hill! What a day was the 17th of June, 1775! And what a burlesque upon them both is an oration upon them by Daniel Webster!"

The old man despised Webster as a turncoat to his own heritage, one whose compromises had sold out to slavery.

"The ideal associations thundering cannon, which I heard, and the smoke of burning Charlestown, which I saw, on that awful day... How could I have witnessed all this at once, without an unbecoming burst of indignation."

"Daniel Webster is a heartless traitor to the cause of freedom: John Tyler [the

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

President] is a slave-monger. What have these to do with the Quincy granite pyramid on the brow of Bunker Hill?

"I stayed home..."

The old flame still burned in John Quincy Adams at 75.

Quincy Was Almost Hancock

If some of the early settlers had their way, you would be living in the city of Hancock today instead of the city of Quincy.

Quincy, like George Washington, was born on Feb. 22.

On Feb. 22, 1792, the General Court of Massachusetts passed an act incorporating the North Precinct of Old Braintree as the separate town of Quincy.

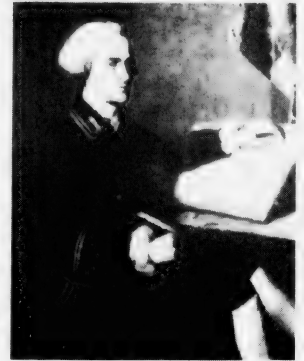

But, just before that, quite a few of the residents wanted the new town named after native son John Hancock instead of Boston born Colonel John Quincy.

Colonel Quincy, who had represented Old Braintree in the General Court, was the great grandfather of President John Quincy Adams.

Many people today think Quincy was named after the sixth President but the honor actually goes to his great-grandfather.

John Hancock, who was born in the North Precinct, was governor of Massachusetts when the General Court passed the act incorporating the new town as Quincy. He signed the act the following day.

But at the first town meeting of the new town in May, a petition was presented to change the name from Quincy to Hancock in honor of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The move was finally defeated after a stormy verbal battle.

JOHN HANCOCK

Opponents argued that Hancock was still alive and that the honor should go to a distinguished-but-deceased-person.

Colonel Quincy met those requirements. He was both distinguished and deceased.

He had represented Old Braintree in the General Court from 1717 to 1741, 12 of those years as Speaker of the House. He died in 1767 at age 77, two days after John Quincy Adams was born.

Quincy became a city June 11, 1888.

But a lot of people will go right on thinking Quincy was named after John Quincy Adams.

“ This community is a great place to live. To be a part of it makes me happy because I see so many positive movements and potential to help and continue to change people’s lives for the best. ”

City Named For Him But: Col. John Quincy Something Of A Mystery Man

Few men have served the public good longer or as well as Col. John Quincy. He was Speaker of the Massachusetts House, a governor's councillor, a selectman and perennial moderator of the town meeting in Old Braintree, commander of the local militia regiment and guardian of the rights of the few Ponkapoag Indians who survived the plague.

And through his granddaughter, Abigail Adams, nee Smith, he was the grandfather-in-law of the second president of the United States and the great grandfather of the sixth.

Small wonder then, that when the North Precinct broke away from Old Braintree in 1792 they named the new town "Quincy."

Col. John Quincy is something of a mystery man, even in the city that bears his name. It is not known for sure when he came to Old Braintree. Nor is there a picture of him extant or even a physical description of him in the words that have been left to us by his contemporaries.

During celebration in Quincy in 1908, the main speaker, the Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson, noted that "in his day, he was one of the most trusted and influential public characters of the province; but for a hundred years or more, he has now been buried in oblivion.

"For example, I once mentioned John Quincy to a lifelong resident, a man of affairs and influence in the town. The response was: 'John Quincy? John Quincy? I never heard of him before!' Another in the group then exclaimed: 'You mean John Quincy Adams, don't you?'"

John Quincy was born in Boston. His father, Daniel, died when he was a year old and his widowed mother, Anna, married the Rev. Moses Fiske, minister of the First Parish Church in Braintree.

He graduated from Harvard in 1708, obtained a master's degree in 1711 and inherited, through his mother, a good-sized farm in Mount Wollaston and lived there for the rest of his life.

John Quincy's rise in public life was meteoric.

He married Elizabeth Norton, the daughter of a Hingham minister, in 1715 and was named justice of the peace the same year, moderator of the town meeting a year later and began 22 years of service in the House a year after that. He was Speaker of the House for 12 years, starting in 1729.

MONUMENT was placed on Col. John Quincy's grave in the Hancock Cemetery by the Quincy Historical Society in 1904. Plaque reads: 'Here was buried Col. John Quincy of Mount Wollaston 1689-1767 from whom Quincy was named.' His gravestone itself is at the lower right.

In 1741, he was manipulated out of his posts as commander of the Suffolk militia regiment by a wealthy Boston lawyer named Joseph Gooch, who is described by some as an "opportunist," and by others as an "unsavory demagogue."

Gooch arrived in Old Braintree determined to launch a political career. Beer and cider, supplied by Gooch, flowed freely in the taverns. The strategy prevailed and Quincy was dismissed as militia commander.

But his banishment was short-lived. Captains and lieutenants refused to serve under Gooch. They would serve only under Quincy. Demoralized, the people of Braintree turned Gooch out and returned

Quincy's reputation was such that he was named by the legislature to be trustee of the funds of the Ponkapoag Indians, survivors of a devastating plague. He held the post for 20 years at the insistence of the Indians themselves.

Whenever there was a civic job to be done, it was the practice of the people of Old Braintree to appoint Col. John Quincy to do it. Thus it was that he was called on to chair the committee that first recommended the North Precinct become a separate town. That was in 1728.

It took 64 years but finally it was done and, when it was, they named it for John Quincy.

JOSIAH QUINCY HOUSE in Wollaston recently underwent a paint job from yellow to beige to reflect more accurately how the house, a National Historic Landmark, looked in the 1880s when historian Eliza Susan Quincy began to organize historical information on the house.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists. Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775. General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquilla" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a conversion to beige to more accurately reflect how it looked in the 1880s when another Eliza Susan Quincy, a historian, began to chronicle information pertaining to the house and family.

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a museum of Quincy family history. Her work initiated the process that led to the preservation of the house by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA).

The Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, is open to the public by appointment June 1 to Oct. 15. Appointments may be made by calling 617-227-3957, Ext. 256. Admission is $3 for adults, $2.50 for children under 12 and $2 for seniors. Children 5 and younger are admitted free. All Quincy residents and SPNEA members are admitted free.

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot?"

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin Street) meets Viden Road atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

Adams Academy

On Site Of John Hancock's Birthplace

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a mental prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his cheek to the wind in the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets, site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body: 25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes wispish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did. On June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop.

The museum and gift shop are open all year, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call 617-773-1144 for weekend hours. The library is open Monday and Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon, Friday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Other times by appointment. It is closed Sunday and holidays.

Hancock Cemetery

Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Buried Here

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-Workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs: a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out. Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simple a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free, He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and ever'd all in a breath.

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death.

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die.

"Blest they who will arrive eternally.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

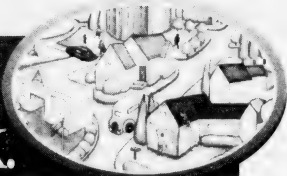

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Sq., next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

The Granite Railway First Commerical Railroad In U.S.

It was the damdest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three times to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite business, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolous, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood carver, turned stone carver and, finally, architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

City Hall Seat Of Government For 159 Years

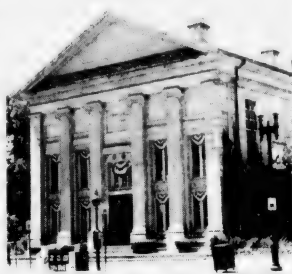

Daniel and Hannah French decided the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 159 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard — who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months — the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a three and a half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution, which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office at the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He had arrived home only seven days before on the French frigate La Sensible after nearly 18 months in Paris helping to negotiate a commercial and military alliance with France. He was in such a rush to get home that he apparently landed the day before La Sensible reached Boston by rowing ashore from Nantasket Roads.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terrible, and she him.

One was angry, another was full of grief, and the third with melancholy, so that I burnt them all," he wrote to her from Passy on Dec. 18, 1778, listing his complaints with her most recent letters. "If you write me in this style I shall leave of writing intirely, it kills me.

"Am I not wretched Enough, in this Banishment, without this? What Course shall I take to convince you that my Heart is warm? I beg you would never more write to me in such a strain for it really makes me unhappy.

"How lonely are my days?" she wrote on a Sunday evening, Dec. 27. "How solitary are my Nights? How insupportable the idea that 3000 leagues, and the vast ocean now divide us—but divide only our persons for the Heart of my Friend is in the Bosom of his partner.

Somewhere on the vast ocean the two letters passed each other.

Paris and the dissolute court of Louis XVI held small appeal to the Puritan in John Adams, even when his closest everyday companions were Dr. Benjamin Franklin, still with an eye for the ladies at age 73, and the swashbuckling Capt. John Paul Jones, half patriot, half pirate, who had just taken command of the leaky old East Indiaman he had renamed Bon Homme Richard.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant, butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound, flour, five dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

"I cannot avoid sometimes repining that the gifts of fortune were not bestowed upon us, that I might have enjoyed the happiness of spending my days with my partner," she wrote, "but as it is, I think it my duty to attend with frugality and economy to our own private affairs; and if I cannot add to our little substance, yet see to it that it is not diminished."

She abstained from drinking black market tea, allowing herself one tiny complaint: "I should like a little green (tea), but they say there is none to be had here. I only wish it for a medicine, as a relief to a nervous pain in my head to which I am sometimes subject."

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams, and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

First Iron Works Steel Industry Born Here In 1644

It failed after nine years of effort and since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River in a section of Old Braintree called "the Woods." It left its name on the river, now Furnace Brook in West Quincy.

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Unfortunately, iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the pennywise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony (Did someone cry nepotism?), went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworks in New England." He, of course, became the local agent.

The Company gave Winthrop a thousand pounds of capital and a work crew of indentured servants, many of whom ran away when they heard they were going to the wilds of America. Jail was better than that!

When, after a search from Maine to Plymouth, he decided to locate in Quincy, Winthrop was also granted 3,000 acres of land, with subsidiary land rights elsewhere in the colony, and a 21-year monopoly.

The operation was deemed of such importance that the iron workers were given exemption from militia duty, this at a time when war was imminent with the Narragansett Indians and with Ninigret, the sachem of the Niantics.

The first iron was turned out in 1644, but young Winthrop was fired the next year to be succeeded by Richard Leader. It is interesting to note that one of America's earliest magnates toiled for a salary of 100 pounds a year.

The ore from which iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook came from the swamps and bogs. It was not a high quality product. Water power from a dam thrown across the brook was inadequate. Quincy iron ore proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II, who were captured in the Battle of Dunbar. They suffered the fate common to most 17th Century prisoners of war.

Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England, cheap labor in an effort to make Quincy's iron works a paying proposition. It didn't work. The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works in Saugus on the North Shore of Boston in 1646. When it was completed in 1650 it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

The remains of the John Winthrop Jr. Blast Furnace are located in Hall Cemetery on Crescent Street, West Quincy. The site is open free to the public.

Quincy Medical Center Has Proud History

Less than two months after the City Hospital of Quincy was dedicated, the middle of its staff of 12 doctors and a like number of nurses was tested to the limit and beyond.

It passed with flying colors. A passenger train from Woods Hole to Boston with 391 aboard, most of them summer tourists, was derailed at the Dimmock Street bridge behind Adams Academic on the hospital's very doorstep.

A total of 23 passengers were killed and 30 injured.

All the doctors and nurses at the hospital responded and, by the time requested medical and ambulance arrived, the injured patients had things under control.

The hospital was founded by a group of doctors led by Dr. John A. Gordon, who was concerned about ailments among patients and doctors who inhaled dust particles while at their work.

It was a private cottage hospital at first, founded in 1888 with 25 beds, incorporated a year later, and dedicated June 17, 1890 on three and a half acres of land donated by William B. Rice.

From that unimpressive start, like Topsy, it just grew.

A two-year training program for nurses was started as well as an emergency room and an ambulance service. Beds for pediatric and maternity patients and departments of social services and physical therapy were added.

Demand on the hospital proved to be so great during World War I that it had to be taken over by the city and, on March 1, 1919, it became Quincy City Hospital.

A medical-surgical building was added and it became the first hospital south of Boston to have an EKG machine and the first community hospital to receive approval for magnetic resonance imaging.

TODAY'S QUINCY MEDICAL Center began as a private cottage hospital in 1888 with 25 beds. It is now a 282-bed community-teaching hospital.

USS SALEM

Centerpiece Of U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum

USS Salem: A New Tourist Attraction

The heavy cruiser USS Salem, ordered during World War II but built after hostilities had ceased at Bethlehem's Fore River Shipyard, is Quincy's newest attraction for visitors and residents alike.

Launched in 1947 and commissioned two years later, she became the flagship of the U. S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

At more than 700 feet in length and carrying the heaviest automatic main battery guns in any warship of any navy, she was a bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and the Caribbean Seas.

Although she never faced enemy action, Salem earned the praise of the king and queen of Greece for its work as the first ship on the scene after an earthquake ravaged the Greek islands.

And she was on hand at the Suez Canal when fighting broke out between Israel and Egypt to assure the safe passage of American and other ships through the canal.

She carried a crew of more than 1,600 men and moved at a cruising speed of 35 knots. She was on active duty for 10 years from commissioning May 14, 1949 to decommissioning Jan. 30, 1959.

Today, visitors can tour the Main Deck,

Number 3 Turret, the Admiral's and Captain's Bridges, and other sources of interest.

Guided tours by today's uniformed crew will take guests through the Second Deck where they can see how the Salem's crew lived and worked.

Of special note are the barber shop and the machine shops where the actual work is done to restore the ship.

Real sailors will want to see the CIC (Combat Information Center), the nerve center of the ship and her berthing compartments, where sailors and Marines lived their lives.

A Museum Shop is on board in the ship's store where souvenirs and gifts can be purchased.

The museum's archives are open for research and viewing its extensive collection of armaments, uniforms, and memorabilia.

The USS Salem and its Naval Shipbuilding Museum are located at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. (Access is the same as the Harbor Express boat). Hours of operation (escorted and self-guided tours): Summer: Open daily June through September, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Winter: Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is $6 for adults, $4 for senior citizens and children 4-12 years old. Children under age 4 are admitted free of charge. Active military adults with ID cards are also admitted free. Flat-heeled shoes or sneakers are recommended. Parking is free. The museum features a military archive, model shop and exhibits on the USS Salem, the USS St. Paul, the USS Newport News and the USS Quincy.

Neighbors Had A Nickname Duchess Of Windsor A Former Resident

No, the Duchess of Windsor was not a Quincy girl but she lived here for a time long before King Edward VIII gave up the British throne for the woman Howe.

She lived in Wollaston in 1917 while she was married to her first husband, a young lieutenant stationed at a Naval air school in Squantum, which later became the Squantum Naval Air Station.

The Massachusetts Naval Militiaman tamed a training field in what is now the Marine Barracks, which was taken over by the First Naval District as a training area for its fleet of new land and airplanes.

Assigned as commander of the station was Lt. John W. Standish.

He was married to the former Wallis Warfield, the Baltimore belle who later, as a free, married woman, became the Duchess of Windsor when she wed the king who abdicated his throne for her love.

The marriage ended off a crisis in English society. Some thought the king should be allowed to marry her and keep his title as king as she did not become queen. But stronger opposition prevailed and he stepped down.

They were married June 3, 1937. While living in Quincy, Mr. and Mrs.

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR

Spencer resided in a second floor apartment on Davis Street in Wollaston.

Legend has it that her neighbors in 1917 thought she was somewhat stuck up and snobbish.

In fact, they nicknamed her "the Duchess."

THE MYLES STANDISH Cairn, erected in 1895, in the Squaw Rock area of Squantum commemorates his visit here Sept. 30, 1621. He was guided across the bay by Tisquantum or Squanto who became the early settlers' friend. Squantum was named after him.

Descent from John & Priscilla

John Adams, the second president, can trace his ancestry back to John Alden and Priscilla Mullins of "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?" fame.

His grandfather, Joseph Adams, married Hannah Bass, daughter of John and Ruth (Alden) Bass and granddaughter of the Pilgrim couple John and Priscilla.

'First Ladies Of The Skies' Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Had Quincy Ties

A bigail and Louisa Catherine Adams are not Quincy's only "First Ladies." The city also has claim to two "first ladies" of the skies, Amelia Earhart and Harriet Quimby.

Earhart, then country's most famous aviatrix who disappeared in the Pacific on an around-the-world flight in 1937, learned to fly at Dennison Airport in North Quincy in the 1920s.

Quimby, although not as well-known, actually was the first woman to earn a pilot's license. She flew out of the Harvard Aviation Field on East Squantum Street and died in a tragic Aeromeet crash.

Earhart, though a resident of Medford at the time, was one of five financial backers of the Dennison Airport established on a nine-acre marshland tract at Quincy Shore Drive and East Squantum Street.

The Beechwood Community Life Center is now located on part of the site across from historic Moswetuset Hummock where the Moswetuset Indians settled and from which the name Massachusetts is derived.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight from the airport Sept. 3, 1927. She must have liked it because a short while later she started taking flying lessons at Dennison.

She later bought a Fokker monoplane from Commander Richard E. Byrd, who would become the famed North Pole explorer. She tested the plane at Dennison and flew it across the Atlantic Ocean, the first woman to accomplish the feat.

Byrd was stationed at the Squantum Naval Air Station which adjoined Dennison Airport in what is now the Marina Bay area of Squantum.

Quincy's first Aeromeet was held in 1910, marked the beginning of New England's aviation history. The 1910 meet coincided with the country's first air show held in California. Other Quincy meets followed in 1911 and 1912.

Harriet Quimby, the first woman to fly the English Channel in 1911, came to Squantum to compete in the third Aeromeet in 1912.

On July 1, she took off from the Harvard Aviation Field for a 27-mile demonstration flight out to Boston Light. As her Bleriot turned around the Light and headed back, the plane nosed down and plummeted into Dorchester Bay.

As the horrified crowd of 5,000

HARRIET QUIMBY

watched, Quimby's passenger, William Willard, manager of the Aeromeet, fell from the plane into the mudflats. Harriet followed. The plane nosed over on impact. It was undamaged. Both Quimby and Willard died.

In an era when most women were not employed or career-oriented, Earhart and Quimby were unique.

Both were educated, employed and self-sufficient with multiple community, career and public roles. Neither were suffragettes or active feminists, but both were gifted, courageous and tireless women — promoting and demonstrating equal rights for women. Both were published journalists and photographers. Both met untimely and tragic deaths.

The historical significance of the Squantum site has prompted study, information gathering, research and collections of early aviation photographs and artifacts. Quincy's Aviation History Info Center evolved from three years of community meetings and help from aviation history buffs, journalists, historians and interested folks from the community.

A Third Generation Continues Our Traditions.

Quincy has changed a great deal since Sweeney Funeral Home was established in 1917. But, it's nice to know some things will never change. Like the observance of traditional values and customs.

At Sweeney Funeral Homes, older residents are quick to notice the subtle reminders of yesteryear, such as the grey gloves our funeral director still wears. Like the characteristic top hat and tails that our founder, Dennis Sweeney, wore over 30 years ago, they reflect our Tradition. One that has been built on a dignified and instinctive concern for the city's bereaved families for three generations.

Today, our founder's grand-nephew, Dennis S. Sweeney has continued the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.

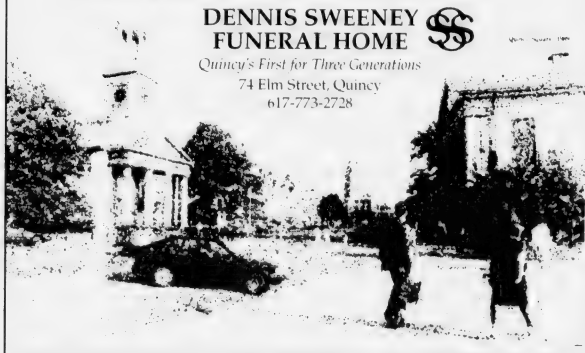

And like his namesake, who started pre-arrangements in the 1940s, Dennis believes in helping residents to plan for the future. Pre-planning means that this financial decision is not left for a family to decide while they are attempting to cope with a major personal loss. It's a difficult time, a time when family members are least able to make the wisest choice.

Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions for over 70 years. Call Dennis Sweeney at (617) 773-2728 for a free consultation. There's no time like the present.

RUTH GORDON

BILLY DeWOLFE

HOWARD JOHNSON

WILLIAM ROSENBERG

William Rosenberg Founded Dunkin' Donuts Here

Ruth Gordon, Howard Johnson, Billy DeWolfe Had Proud Quincy Roots

Teachers dubbed the Class of 1914 the "worst class" ever at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. To bad they couldn't have looked ahead to the future of Ruth Gordon.

A year later, armed with a new name, Ruth Gordon, she was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $500 to start a new life, pinned to her chest.

Ruth Gordon went on to fame and fortune as a mistress of the Broadway stage and the Hollywood screen, studying and playing with the greats: Gershwin, Kagan.

She won an Academy Award as best supporting actress in 1969 for her role as Sam's mom in "Rosemary's Baby," and an Emmy in 1979 for her one-time role in the sitcom "Taxi."

Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots in Quincy, returning frequently to attend class reunions. Her last visit was in 1984 for the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

She died in 1985 at the age of 88.

His name too was Jones, William Andrew Jones, and, as a teen-aged usher in the old Quincy Theater, where vaudeville persisted into the 1920s, he used to dream of performing himself.

But Billy Jones was such a common name, he thought, so he borrowed the name of the Quincy Theater manager and as Billy DeWolfe he became a dancer and comic.

He appeared with Dennis Day, his close friend, in "Lullaby of Broadway" and "Tea for Two," and the character he created, "Mrs. Murgatroyd," became a comedy classic.

He visited his old home town almost yearly and when he died in 1974 at the age of 67, he was buried in the Jones family plot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The year was 1925 when 27-year-old Howard Johnson, a failure as a cigar salesman, took over a rundown drug store with a newspaper franchise and a marble soda fountain on Beale Street in Wollaston.

Soon he began making his own ice cream — 28 flavors eventually — and then he had a seaside snack shack on Wollaston Beach Boulevard and a restaurant in the tallest building in downtown Quincy.

Just then, by coincidence, Eugene O'Neill's latest play, "Strange Interlude," was banned in Boston so the producers moved it to the Quincy Theater, just up Hancock Street from the Howard Johnson restaurant in the then Granite Trust Bank.

It was a long play, so the sellout audiences were given an hour and a half dinner break at intermission so the place to go was Johnson's restaurant where the special, chicken pies, were $1 apiece.

Eventually, Howard Johnson franchised restaurants and motels, with their familiar orange roofs, spanned the continent, truly, in their own words, "a landmark for hungry Americans."

Bill Rosenberg was just shy of his 30th birthday when he bought a used delivery truck, invested $5,000 in a modest kitchen in an old butcher shop and opened the Industrial Luncheon Service.

He stocked the truck with coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and made his first stop at the Boston Gear Works in North Quincy, where he sold his first cup of coffee for a nickel.

He had 144 canteen trucks by 1950 when he decided a retail store would be more profitable so he started a shop called the "Open Kettle" on Southern Artery in Quincy.

That name didn't catch on so Rosenberg called a brainstorming session. "What do you do with a doughnut?" asked the architect, Bernard Healy, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

In 1963, when the operation was franchised, Rosenberg opened his own Dunkin' Donuts University, where six fulltime instructors and a dean taught franchise owners the intricacies of operating their own store.

For years, her father, Frank, ran an upscale men's clothing store in downtown Quincy but it remained for his daughter, Lee Remick, to spread the family name far and wide.

She burst into Hollywood as the nubile drum majorette with Andy Griffith in "A Face in the Crowd," and followed it up as the alcoholic wife with Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses."

She died in 1991 at the age of 55.

His real name was William Szathmary but he changed it to an easier-to-remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the scene as a writer and sometime performer on the old Steve Allen Show.

The 1942 graduate of Quincy High School later gained a measure of fame in the entertainment world as the comic with the thick Spanish accent, Jose Jimenez.

When the touring cast of Saturday Night Fever visited Boston, one of its stars, Rich Hebert, took the opportunity to visit the Snug Harbor School in Germantown where he grew up.

He has appeared on such TV shows as "Law & Order SVU" and "21 Jump Street," and Broadway productions like The Life, Sunset Boulevard and Les Miserables, in which he had the lead role as Jean Valjean.

'Kilroy Was Here' And Everywhere

The words greeted the first American GIs to arrive at the Imperial Palace in wartime Tokyo in the late summer of 1945. "Kilroy was here!" He really wasn't but in a way he was.

It began in 1942 in Bethlehem Steel's Erie River Shipyard in Quincy where James J. Kilroy was employed as a checker whose job was to count the number of holes filled by a riveter.

Kilroy's job was important to the riveters since they were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Kilroy would go around and count them and check each with a chalk mark.

Some riveters would wait until the checker had gone and then erase the last chalk mark. Another checker would count the rivet a second time and the riveter would get paid twice for the same work.

One day, Kilroy overheard his boss ask a riveter if Kilroy had checked a certain rivet. No, said the riveter. That made Kilroy mad because he knew he had checked that particular rivet.

He grabbed a piece of chalk, went over to where the two men were standing and scribbled "Kilroy was here!" in large, bold letters right next to the check mark. It soon became his standard practice.

Ordinarily, the chalk marks would be covered up by paint. But this was wartime and some ships left the Yard too fast to be painted. The enigmatic "Kilroy was here!" began appearing all over the world.

The mysterious message fascinated GIs. Soon, they began writing it themselves on walls in the most unlikely places, like the Imperial Palace in Tokyo.

Eventually, as "Remember Pearl Harbor" stood for America's fighting men in World War II and the men and women who built the war machines for them, so did "Kilroy was here!" come to stand for them too.

And the name "Kilroy" persists in Quincy, perpetuated in Kilroy's Pub at the city's new hotel, the Boston Marriott Quincy.

World War II Naval Heroes Nimitz, Burke Had Local Connection

Long before they became famous as Naval heroes of World War II, Chester Nimitz and Arleigh Burke were briefly residents of Quincy.

Fleet Admiral Nimitz, who directed U.S. Naval operations against the Japanese in the Pacific, even married a Quincy girl while waiting for a submarine to which he had been assigned to be outfitted at the Fore River Shipyard in 1913.

Burke, nicknamed "31 knot Burke" as the Navy's most celebrated destroyer squadron commander, lived in Squantum while his 1,500-ton destroyer USS Craven was being outfitted in the 1930s.

Nimitz and Catherine Vance Freeman were wed April 9, 1913 at her family's home at 40 Grand View Ave., Wollaston. Her father, Richard, was a former city council president.

Rev. Carl G. Horst, minister of the Wollaston Unitarian Church on Winthrop Avenue, performed the ceremony. The bride was 21 and the groom 28 on the day he later recalled as "the happiest day of my life."

CHESTER NIMITZ

General Douglas McArthur as a signer for the United States in the Japanese surrender ceremonies in Tokyo Bay Sept. 1, 1945.

He died in February, 1966, after suffering a stroke just before his 81st birthday. His wife, Catherine, was at his bedside.

Burke was an inspector at a naval gun factory in Washington when World War II broke out. He quickly applied for sea duty but his request was not granted until 1943, when he was sent to command destroyers in the Solomons.

He earned the nickname "31 Knot Burke" from Admiral William "Bull" Halsey for his exploits in the Solomons as commander of Squadron 23, a pack of eight destroyers whose high-speed torpedo attacks devastated Japanese warships.

"Stand aside! Stand aside! I'm coming through at 31 knots," Burke radioed to darkened American troop transports as he began his attacks.

In 22 engagements in four months, Burke's squadron was credited with sinking one cruiser, nine destroyers, one submarine and nine smaller vessels as well as downing some 30 Japanese airplanes.

Burke was named Chief of Naval Operations over 92 more senior officers by President Eisenhower in 1955 and was offered a fourth two-year term by President Kennedy in 1961 but chose to retire instead. He died in 1996 at the age of 94.

The Dennison Airport

Architect Harold T. Dennison leased a section of marshland at East Squantum St. and Quincy Shore Dr. in 1926 and filled it in with sand and mud piped in from the nearby Neponset River. The airport was dedicated July 2, 1927.

The first takeoff and landing on the field was made by Pilot Al Bourden, who risked his brand new Waco 10 biplane to set down on a 300-foot runway and ground loop into the grass to avoid hitting a wall at the end of the field. He used an artificial hill to clear the banking on takeoff.

Air shows, including stunt flying, parachute jumping and racing, were a weekly and monthly feature at Dennison Airport, which eventually sported two 1,800 foot runways, a steel-and-stucco hangar with an office and observation tower and a metal hangar.

Flying in those early days was an exciting and often risky business. Thea Rashe, a girl pilot from Germany, stalled her biplane over the field in 1927 and crashed into the marsh to avoid the hundreds of spectators. She was unhurt. Freddy Lund, a stunt pilot, performed the first outside loop ever performed in New England in a 1930s air show.

Hundreds of spectators paid from 50 cents to $2.50 to make their first flights in an airplane, and flying clubs were organized for novice pilots.

Dennison Airport remained Quincy's only commercial flying field until June 17, 1941, when the government took it over to expand the adjacent Squantum Naval Air Station as the nation prepared for the inevitable entry into World War II.

The Squantum air base, founded in July, 1923, with one wooden hangar and one seaplane, was noted for two of its commanding officers.

One was Lt. Richard E. Byrd, who, as Admiral Byrd, later flew over both the North and the South Poles and established the longest lasting United States research base at Little America in the Antarctic. He was Squantum's first commanding officer.

The other was Commander John J. Shea, for whom the Squantum field was named. Shea was stationed aboard the Quincy built aircraft carrier Wasp when it was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, off the Solomon Islands. Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition filling the air." He won the Navy's highest honor, the Navy Cross.

The war being over and the Naval Air Station no longer needed, NAS found itself in the flight paths of jetliners from Logan International Airport in East Boston and moved to South Weymouth in 1953.

Germantown Glass Works

The Germantown section of Quincy was named for the German workers who were imported to work in a glass factory founded by Joseph Crellius in 1750 and operated by Joseph Palmer.

The glass works was struck by lightning and destroyed five years later after turning out light green, dark green and black bottles as well as the window glass for King's Chapel in Boston.

Only two complete bottles made of Quincy glass are known to survive in the possession of the Quincy Historical Society.

SEPTEMBER

Sunday, Sept. 14

Constitution Day Celebration — Time: 1 p.m. Location: Carriage House at Adams National Historical Park, Old House, 135 Adams St., Quincy. The public is invited to play a part in one of our nation's greatest dramas, the passage of the United States Constitution by the Constitutional Convention on Sept. 17, 1787. Members of the audience assume the roles of delegates to the Convention and represent their state in a debate that will determine the fate of a nation. After the debate, each delegate signs the document, rings the Liberty Bell, receives a copy of the U.S. Constitution and the Massachusetts Constitution to keep as a memento.

Sunday, Sept. 28

Abigail Adams: Patriot On The Homefront — Time: Noon to 4 p.m. Location: John and John Quincy Adams Birthplaces, 133 and 141 Franklin St., Quincy. The public is invited to picture themselves in the year 1775 as Patriot refugees fleeing British-occupied Boston to seek asylum at the farm of Abigail Adams. Visitors will meet colonial characters, investigate colonial lifestyles, gather provisions and practice military maneuvers with the Captain of the local militia who "pays" them for their service.

OCTOBER

Sunday, Oct. 12

Amistad Event Commemoration — Time: All day. Location: Park-wide. Join the Adams National Park Service and its partners as they host a day of activities, lectures and special collections viewings to pay tribute to John Quincy Adams' heroic involvement in the Amistad trial of 1841. Learn more about this compelling chapter of American history from nationally renowned scholars and by seeing seldom displayed objects from the collection of Adams National Historical Park that help to bring the story to life. Every person attending programs on the day will receive a complimentary copy of a fully illustrated booklet detailing the life of John Quincy Adams and highlighting his role in the Amistad event.

Friday, Oct. 24

Spirits Of Quincy's Past — Time: 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Location: Hancock Cemetery, next to Quincy City Hall, Hancock Street, Quincy. A candlelight tour of one of New England's oldest burying grounds, the Hancock Cemetery. Three centuries of historic figures briefly come back to life to share stories and little known facts about Quincy's past. You will witness the return of members of some of Quincy's first families including the Adamases, Quincys and Hancock, Morticia Addams, your hostess for the evening, will treat you to a "spirted" good time as she prepares you for a "ghost encounter of the historic kind." Following the program, participants are invited back to the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy, for refreshments. Program is free of charge. For more information call Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center at 617-770-1175.

Seeks Bids For 7 To 14

City To Buy New Buses For Special Needs Students

The city will purchase new school buses for special needs students in time for the start of the 2004 school year.

Recently, the city's purchasing department put out a request for bids for the purchase of seven to 14 mini buses for special needs students attending Quincy Public Schools.

The city hopes to purchase the vehicles by August 1. The buses would be ready for the beginning of the 2004 school year, according to Kristin Priscella, Mayor William Phelan's director of operations.

Five vans, including three wheelchair vehicles, were being used to transport special needs students, she said.

Priscella said state and federal regulators have deemed mini buses to be a safer than vans with regard to transporting students.

School Committee member Elaine Dwyer prompted the change after studying the matter last year.

Tom Largety, the mayor's executive secretary, said the purchase of the mini buses will improve transportation services for special needs students.

"The vans were over-utilized, and thanks to the innovative ideas and hard work by Elaine Dwyer, the city will be able to greatly improve services for these students," he said.

To Prevent Terrorist Actions

Officials To Set Goals For $125,000 Security Grant

Mayor William Phelan will soon meet with the city's public safety officials to determine how best to spend $125,000 in homeland security funds that were recently awarded to the city.

The federal grant, dispersed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' Executive Office of Public Affairs, will assist Quincy in identifying potential terrorism targets and enhance the city's ability to prevent any terrorist action.

"We are grateful and proud to receive this grant award," said Phelan. "I am committed to ensuring that the City of Quincy takes every possible measure to prevent terrorist attacks and protect our residents from any potential terrorist action. Our police, fire and emergency management departments have been working together to prevent any problems and improve response capabilities."

The funds for the grant were provided through the US Department of Homeland Security's Office of Domestic Preparedness. Phelan and Police Chief William Falco met with Homeland Security Director Tom Ridge during his recent visit to Boston.

Tom Gorman, head of the city's Emergency Management Department, said he, Falco and Fire Chief Paul O'Connell will meet with the mayor and coordinate how the money will be spent. Guidelines on the proper use for the funds will be set forth by the state Public Safety Department, Gorman said.

"Quincy remains a safe place to live. We will continue to be aggressive in our efforts to ensure that residents can go about their daily business without fear or concern," Phelan said. "This grant will aid us in doing that."

Gorman recently attended a crisis preparedness conference and a workshop on the protection of infrastructure.

"Tom Gorman brings a lifetime of experience in public safety to the Emergency Management Department," said Phelan. "His service as a fire chief, a firefighter, and State police officer give him a tremendous background with the wide range of issues that face today's Emergency Management personnel."

DELAYED HONORS: American flag that should have been a family treasure for four decades is finally presented to Peggy Leary of Squantum by Boston Police Officer Jim O'Connor while her husband, Jack, looks on. Peggy Leary's father, Patrick Conroy, was passed over for customary honors when he died 41 years ago.

Honors Come To Police Officer After 41 Years

The honors due to a Boston police officer have finally come to Patrick Conroy after 41 years.

When Conroy, a member of the Boston police force for 32 years, died 41 years ago he never received a proper policeman's funeral because he passed on just two days after retiring.

It remained for his granddaughter, Tricia Bouzan, to remind Boston Mayor Tom Menino of the oversight.

The other day, Jim O'Connor of the Boston Police Department and Honor Guard showed up at the home of Peggy Leary, Conroy's daughter, on Deerfield Street, Squantum, to right the old wrong.

While her husband, Jack, and their children and grandchildren looked on, O'Connor presented the veteran cop's daughter with her father's records and the American flag that should have been given her family four decades ago.

White House Wreath To Honor John Quincy Adams

A wreath from the White House will be placed on the tomb of John Quincy Adams, the sixth president, Thursday, July 11, at 12 noon in a ceremony at United First Parish Church.

Commander John C. Bozeman of the Naval Reserve Center in Quincy will present the wreath on behalf of President George W. Bush.

Members of the U. S. Navy Color Guard will lay the wreath on the Adams tomb and the Navy Brass Ensemble from Newport, R. I., and other musical groups will perform.

The wreath-laying ceremony marks the 236th birth date anniversary of Adams, who was born on July 11, 1767.

A tour of the church and crypt, where Adams, his father John and their wives are buried will follow the ceremony.

For more information, call 617-773-0062.

Squantum Gardens Construction Scatters COA Programs

With the Squantum Gardens Community Center no longer available while the area is being converted in elder housing, the Council on Aging has been forced to scatter its programs over different sections of the city.

Tai Chi, Writing Workshops and Health Seminars will be held at Marina Place Assisted Living Facility in North Quincy.

The Council of Aging board meetings, Bridge Club and educational workshops will be held at the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex in Merrymount Park.

Exercise programs and Scrabble will be held at the Fore River Clubhouse on Nevada Road, Quincy Point.

The Blind will meet twice weekly at Most Blessed Sacrament Church in Houghs Neck.

Ongoing programs, financial planning, legal services, hearing screenings, SHINE, eye screenings and massage therapy, will continue at the COA office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

The COA office will remain open from 8:30 to 4 p.m. daily during construction but there will be no way to get there from the old entrance on East Squantum Street.

Those heading north toward Boston on Quincy Shore Drive should cross the East Squantum St. intersection, pass the Dunkin' Donuts, take the first right on Airport Road followed by a sharp right on Saratoga St.

Those heading south toward Wollaston Beach should stay in the far left lane, which will bring them to a traffic light. When you get a green arrow, turn left on Baystate Rd. Follow Baystate Rd. to the end, take a right, then a left to Saratoga St.

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN recently presented $1,500 in MWRA mitigation funds each to Jean Kennedy (left) from the Seaside Advocacy Food Pantry and Cynthia Antonopolous (right) from the Houghs Neck Community Center. The funds amounted to money saved by dismantling a boring machine and removing it from a shaft in Houghs Neck.

QTA Head Says Council 'Pandering' To Union

Alan Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, has accused the City Council of pandering to the Firefighters' Union by passing an "unnecessary" minimum staffing ordinance.

The Council passed the ordinance over the objection of the mayor and the fire chief requiring the city to hire 40 additional firefighters over five years beginning in 2004. Only Councillors Frank McCauley and Doug Gutro voted against it.

Mayor William Phelan vetoed the ordinance but, said Cousin, there appears to be enough votes in the Council to override the veto.

Cousin said the ordinance will cost $8.5 million over five years and $2.4 million a year thereafter in salaries alone. No one had shown that the ordinance was needed, he said.

Cousin labeled the ordinance "featherbedding," referring to the unnecessary jobs that would be added to the union shop.

Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive July 15

The 19th Annual Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive will be held Tuesday, July 15, from 2 to 8 p.m. at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street, Houghs Neck.

The drive is in memory of Chris Peter, the son of Charlie and Trudy Peter, who was struck and killed by a drunk driver Sept. 14, 1984.

In the previous 18 drives, the Peters have collected almost 1,900 pints, or more than 200 gallons of blood.

Sings posted from Route 3A at the Police Station directing donors to the collection site. Walk-ins are welcome.

There will be homemade goodies, adult supervised child care and crafts for the children of donors.

Cedrone's Departure A Loss

Christine Cedrone's decision not to seek re-election to the school committee is a loss for the city.

Especially the children.

During her eight years on the board, Cedrone gave it her all. Heart and soul. All the way.

She served with "what's-best-for-the-children" as her guiding principle. And wasn't timid about taking a stand on a controversial issue -- for or against -- without first checking to see how many future votes she might win or lose.

"I love working with the Quincy public schools," she said. "There are so many individuals who care deeply for children and their education. I am proud to have been a part of it."

She was a major part of it.

Her decision not to run was "very difficult," she said. One based on "personal and professional reasons."

Cedrone's political career got off to a tight start in 1993 when she and Sean Barry, now president of Quincy College, tied in that year's school committee race with recount exact vote of 5,734 each.

The seat went to Barry on a 9-5 vote at a city council-school committee joint convention.

But there was nothing tight about the 1995 election which she not only won but was the top vote-getter in the school committee field.

And that was no fluke. She was top vote getter again in 1999.

Cedrone, with that strong vote-getting ability, is leaving behind -- for the time being, anyway -- a promising political career.

There was speculation earlier this year that she might make a run for city councillor at-large.

And there are those who thought she might go on to become the first woman mayor in the city's history.

Cedrone is a Republican and her departure from the political scene, is a blow to that party, even though municipal elections are non-partisan. But who gets elected is important to both Republicans and Democrats.

And the fact is that as of today, Cedrone is one of only two Republicans in city elective office. The other is Frank McCauley, former mayor, running for re-election this year as a councillor at-large.

That means 50 percent of the Republicans now holding municipal office is about to leave.

There are 16 elective city offices: one mayor, nine councillors and six school committee members. Democrats hold 14 of the 16.

McCauley was Quincy's last Republican mayor, serving four terms from 1982-1989. The last Republican mayor before him was Walter Hannon with two terms from 1972-1975. (He became a Democrat.)

Once upon a time Quincy was a Republican stronghold when that party held virtually every municipal office and every local, state and county office.

That began to change in the early 1950s with the coming of John F. Kennedy. Today, things are the other way around with Democrats in control.

So, to lose someone like Cedrone is a blow to the Republican party as well, of course, to the city.

But she indicates she may be back.

"I enjoyed serving the public," she says. "I am leaving the door open for the future."

Her friends and supporters hope she is only taking a breather at this particular stage in her life.

She's young enough (33) to take some time off and return refreshed and ready to pick up her political career.

There are lot of people -- Democrats as well as Republicans -- who hope so.

SPEAKING OF Frank McCauley, he isn't resting on past laurels in his bid for a fourth term as councillor at-large since leaving the mayor's office in 1990.

He's out there campaigning. And recently filed his nomination papers with some 300 voter signatures. Only 50 are needed.

McCauley is now in his 30th year in elective office, and a Quincy historic political figure.

He is the only person in the city's 114-year history to hold all four elective municipal offices: mayor, councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committee member.

MILESTONE: Mildred Gustafson will celebrate her 103rd birthday at a party today at noon at Beechwood Community Life Center in Squantum.

In her honor, Mayor William Phelan has proclaimed Thursday as "Miss Mildred's Day" noting that she is "a role model to all."

And to give you an idea as to how young a 103 she is, she has been trying to decide which pair of "dancing shoes" to wear.

"I like to keep my feet dancing -- that keeps me healthy," she explains. She dances every chance she gets at the Beechwood Center.

Picking out which shoes to wear is a bit of a task. She has something like 27 or more pairs of shoes, says Sharron Beals, executive director of the Beechwood Center. Not to mention three closets full of pretty clothes.

She keeps adding to her wardrobe as a shopping channels fan, says Beals. "And she also keeps up with current events through news programs and talk shows."

Pre-school youngsters will be on hand to help "Miss Mildred," as they affectionately call her, celebrate the big day. And she will share the spotlight with Alexandra Fowler, who 100 years younger, will be celebrating her third birthday.

"She's a marvel," said Beals. "She's a regular at our senior center and an active one."

"And she still plays the piano."

"Miss Mildred," who lives in West Quincy, has a son, Elliot, also of Quincy, two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Originally from the North Shore, she met her late husband, Carl, here in Quincy -- at a dance.

She doesn't have a formula for longevity but there are a few ingredients in addition to dancing. Like:

"I never say 'no' to invitations to go out. I don't want to miss anything. I want to be with friends. The worst thing you can do is sit too much -- especially in your own home."

"I eat breakfast cereal and fruit every day."

She quit smoking 82 years ago.

Oh, and there's one more thing:

"I keep away from doctors."

There have been 20 U.S. presidents during her lifetime beginning with William McKinley. Her favorite is William Howard Taft.

She saw him at the Wright Brothers at the 1910 Aeromeet in Squantum.

"I always liked President Taft," she says. "Even though he let himself get a little heavy."

That's one thing she won't let happen to her.

Another happy birthday, Miss Mildred.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1913 POSTCARD is a view of what was then The Wollaston Beach Inn located at the corner of Beach Street and the Boulevard. After 90 years, all of the buildings in this view are pretty much the same. Over that time an MDC lifeguard station was built and demolished on the lot next to the house on the left. The little shop in the center was used over the years as a takeout refreshment stand. At the time of this picture an ice cream sign was on the front door. Notice the policeman on the corner and the horse drawn buggy heading up to Billings Road.

City Council Right On New Fire Dept. Ordinance

Battlegrounds are drawn as the City Council prepares to override a mayoral veto of a council-approved ordinance that adopts the NFPA standard that calls for every piece of fire apparatus to be staffed by three firefighters and one officer at all times.

The mayor says the city

Opposes Smoking Ban

Yes, if it can be proven that employees are being held against their will, or customers forced to eat where they do not choose, then I would advocate that these conditions be respectfully resolved. But when a man proposes a blanket proposition to ban a custom of 350 years, enforce it when every Authority, including police, fire, city inspectors and health officials, to snoop on, sniff out, and otherwise criminalize violators with thousand dollar fines, then can't afford the measure, which the city council voted 7-2 in favor of. The mayor stated the ordinance restricts the fire chief's ability to properly allocate personnel.

The mayor wants to see a fire study done to assess the needs of the fire department. I agree it is probably a good

I'd like my objection to be duly noted.

If I were on the city council I would say that the responsibility of government is to assure that customers know if an establishment accommodates smoking on the premises. With the knowledge the customer is free to choose whether or not to support the proprietor. That's the role of government as I would support it.

Jim Mileski

idea to do a study but you don't need a study to know when a piece of apparatus is understaffed.

What is wrong with creating minimum manning standards and what's so bad about Quincy being first in the Commonwealth to do so?

I agree with William Arienti, president of the Quincy Firefighters Local 792 when he says, "This isn't about money. This is about priorities. This is about keeping people safe."

Forty years ago we wouldn't even be having this debate. Our standards were higher. We understood the risks of firefighting. We protected firefighters. We protected everyone better.

Today, we trim down crews on fire apparatus to dangerous low numbers. We put our firefighters at risk and when they are at greater risk so are we all.

In 1981, after Prop 2 1/2, the City of Boston tried to deactivate Engine Co. 50 in Charlestown. The people of Charlestown said no. The firehouse was occupied and the Engine Company reacted.

Politicians aren't firefighters. If I have to choose sides, I'm with the folks who protect us and risk their lives for us.

The City Council needs to override the veto because it's the right thing to do for all of us.

Praise For Christine Cedrone

On behalf of the Quincy Taxpayers' Association, I want to thank Christine Cedrone for her eight years of distinguished service on the Quincy School Committee.

I'm sure her exceptional abilities, hard work and leadership will be greatly missed, now that she has decided not to seek reelection.

Record Number Elementary School Students Seen

Dr. Paul Gossard, superintendent of schools, announced that Quincy's 21 elementary schools would have an all-time record number of students in elementary schools next September: 8,221.

This increase of 744 from last year was the result of the rapid birth rate following the war. The increase was expected to continue for the next five years.

Atherton Hough School in Houghs Neck had top enrollment - 711, with the Washington School in Quincy Point with the lowest - 178.

Student teacher ratio would be 1 to 29 in the Quincy schools next fall.

KENNEDY TO ORGANIZE WOMEN'S COMMITTEE

Mrs. Rose Fiske of Granite St. received a letter this week from Congressman John F. Kennedy, candidate for U.S. Senate.

In the letter, Kennedy announced his plans to set up a women's committee in Quincy to assist him in his campaign. The committee would be in charge of voter registration.

Co-ordinating the women's committees in the state was the Congressman's sister, Pat Kennedy.

Transportation Services For Seniors Extended SummerFest Concerts Open At Gordon Amphitheatre

Mayor William Phelan announces the schedule of concerts for the 2003 SummerFest program.

Each concert will begin at 7 p.m. in the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre in Merrymount Park. Admission is free.

"We are thrilled to provide such a wonderful lineup of talent for this year's SummerFest concert series," said Phelan. "The amphitheatre is a beautiful setting that always has a cool breeze during those hot summer nights. I am proud that we are able to offer cultural events like SummerFest to the residents of Quincy. I encourage everyone to join us for a night of summer fun at SummerFest."

The city's Elder Services

Department will extend their transportation services to accommodate senior citizens for the concert series, according to the mayor's office.

Interested seniors must pre-register for transportation by calling the Elder Services Department at 617-376-1242 at least one day in advance of the concert. Space is limited.

"I believe that our senior population will thoroughly enjoy the lineup we have this year," said Phelan. "It's a fun night at a fun location and I encourage everyone to come out and enjoy the shows."

This year's schedule is as follows:

July 9 — The Continental Swing Band, with swing music to take you back through time.

July 16 — Krewe de Roux, Cajun and southern music from the Mississippi.

July 23 — Frank Sinatra Tribute, Patrick Tobin sings the finest hits of Ol' Blue Eyes.

July 30 — Irish Night, music and dance straight from Dublin.

August 6 — Masquerade, Broadway showtunes from the energetic stars of tomorrow.

The Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre is adjacent to Pageant Field and the Richard J. Koch Family Park & Recreation Complex.

For more information on the SummerFest series, call 617-376-1254 or visit the City of Quincy's website at www.ci.quincy.ma.us.

Quincy Landmarks Concert Series To Begin July 18

The first in a series of three Quincy Landmarks Concerts, performed by the Boston Landmarks Orchestra, will take place on July 18 at 7 p.m. at the Beale Estate, Adams National Historical Park.

Sponsored by State Street Corp., the Quincy Tourism Board and the Adams National Historical Park, the 32-piece orchestra will play a free, public concert of "Ritmo Latino! Classical Sounds," an exploration of exotic classical music of Spain and Latin America, featuring Emmanuel Rossfelder on guitar. Charles Ansbacher will conduct the orchestra.

"We are thrilled to return to the richly historical Quincy again this year, and to partner with organizations who so closely share our vision — to celebrate places of historical and architectural significance, while broadening the audience for the arts," said Ansbacher.

Mayor William Phelan thanked State Street Corp. for being instrumental in bringing the concert series to Quincy.

"I am thrilled to have the opportunity to bring these richly cultural experiences to our residents and I am looking forward to three exciting performances," he said.

On Wednesday, July 23 at 10:30 a.m. and 12 noon, children ages 4-11 will be able to enjoy Daniel Pinkham's "Make Way for Ducklings" at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre. The work is based on Robert McCloskey's beloved children's book set in Boston. Pinkham's piece tells the story through music and narration.

On Friday, August 1 at 7 p.m., residents can revel in romance and explore classical music of the romantic period by attending "Romantics in the Park" at the Beale Estate, Adams National Historical Park, 135 Adams St.

The concert will feature Dvorak's Violin Concerto, Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony and Joseph Lin on violin.

The Quincy Landmarks Concert Series is an alcohol-free event open to the public. The concert will take place on the lawn of the estate, so concertgoers are encouraged to bring lawn chairs and blankets.

Preceding this concert is the Annual Mayor's Garden Party, a fundraiser for Quincy tourism. Tickets for the Garden Party are $125 per person.

Childrens' Activities At Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library will be sponsoring several activities for children this summer.

Art To Go - a program for children of all ages. Projects are open-ended so that a toddler can complete them with an adult's help and older children can express their creativity through design and detail.

Each week brings a new project that will travel to each of the library branches in rotation. Craft time is 2 to 4 p.m. at the Main Library on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays.

Tiny Tot Tunes - registration for the July 18 program begins Monday, July 7. This program is for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult.

Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. Tiny Tot Tunes is an innovative early childhood music and development program for infants. There is always something to do, including sing alongs involving jumps, claps and sway. The program exposes children to such music styles as classical, rock, jazz and blues.

16th Annual Summer Storytellers Series - The fun begins on July 8 at 7 p.m. in the Main Library with Debbie O'Carroll presenting "Magical Medley," a blending of stage magic, dance, masks puppetry and theatre. In keeping with this year's art theme, all performers will present music, dance and puppetry with their stories. The programs are for children dren five years old just entering kindergarten.

"Pajama Time" will be presented by storyteller Cheryl Dunford and is intended for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult. The program will feature songs, stories, and a simple craft. Children are welcome to attend in their pajamas.

Family Book Bingo - Each family that registers between now and August 15 will receive a bingo card. After each family member has completed a bingo card, return all the cards to the library. As a prize for playing your family will receive a Read! Think! Create! book pack, while supplies last. Each family will also receive a summer reading certificate.

For more information about these programs please visit the library's website at <http://ci.quincy.ma.us/tcpl/>.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Double Delicious Berry Pie

With the abundance of strawberries and blueberries, I mixed the two into a delicious berry pie. The trick to a tasty fruit pie is the addition of the juice of a fresh lemon, otherwise the dessert is a bit too sweet.

In a bowl, place the blueberries, mix with sugar, tapioca and lemon. I add the sugar to taste, so after tasting it, sugar can be added if needed. Blend in the strawberries.

Place the pie on a cookie sheet just in case it drips in the oven. Bake in a 425 degree

Strawberry, Blueberry Pie
2 packages of blueberries about 10 strawberries (cut in halves)
3/4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons tapioca juice of one lemon

oven for 10-15 minutes and then reduce to 350 degrees and bake for another 40-50 minutes.

Asian Donors Sought For Bone Marrow Drive

Asians and Pacific Islanders are strongly encouraged to participate in the Marrow/Stem Cell Donor Drive Sunday, July 13, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Thousand Buddha Temple, 53-55 Mass Ave, Quincy.

The donor may save the life of Christopher Wong, 13, of Framingham, who was diagnosed with leukemia in August, 2002, went into remission six months ago and now has suffered a relapse.

Christopher is most likely to find a matching donor in his own Asian ethnic group but only 6.5 per cent of those registered in the National Marrow Donor Program are Asian or Pacific Islander.

Volunteering to be a marrow/stem cell donor is simple. Donors must be in good health and between 18 and 60. Donating takes only 10 minutes. A blood sample from a simple finger stick is used for typing.

Each donor is asked to give his or her consent to have the tissue type listed on the National Marrow Registry, which is searched every day by doctors looking for a match for a patient.

The bone marrow drive is sponsored by the Thousand Buddha Temple and the Cammy Lee Leukemia Foundation.

For more information, call the foundation at 1-800-772-2669.

Farmers' Market Opens July 11 At Hancock Municipal Lot

The Quincy Farmers' Market will kick off its 21st year on Friday, July 11 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the John Hancock municipal parking lot, across from Quincy District Court.

The Farmers' Market will run every Friday until October 31, rain or shine.

"It is another sign of summer activity in Quincy when the Massachusetts farmers are returning to serve the residents of Quincy and the South Shore," said Anneli Johnson, coordinator of the Farmers' Market.

The city sanctions this summer event. The Market is certified by the Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture, and it is a member of the Massachusetts Federation of Farmers' Markets.

This year, food demonstrations and educational programs will be presented by the University of Massachusetts Extension Nutrition Educators in cooperation with the Massachusetts Federation of Farmers' Markets.

Johnson said Farmers' Market educates customers of their own area agriculture and its value to the quality of life.

She said many customers have developed friendships with farmers.

"It is a place to meet your neighbors and friends that you have not seen all winter, or exchange ideas and news about what is happening here at home or in the world around us," said Johnson.

The city council recently honored the Farmers' Market for its 20 years of operation and service to citizens.

Gardeners may also sell at the market. For more information call 617-479-1601.

QUINCY FARMERS' MARKET kicks off its 21st season Friday, July 11 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the John Hancock municipal parking lot, across from Quincy District Court. The market continues every Friday until Oct. 31, rain or shine.

Quincy Choral Society Off To Europe

Members of the Quincy Choral Society will leave tonight (Thursday) for their fourth concert tour of Europe, visiting Austria and the Czech Republic with "Songs of Friendship from America."

The choir will perform at Kurpark in Baden near Vienna, Austria, and at Cesky Krumlov in the Bohemian section and Prague, both in the Czech Republic.

The program will feature works by Austrian, German, Czech and American composers and will include portions of "Mass in Time of War," by Haydn; "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place," by Brahms; "Song," by Karol, some American spirituals and portions of Bernstein's "Chichester Psalms."

About 40 members of the choir will make the trip, some taking with them family and friends. The QCS is directed by John Nichols and accompanied by Virginia Grimes, whose husband, Frank, will play violasolos. Sightseeing will include Schubert's and Beethoven's houses in Vienna, the original Budweiser brewery in Bohemia and the Charles Bridge, Prague Castle and Karlstejn Castle in Prague.

Previous European trips by the Choral Society have been to England, Wales, Scotland and France.

Liang Offers Asian Translation Services To Other Candidates

Jimmy Liang, in an unusual political gesture, is offering Asian translation services to other candidates — including those running for councillor at-large for which he is a candidate.

"One of the goals of my candidacy is to function as a bridge between the Asian and non-Asian communities," he said.

"Many Asian voters have difficulty reading campaign literature that is printed in English. This offer is made in good faith to all candidates, even those who are running for councillor at-large, in an effort to foster better understanding between elected officials and Asian voters."

Liang said his campaign volunteers would translate political literature in the course of translating his own.

"The city of Quincy is better off with a well informed electorate, they will make better choices in elections and be better citizens," Liang said. "Democracy does not function without the consent of the governed. My campaign is about inclusion and governing with the informed consent of all voters."

Candidates wishing to take advantage of this program can call Liang headquarters at 617-786-8997.

Liang in 2001 was the first Asian-American candidate to win a spot on the final election ballot as a candidate for councillor at-large.

QTA Head Criticizes Recent City Actions

Alan Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, has come down hard against three of the most controversial recent issues to face the city.

"The recent fire staffing ordinance passed by the City Council, the early retirement incentive adopted last year and the plan to build a new Quincy High School all show a common lack of study or analysis behind city decisions," he said.

"The City Council chose to pass a fire staffing ordinance before having a fire study. As far as we're concerned, no one ever made a real case to support that ordinance."

"The city adopted the early retirement incentive last year without any cost analysis. Quincy was the first community to adopt it, without any discussion or debate."

"City leaders are doing their best to make a juggernaut of the plans to build a new high school, without ever having properly analyzed the costs, the true reimbursement, or the alternative."

Cousin said the QTA disputes a recent report on the early retirement incentive by Councilor Francis McCauley.

"We are not going to enjoy cost savings of $6.4 million over two years as Councilor McCauley suggests, because we've added positions back into city government. The true salary savings will be no more than $3.4 million."

"Also, Councilor McCauley is incorrect that we can't determine how much of the $5.7 million unfunded pension liability is due to the early retirements. That figure, $5.7 million over 15 years, does represent the extra cost due to early retirement. The state office that oversees public pension administration gave a cities and towns the formula to compute that, and requires that they use it."

Cousin noted that, according to figures assembled by the QTA, the Quincy High School project will cost $110.5 million, of which only 60 per cent — not 90 per cent — will actually be reimbursed.

"People have been parroting the nonsense about 90 per cent reimbursement to the exclusion of all other considerations," he said. "It isn't true at all.

"We calculate at least $14 million in unreimbursable costs. Of the construction costs that are reimbursable, the state only reimburses 90 per cent up to a very low limit based on square footage per student. Ninety per cent reimbursement is a fantasy."

Cousin said his group has looked at these issues in isolation in the past, but a clear pattern is emerging.

"Our city officials spend first and ask questions later," he said. "In every case, this makes for a bad deal for the taxpayers."

Want To Refresh Your Décor? Just Add Water

(NU) - There is something about the sound of water. It soothes your soul, relaxes your mind and puts you in an overall good mood.

Thin about it: We spend money to vacation near water and we build pools and water gardens in our back yards - all to bring some peace and sanctity into our lives. But there's a way to bring that tranquility indoors, too.

Do you know that fountains are not just for the garden? They also can serve many decorative and practical purposes inside your home. It's easy to incorporate fountains into your interior design. Consider these ideas using the 2003 Garden Accents line by Beckett:

- Create a romantic bedroom or bathroom with a unique night light water feature. The Stained Glass, Lighted Column Fountain is a twist on the popular architectural resin columns. This cast-stone textured fountain features beautiful stained glass designs that resonate in daylight and illuminate the dark from within the column. Add some candles around it and you'll have a relaxing environment.

- Make your party decorating simple and unique with a water fountain on your buffet table. The Half Reflection Pool With Decorative Spout is a sophisticated approach to a wall-side fountain. Add some bottles and ice and it becomes a festive drink cooler.

- Use a fountain in your fun room to bring more of the outdoors in. The polyresin and ceramic Flower Bed Fountain usually sits above ground and recirculates water from an underground receptacle and pump. The underground receptacle can be camouflaged above ground by using potted plants. Try the classic Pump and Bucket design for a country style, or the Ceramic Watering Vase for a contemporary look.

- Add a seasonal flair to your indoor design by adding ornaments and lights above a fountain. The Relection Pool With Stained Glass creates a serene environment. Water dances over this 30-inch round stone-cast pool, which has an intricately designed, hand-cut, stained glass bottom. It's perfect for small spaces and is a sure conversation piece.

Follow these steps to choose the best option for your décor.

1. Consider the space. Will it be used for entertaining, quiet time with family or simply relaxing with a good book? That determines the mood of the space.

2. Create a theme and build your decorating around it.

3. Develop a focal point. Where do you want the eye to go upon entering the room? This could be a window, a piece of furniture, a painting and, yes, a fountain.

4. Reflect your personality. Put your personal thumbprint on all design projects.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Breakfast Change Leads To Heart Health

(NAPS) A recently published study is helping bring widespread attention to the threat of heart disease for women.

According to the American Heart Association, fewer than one in 10 women perceive heart disease as their greatest threat even though more than 500,000 women die from cardiovascular disease each year.

The clinical study was conducted by the University of Minnesota Heart Disease Prevention Clinic and shows that a whole-grain oat cereal can help women fight heart disease by significantly lowering cholesterol.

"Women are underserved when it comes to heart disease research," said Helenbeth Reiss Reynolds, study co-author. "This study gives women an easily adopted daily regimen to help them lower cholesterol simply by incorporating Cheerios into their low-fat diet. I have several of my patients eating Cheerios daily, and their cholesterol levels have gone down."

Cheerios is unique in that it is the only leading ready-to-eat breakfast cereal clinically proven to lower cholesterol, said study co-author Dr. Eric Guggen of the Bell Institute of Health and Nutrition.

The study shows women who ate 45 grams of the cereal twice a day (approximately two bowls) significantly reduced total cholesterol levels by an average of 4.1 percent and LDL levels by 5.2 percent. On average, participants in the study experienced more than a 10-point drop in total cholesterol.

In theory, if everybody in America ate the oat cereal as recommended in the study, then this significant statistical reduction even in the short term could lead to an estimated 24,000 lives saved per year.

High cholesterol runs in the family of Sheila Van Pelt of Minneapolis, who recently started eating Cheerios and made other dietary changes. She saw her cholesterol level drop from 267 to 188.

"Once you want to take your health seriously," she said, "it's very easy to pull Cheerios out of the cupboard and get started."

Whole-grain oat cereal and oatmeal are among the select foods that qualify for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration health claim that "as part of a heart-healthy diet, soluble fiber from whole-grain oats may reduce the risk of heart disease."

Psychotherapy: Fact And Fiction

By CAROL CHARPENTIER

Did you know that before World War II, psychology was a science largely confined to the laboratory?

Today, we take for granted that fighting in a war can cause mental trauma. But in the days following the Second World War, American hospitals and communities were seeing large numbers of psychologically damaged veterans. This, in combination with other factors, started moving psychology from the lab to the therapist's office, in the form of Freudian psychoanalysis.

Americans still labor under some misconceptions born during this period. European psychoanalysis meant a patient lying on the couch four or five times a week, sometimes for a number of years, discussing their earliest childhood memories. Much of our modern humor about the psychiatrist's couch originates from this period. And that's the kind of scenario that some still think of when they contemplate going for therapy.

But by the 1980s, psychoanalysis as a technique declined in prestige and popularity, and was soon to give way to cognitive therapy. That is what is commonly practiced in today's psychotherapy.

Cognitive therapy seeks to modify a patient's feelings and behavior by modifying his conscious thoughts. This principle led to today's results-oriented talk therapy that allows people to work through issues like depression, anxiety, obsessive-compulsive disorders, post-traumatic stress, and other psychological conditions.

Sometimes a person is facing a situation that causes a disturbance in emotion and behavior that can be treated successfully with just talk therapy. Other individuals may suffer from a biologic condition that responds well to modern medications.

Whether used alone or in combination with prescription drugs, numerous studies show that the cognitive-behavioral approach works for the vast majority of patients, often in a manner of months.

Cognitive therapy has long-term benefits because once people understand why they feel they way they do, they can take positive action. Unlike recreational drugs or alcohol, which may mask disturbing feelings for a few hours, therapy provides tools that can be used throughout life. And while we can't always change what happens to us, we can master the techniques that change how we react to our circumstances.

Although more is understood today about mental health treatment, it is still hard for some to separate fact from fiction. The misconceptions are unfortunate, in that they may cause some individuals to believe that psychotherapy is so complex or gut wrenching that it holds no solutions for them. This is sad, because there is so much that can be done today to return people to enjoyment of everyday life.

Carol Charpentier is a licensed social worker with Bayview Associates, a program of South Shore Mental Health. SSMH has licensed psychologists, social workers, and psychiatrists who can help. If you or someone you know could benefit from talking to a licensed professional, call 617-847-1950.

Dr. William Brandon Manet Health Medical Director

Manet Community Health Center announces the appointment of William Brandon, M.D., M.P.H., as the new medical director effective June 2.

Dr. Brandon comes to Manet from his position as medical director of the Medical Center of Louisiana at New Orleans.

He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Pennsylvania; Doctor in Medicine degree from the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine in 1984; was board-certified in family practice residency in 1987; and received his master's degree in public health in 1989 from the Graduate School of Public Health in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dr. Brandon will replace Fred Dolgin, M.D., who will remain a staff physician.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE WHITE STUFF

During a recent four year period, the American Academy of Cosmetic Dentistry estimates that consumer demand for whitening procedures grew more than 300%. The fact that teeth naturally darken with age has led patients to schedule increased office visits so that dentists can administer the strongest whiteners (gels containing 15%-35% hydrogen peroxide or the carbamide equivalent) available. These peroxide-containing gels work through a tooth's translucent enamel surface to change the color of the underlying dentin by oxidizing organic compounds that stain the tooth. In-office whitening procedures are considerably faster and more effective than paint-on whiteners and whitening toothpastes (available in pharmacies) that do not have sufficient contact time or concentration for effective color change.

Four Tips For Starting Safe Weight Loss

(NU) - Whether you decide to lose weight through a structured program or by following a dieting self-help book, osteopathic physicians believe that safe and effective weight loss can be achieved by following these simple guidelines:

• Consult your doctor. If you plan to lose more than 15 pounds to 20 pounds, have any health problems, or take medication on a regular basis, your doctor should evaluate you before beginning a weight loss program.

• The weight loss program should be slow and steady. Expect to lose approximately one pound to two pounds per week.

• The diet should be safe. It should include all of the Recommended Daily Allowances for vitamins, minerals and proteins, and should be low in calories only.

• Think about plans for weight maintenance. Weight maintenance is the most difficult part of controlling weight and is typically not consistently implemented in weight loss programs. However you decided to approach weight loss, whether through a structured program or simply counting calories and exercising, it should include changing your dietary habits and your level of physical activity.

To learn about D.O.s and osteopathic medicine, call 1-800-621-1773.

Granite Kick Off Season Saturday

By CHRIS POISSON

So what's the price for losing the Eastern Football League championship last year? Opening the season against three of the league's top teams, all final four playoff participants a year ago.

The Quincy Granite will kick off the 2003 EFL season Saturday night at 7 at Veterans Memorial Stadium against the Clinton Irish Blizzard.

And the schedule gets progressively harder the following two Saturdays when the Granite host Middleboro July 19 and 12-time defending champion Marlboro July 26.

"They're the three best teams in the league," said new head coach Greg Wilson. "I've told the team, 'You begin with the end in mind, which is the championship, and the most important step in any journey is the first, which is Clinton.'"

Wilson, the former offensive coordinator, replaces Ken McPhee, who retired after much success in Quincy's first four seasons.

"It's a great opportunity," Wilson said. "This is a fine organization. We have tremendous veteran leadership and that has been a blessing for me in making the transition to head coach."

Babe Ruth World Series Tickets On Sale

Tickets for this year's Babe Ruth World Series are on sale at participating Dunkin' Donuts, South Shore Cooperative Banks and Beacon Sporting Goods.

The tournament will be held Aug. 15-23 at Adams Field in Merrymount Park. Twelve teams will vie for the 14-year-old division title, including teams from Quincy, Weymouth and Italy.

A family pass (two adults/two children) can be purchased for $30 for all tournament games and an individual pass for $20.

Tickets are on sale at the following locations:

- Beacon Sporting Goods: 1240 Furnace Brook Parkway, Quincy.
- South Shore Co-operative Bank: 195 Washington St., Weymouth; 30 Franklin St., Quincy.
- Dunkin' Donuts: 543 Southern Artery, Quincy; 825 Southern Artery, Quincy; 1462 Hancock St., Quincy; 1250 Hancock St., Quincy; 366 Centre St., Quincy; 180 Bridge St., Weymouth.

For more information call 617-376-1392 or visit www.quincybaberuth.com.

Football

"Ken McPhee is going to be tremendously missed this year. He had so much knowledge and expertise in how to run an organization. This will be the first time in my coaching career that I will not see Ken McPhee when I look down the sideline. I'll miss him personally."

Wilson has brought in a new staff, which includes John Deignan, assistant head coach; Rich Young, defensive coordinator; Brendan Kelly, defensive back coach; Ricky Lawson, wide receiver coach; and Tony Monaco, offensive line coach.

The Granite finished last year with a 7-3 record in the regular season. They defeated Charlestown and Middleboro in the playoffs before falling to Marlboro, 42-14, in the championship game.

"I'm cautiously optimistic," Wilson said of the upcoming season. "We have a lot of pieces in place. I love to compete and I couldn't find a better group to compete with. This team is full of veteran players that know what it takes to win."

Offensively, the biggest question is on the offensive line. Veterans Mike Zawilinski and Ronald Pierre-Louis return, but Vic Jean, who played on the defensive line last year, is a newcomer and Jim Charis and right tackle Matt Baldassari (6-6, 335 pounds) have retired, leaving a gaping hole up front.

"The offensive line is a big thing to fill and we're having trouble putting it together," Wilson said.

Quincy will have a new signal-caller this year. Matt Scott, the Weymouth High School coach, will replace Liam Higgins who will still remain with the team.

Scott will have a pair of standout receivers as targets — all-star Bo Garcia and rookie of the year Jeff Lang. All-purpose players Derrick Wright and Wayman Payne will play vital roles in the offense.

In the backfield, Jackson Vetic returns at tailback along with Randy Campbell at fullback.

Defensively, the Granite will be anchored by all-star nose tackle Christos Arsoniadis, middle linebacker Anthony Caputo and cornerbacks Brian Blackman and John Morant.

"They're four integral pieces to build a defense around," Wilson said. "They're the heart and soul of the defense."

FLUID SITUATIONS
 If you suspect a leak in your vehicle, leave a large piece of white cardboard under your vehicle overnight. If the leak is oily and black, it is probably engine oil. If the fluid is oily and red, transmission fluid is the likely suspect. If there is a significant amount of fluid leakage, the matter merits immediate attention. Left uncorrected, the problem could lead to transmission slippage and transmission damage. On the other hand, if the leaking fluid is slightly oily and yellow or green, it is most likely coolant fluid. If the coolant recovery tank is empty, there is a leak in the coolant system that may lead to overheating. Clear, oily fluid near the wheel wells is brake fluid.

15-Year-Olds Defeat Weymouth To Qualify For State Tournament

Quincy recently cruised to a 10-1 victory over Weymouth to qualify for the Babe Ruth 15-Year-Old Division State Tournament in Brewster tomorrow (Friday).

Pitchers Ray Marchand and Steve Sullivan limited Weymouth to only three hits. Sullivan stroked a single and a double. Corey Wynne, Joe Griffin and Brandon Ranalli each had a pair of hits. Defensively, Evan Harrington, Ranalli, Wynne and Marchand had solid games.

In previous games, Quincy defeated Duxbury, 14-5, with solid pitching from Marc Hutchins and Sullivan. Marchand and Wynne paced the offense with three hits apiece. Matt McHugh, Hutchins, Ranalli and Sullivan all singled. Defensively, Kevin Ouellette, Rob Baker and Mike MacPherson played well.

Quincy edged Weymouth, 4-3, in eight innings with another fine performance on the mound by both Marchand and Sullivan. In the eighth, Hutchins led off with a single, stole second and scored the winning run on a single by Sullivan. Wynne, Powers and MacPherson added singles. MacPherson and Powers were strong defensively.

Quincy outlasted Hingham, 7-5, to reach the finals. Wynne, Sullivan and Marchand combined to hold Hingham to five hits. Sullivan led Quincy with two hits and Matt Breslin had a double and Wynne a single.

13-Year-Old Travel Team Captures District 4 Title

The Quincy 13 year old travel baseball team recently captured the District 4 championship to advance to the state tournament in Braintree beginning Friday and ending July 17.

Quincy, which went 5-1 in the tourney at South Boston, knocked off Braintree, 7-4, for the title. The offense banged out 14 hits and handed winning pitcher Glen Misho a 7-0 lead.

Quincy opened the tourney with a 13-7 win over Hingham after rallying from a 5-0 deficit. Tom Conley tossed a complete game.

Quincy edged Weymouth, 3-2, in the second game with Dan Myers pitching a complete game. Chris Boyd scored the winning run in the top of the sixth inning on a squeeze play by Kyle Tobin.

In the next game, Quincy fell to Braintree, 8-7, as it blew a 7-2 lead, allowing three runs in the bottom of the seventh.

Quincy bounced back with a 2-1 victory over Weymouth. Tom Conley earned the win with a complete game, two-hit performance. Michael Jay singled home Tobin for the game-winning run in the bottom of the seventh.

Quincy defeated Braintree, 8-6, to force the championship game in a doubleheader. Myers, who was given a 7-0 lead, picked up the win.

Overall in the tournament, Quincy received other big hits and great defense from Joe Lousarian, Brian Mahoney, Steve Connolly, Chris Doyle, Pat Totten, Josh Wynn and Boyd. Dan Myers, Doug Myers, Pat Austin, Conley, Misho and Tobin all pitched well.

Morrisette Plays Two At Cohasset Saturday

The Morrisette American Legion baseball team has dropped its last three games after reaching the 500 mark early last week.

Morrisette (4-7-2), which played Canton Tuesday, will travel to Milton Friday, plays a doubleheader against Cohasset Saturday and heads to Weymouth Sunday.

This past Sunday night Morrisette managed only three hits and an unearned run in a 5-1 loss to Braintree. After cutting the deficit to 2-1 in the fifth, Morrisette gave up three runs to Braintree in the bottom half of the inning.

Anthony Boyle allowed three earned runs on nine hits and three walks in five innings. Steve Sullivan struck out two in his inning of work. Ray Marchand, Tommy Hughes and Pat Bregoli had

Last Wednesday, Morrisette dropped a 7-2 decision to Cohasset. Joe Priscella (3 for 3) and Brian O'Hanley (2 for 3) each blasted a home run for Morrisette's only offense. Justin Thorley pitched well in relief of Boyle, giving up a run on four hits in 3 1/3 innings.

Last Tuesday, Morrisette fell to Braintree, 6-5. After scoring three runs in the fifth inning to even the score at 4-4, Morrisette yielded a pair in the sixth. It got a run back in the seventh but left the bases loaded to end the game.

Hughes went 2 for 3, John O'Connell doubled and scored and Bregoli singled and scored. John Folino and Rob Muollo each pitched three innings.

Last Monday, Morrisette topped Milton for the first time in three years with a 6-5 victory. O'Connell scattered 10 hits and gave up three earned runs to pick up the win.

Down 2-1 in the third, Morrisette erupted for five runs and then held onto the lead. Muollo singled and scored on Steve Priscella's triple. After Bregoli walked, Don Cook reached on a fielder's choice and Neal Gavin was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Hughes slapped a two-run single and Joe Priscella ripped a two-run triple.

The Quincy American Legion baseball team is rising in the Zone 6 league standings like the temperature over the Fourth of July weekend.

With Sunday's 6-5 victory over Stoughton at Kincaide Park, Quincy improved its record to 8-4-1 and moved into third place in the nine-team field — the highest it has been in recent memory.

Buoyed by excellent pitching, strong defense and timely hitting, Quincy has won six of its last seven games. And it now faces a hectic late-season schedule with seven games in the final eight days.

Quincy, which hosted Braintree Monday and Weymouth Wednesday, battles cross-town rival Morrisette today (Thursday) at 5:45 p.m. at Kincaide Park. It plays a double-header at West Roxbury Saturday before hosting Canton Sunday and Morrisette Monday.

Against Stoughton Sunday, Quincy fell behind 2-0 in the first inning but bounced back in the second with four runs off all-scholastic pitcher Adam Telion.

Pat Jaehnig (3 hits, RBI) led off with a single and Steve Williams and Brendan McDonald bunted safely to load the bases. Jamie Chiochio knocked in a run with a groundball to the shortstop hole. Sean Sullivan lined a two-run triple to right-center and scored on a suicide squeeze bunt by John Fitzgerald.

After Stoughton cut the lead to 4-3 in the fifth, Quincy answered with two runs of its own. Dennis Thomson cracked a long triple to left field. With one out, pitcher Mike Feetham belted his second triple of the day and scored when Pat Jaehnig lined a single between short and third.

Feetham struck out six to improve to 2-1. Williams continued to anchor the team defensively from his catcher's position.

Last Saturday, Quincy cooled a hot Canton team, 7-0, ending its opponents' four-game winning streak. Dean Sandonato improved to 4-1, scattering six hits and walking two as he held up in the high temperatures.

Pat Jaehnig broke open a scoreless game in the fourth inning with a two-run homer and Quincy tacked on five runs in the next inning all with two outs.

Feetham singled to center and Dave Jaehnig (single) scored all the way from first base. Jaehnig, who was running with the pitch, never stopped running and was waved home by the third base coach when it appeared the center fielder was throwing the ball in nonchalantly. The gamble paid off as he slid in with a big run.

Pat Jaehnig and Williams (2 hits) each stroked RBI singles before Feetham launched a majestic two-run homer over the pine trees in right field at Sharon High School to close out the scoring. Thomson and Fitzgerald, who have been playing solid defensively at shortstop and second base, respectively, each had a hit along with Paul Copson, McDonald and Chiochio, as all nine starters fell safely.

Last Wednesday, Quincy dropped a 2-1 heart-breaker to West Roxbury and its staff's ace. Three base-running mistakes cost Quincy any chance for a victory.

Quincy showed spunk as it staged a last-inning rally. Williams (2 hits) singled and scored when Chiochio crushed a triple to dead center field. Drew Loud worked a walk and with men on the corners and no outs, Quincy seemed poised for another dramatic win.

Unfortunately, one runner was picked off and the other tagged out on a missed squeeze bunt to end the game. The loss ruined fine pitching performances by John Santon and Dom Delgado, who recorded the final five outs without a hit in his second straight relief outing.

Last Monday, Quincy topped Cohasset, 5-3, as Dave Jaehnig filled in as an emergency starting pitcher to notch his first Legion win.

Jaehnig, who had a no-hitter after three innings before tiring in the heat, also added a double. Chiochio had a single, double and three RBI. Pat Jaehnig smacked two doubles with an RBI and McDonald added two singles and an RBI.

Vic DiGravio Jr. Golf Tourney Aug. 4

The fourth annual Vic DiGravio Jr. Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Monday, Aug. 4, at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

The tournament is being held in memory of Vic DiGravio who died of cancer in 1999.

The tournament will be a scramble format with a 1 p.m. shotgun start. Dinner will be served at the South Shore Country Club immediately following the tourney at approximately 6:30 p.m.

Entry fee is $100 per person, which includes greens fees, cart, gifts and dinner. For those attending just the dinner, the donation is $30 per person. The registration deadline is July 28.

All proceeds from the tournament will fund the Vic DiGravio Jr. Memorial Scholarship at Bridgton Academy in North Bridgton, Maine. The scholarship provides financial aid to students from Quincy, Weymouth and Marshfield who attend Bridgton.

Entry fees and/or donations can be sent to: Vic DiGravio Jr. Memorial Golf Tournament, 89, Puritan Drive, Quincy, MA 02169. For more information call Vic DiGravio III at 617-328-8170 or Sean Downing at 781-356-5191.

Harvey's Fishing Club Veterans' Day July 16

The 46th annual Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club Vets' Day will be held Wednesday, July 16.

The fishing club will take disabled veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam out for a day of fishing and boating in Quincy Bay. There will be 200 veterans attending from area VA hospitals and homes.

The Boston Lobsterman's Association will donate 16 to 20 of its boats for the event.

After several hours of fishing, the veterans will arrive back at the Quincy Yacht Club, which donates their banquet hall for the day, where they will be given a full sit down meal. Entertainment includes a disc jockey, raffles, prizes and giveaways.

Volunteers for the event include local neighbors, Quincy Police and Fire departments, Post 380, Quincy and Weymouth Marine Police, Massachusetts Environmental Police, Harbor Master and Assistant Harbor Masters and the Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Members of Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club of Houghs Neck, established in 1954, distribute Vets' Day flounder cards to local establishments to raise funds to help pay for the event.

Donations can be made to: The Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club, P.O. Box 692572, Quincy, MA 02269-2572.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't be sheepish about asking questions and demanding answers. You not only gain needed information, but also respect for your steadfast search for the truth.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A money problem that shows up early in the week is expeditiously resolved by savvy Bovines who know how to turn a momentary financial lapse into a monetary gain.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a good time to shed negative energy-draining forces and develop a positive approach to handling current, as well as upcoming, personal and/or professional situations.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your urge to get your best on a current task is commendable. But don't let it become all-consuming. Spend some spiritually restorative time with those who love you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This could be a good time for all you Leos and Leonas to take your bows for your recent achievements and then go off to enjoy some fun times with your prides and joys.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A negative response to a well-intentioned suggestion could communicate a sense of distrust you might later find hard to rectify. Think carefully before reacting.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your loving attention comforts a family member who is feeling a bit out of sorts. But be careful to prioritize your time so you don't neglect your work duties.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your curiosity might be resented by some. But those who know you will support your penchant for never settling for less than the truth. So stay with it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A pesky situation from the past recurs, albeit in an altered form. Deal with it promptly before it can go from merely irksome to decidedly troublesome.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't wait too long to submit your proposals after giving them a last look-over. If necessary, you should be able to defend any portion called into question.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A bid to use your workplace dispute-settling skills in another situation is tempting. But be careful: You might not have all the facts you'll need if you agree to do it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) That sense of self-doubt is so untypical of you, you should have no qualms in shaking it off. Remind yourself of all you've done and can do, and then do it again.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your ability to charm others without sacrificing sincerity is what makes people want to follow your leadership.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper-left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Thinking and thanking are two words that belong together . . . Think about this! If you think enough about what you have, instead of complaining about what you don't have; if you think enough about the good that has happened to you, instead of feeling sorry for yourself about all the 'bad luck' you have had, you will thank God for His goodness and mercy. Couldn't it be said that it's not so much what happens to us, but how we react and respond? The trouble is that most of us don't do enough positive thinking. . . We moan and groan about the bad things, and take the good things for granted. . . We complain that the cup is half empty, instead of thanking God that it is half full. . .

Years ago there was a popular ballad entitled: "Aren't You Glad You're You?" It went something like this: "Every time you're near a rose, aren't you glad you've got a nose. . . When the meadow lark appears, aren't you glad you've got two years. . . And when the dawn is fresh with dew, aren't you glad you're you?"

We think this is a pretty good philosophy. . . What do you think?

Archbishop Williams Plans $12-$14 Million Expansion

Archbishop Williams High School has announced plans for long-term expansion of its physical plant and renovation of existing facilities in Braintree near the Quincy line.

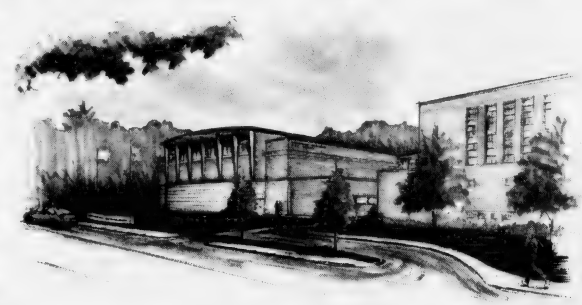

Principal Mary Lou Sadowski said the plan is projected to cost between $12 and $14 million and noted that an aggressive capital campaign is in its planning stage.

Attorney Stephen McGrath, a spokesman for the school, said the project may take as long as three to five years to complete.

Included in the plan is a new multi-purpose center on land adjacent to the present gym to house a new athletic center and faculty office space.

The existing gym would then be converted to an administration office area, library and media center with conference space and teacher and student workrooms.

"We know that to continue our mission at Archbishop Williams High School we must continue to offer the highest quality of education for our students," said Sadowski.

ARCHITECT'S SKETCH of expansion plans for Archbishop Williams High School include this new multi-purpose center to house a new gym and faculty office space with the existing gym converted into an administrative office area, library and media center.

"Our physical plant is well maintained but is 50 years old. To remain competitive and to continue to offer the finest product, we know we have to expand and add to our physical plant."

"We realize we are in competition with various area schools such as BC High, Xaverian Brothers, Fontbonne and Notre Dame, so we must keep pace."

"Archbishop Williams has never been stronger financially and our student body of 650 is really the maximum we can handle."

"Our last two freshman classes are the largest we've had in 15 years and unfortunately the competition is such that we must turn students away."

"We are also considering a major renovation to Nazareth Hall, our former convent, to increase our class room space to be able to accommodate more students."

Nominations Open For Neat Neighbors Contest

Nominations are still open for the Quincy Park Department's annual Neat Neighbors Contest.

The contest recognizes residents that maintain their homes and properties in the spirit of a cleaner and greener Quincy.

Each year, the Park Department chooses 25 winners from throughout the city that keep their properties looking beautiful. Winners are given a lawn sign highlighting their designation as a Neat Neighbor and a gift certificate to a local garden center.

"Many of our residents spend countless hours keeping their properties looking great and we all benefit from the aesthetic impact of their world," said Mayor William Phelan. "Well-maintained properties make beautiful neighborhoods and beautiful neighborhoods make a beautiful city."

Residents can call the Park Department at 617-376-1254 to nominate a friend, relative or neighbor. Nominations will be accepted through Sept. 5. Winners will be announced in mid-September.

There is no competitive judging involved in the Neat Neighbors Contest. Winners will be chosen at random from all nominations that meet the minimum requirements of the contest.

"We are proud to recognize those Quincy residents that take pride in their properties and keep them looking nice," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments. "They set a great example for all of us to keep our city clean and beautiful."

'All-Time High'

Quincy Tourism At 'All Time High'

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The tourism industry appears alive and well in Quincy, with more visitors coming to the city than ever before.

Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, reports a 14 percent increase in those visiting the Presidents John and John Quincy Adams birthplaces and the Adams Mansion, the Summer White House of the two presidents and home to four generations of the Adams family.

"Tourism is at an all-time high," said Peak. "We have seen about 83,000 visitors to the historical houses from April to July — that is a 14 percent increase over last year."

Joanne Dondero, owner of Abigail's Crossing on Hancock St., said the number of tourists visiting her store has jumped.

"Tourism is up," she said. "We see more tourists from places like England and Ireland, and from all over the country. Quincy will never be the shopping mecca it once was, but it is still thriving. We have good restaurants and retail stores here."

Bob Galligan, innkeeper at the Best Western Adams Inn, said business is down slightly this year, but Quincy remains a stable environment for tourism.

"Business is somewhat stable, and we are seeing an increase in airport traffic," he said. "Overall, tourism is down in the state but the Quincy and South Shore markets remain very stable."

Business continues to climb at the Boston Marriott Quincy, according to David Gilbin, general manager.

"We are doing better than last year," he said. "We have had a number of conventions and they have helped us greatly. Business is up approximately 6 percent over the same period last year — most hotels in the Route 128 belt cannot say that."

In March, 2002, Mayor William Phelan put together

a tourism council that would be responsible for promoting Quincy and bringing visitors to the city. Quincy Tourism, Inc., a 23-member, non-profit organization that works in conjunction with the city, was formed.

The board consists of representatives from local businesses and historical attractions.

One of the board's initiatives, a visitors information kiosk, opened Monday to assist tourists with directions or to pick up literature. The Quincy Sun's "Historic Quincy" supplement is available at the kiosk. Also, visitors can find various brochures that provide information about many of the city's tourist attractions.

The kiosk, located in front of city hall, will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily until the fall. It will be staffed entirely with volunteers, according to Kristin Priscella, the

Will Seek Re-election As Ward 2 Councillor

Raymondi Passes Up Run For Mayor

By TOM HENSHAW

There'll be no Raymondi vs. Phelan matchup for mayor of Quincy — not this year, at least.

City Council President Daniel Raymondi took out nomination papers Tuesday to run for reelection to an eighth term as city councillor from Ward 2.

Speculation has run wild over the past year and a half that Raymondi, an outspoken critic of the man in the front office, would run against Mayor William Phelan in the fall.

"Some people may be disappointed," said Raymondi, hinting at a possible future engagement, "but there's always tomorrow."

Raymondi's move leaves Phelan with no major challenger as he seeks a second two-year term in the office that he won from James Sheets by 17 votes in an upset in 2001.

Raymondi said he chose reelection to the city council

DANIEL RAYMONDI

"Some people may be disappointed but there's always tomorrow."

over a run for mayor because "I love the job, the people I work with and I love solving the problems of the community where I grew up."

"I want to thank my supporters who had input in my decision," he said. "I was urged to stay by a lot of individuals in the ward."

"There are some significant issues like the shipyard still to be dealt with. I'll continue to be involved in the new Quincy High School issue."

"The city council is a position I thoroughly enjoy. I enjoy public service. I enjoy the opportunity to improve the quality of life for Quincy people."

"I was able to help approve the hotel-motel tax, which has enabled the city to adopt a $10 million tourist plan."

"I've been able to help seniors to work off a significant portion of their real estate taxes by volunteering to work for the city."

Raymondi, who ran for mayor unsuccessfully against Francis McCauley in 1981, served four terms in council from Ward 2 in the 1970s and three more starting in 1996.

Raymondi's decision not to run for mayor leaves Phelan with one potential opponent, Robert Boussy of Farrington Street, Wollaston, who ran against Sheets in 1999 and has also run for Ward 3 councillor.

He has nomination papers out but as of early this week had not filed them with the required 50 signatures.

Legislature Restores $700,000 In Funding For Quincy

The state Legislature last week restored approximately $23 million in local aid assistance to cities and towns — including $700,000 for Quincy — that was originally axed from the state budget by Gov. Mitt Romney.

According to state Sen. Michael Morrissey and state Rep. Ron Mariano, the House and Senate voted to override Romney's veto of additional assistance to cities and towns.

Those funds were important because they were factored in to Mayor William Phelan's fiscal 2004 budget, Morrissey said.

"One of our priorities has always been to provide local assistance," said Morrissey. "This demonstrates the difference in priorities between the executive and legislative branches of government in this state."

Mariano agreed, saying the vote to override

Romney's veto was overwhelming, with 11 of 23 Senate Republicans voting against the governor.

"This is a lot of money in a tight budget," Mariano said. "The governor had gone too far in vetoing additional assistance. But it speaks to the fact that his budget was never really based on reality in the beginning. His revenues were very short. This was an attempt to bring the budget back in balance."

$30,000 In Grants Awarded To Thomas Crane Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library will receive $30,000 in grant funds from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, it was announced recently.

More than $1.2 million in grants were awarded to 78 public, academic, school, special libraries and regional library networks across the Commonwealth under the Federal Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA).

A $20,000 grant was awarded to the Crane Library for the Community Languages program, which supports the development of English for those who speak other languages. A $10,000 grant was given for the program, "Mother Goose Asks Why," which is a literacy project that allows parents to share children's books and related science activities with their kids.

Phelan Launches Neighborhood Meetings

Mayor William Phelan will host community meetings at various neighborhood locations throughout the city this summer and fall.

Phelan and city personnel will be conducting meetings in various neighborhoods to address residents' concerns.

In addition to the community meeting, summer meetings will feature a free neighborhood barbecue hosted by Phelan.

Phelan's first neighborhood meeting will be Thursday, July 24, from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Merrymount School.

Joining Phelan at the meetings will be representatives of the Constituent Services, Police, Public Works and Health Departments.

Phelan and city personnel will also be providing informational updates of ongoing projects in each neighborhood.

"The neighborhood issues meetings will provide Quincy residents with a chance to have their concerns addressed directly by the mayor and department heads," Phelan said. "People should have direct access to their local government and I hope that this campaign helps people get their neighborhood problems solved."

Phelan hosts office hours at City Hall every Thursday afternoon from 3 to 5 p.m.

"My administration has pledged to be responsive to residents and their concerns," Phelan said. "The neighborhood meeting campaign will allow residents who may not be able to come to City Hall during the day the chance to have their concerns heard directly by the people responsible for solving them."

The neighborhood meetings schedule:

July 26: Merrymount School.

July 31: Houghs Neck Maritime Center.

Aug. 7: Fore River Clubhouse.

Aug. 21: Roche Bros.

Community Room.

Aug. 28: North Quincy Library.

Sept. 4: Montclair School.

Sept. 18: Wollaston School.

Oct. 2: Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center.

Oct. 16: Beechwood Knoll School.

Oct. 23: Squantum School.

Oct. 30: Adams Shore Library.

"Though we are a city of 88,000 people, Quincy is comprised of a series of neighborhoods that all may have unique issues," Phelan said. "It really is the neighborhood issues that drive the quality of life for our residents and I want to make sure that the residents of Quincy know that their city government is working to maintain the quality of life in their neighborhood."

For more information on the neighborhood meetings call 617-376-1990.

McCauley Rebuts QTA's Criticism Of Early Retirement Savings

Councillor Frank McCauley countered an assertion by the Quincy Taxpayers Association (QTA) that the Early Retirement Incentive would not save the city as much money as advertised.

As a means of paring down the workforce, the city adopted the Early Retirement Incentive last year. Approximately 100 city workers took advantage of the program.

McCauley stood by his recent report that concluded the city stands to save approximately $6.4 million in the first two years after adopting the measure.

Last week, QTA President Alan Cousin said the city would save only half that amount.

But McCauley said QTA failed to consider that only 17 positions were added to the budget in FY 2004.

McCauley said the 17 employees amount to less than two percent of the FY 2004 budget, so the total savings over two years will total approximately $6.4 million.

"There is no question that the Early Retirement Incentive program initiated by Mayor Phelan in June 2002 is in large part responsible for the fact that the City of Quincy has avoided layoffs and public service curtailments in FY 2004," McCauley said.

In addition, McCauley took issue with the QTA's assertion regarding the estimated total costs of the program over a 15-year period.

"While the actual cost of $5.7 million is correct, it is important to note that the Early Retirement Incentive employees would retire sooner or later, thus reducing future liabilities," McCauley said.

Business Owners Can Do Better, Phelan Says

Downtown Cleanup Effort Moving Forward

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city has shifted into high gear in an attempt to clean up Quincy Center and create a more aesthetically pleasing area, according to city officials.

After touring the downtown area on foot last week, Mayor William Phelan directed the public works and parks departments to assign city workers and summer help to tackle various cleanup projects.

Many of the tasks are part of the 26 recommendations that were handed down last month by the mayor's downtown task force.

According to DPW Commissioner Jay Fink, a number of projects are already underway. They are:

- Cleaning tree grates and removing weeds underneath;
- Painting light and sign posts;
- Cleaning sidewalks of debris and litter;
- Moving concrete flowerbeds to more aesthetically pleasing locations.

Fink said two workers each from the public works and park departments, designated as summer help, would be tackling many of the tasks. Other city employees would augment the work done by the summer help, he said.

He said much of the work on Hancock St. should be completed in time for the start of Sidewalk Festival today (Thursday).

During the one-hour excursion through the downtown area, Phelan was accompanied by Fink, Park Commissioner Tom Koch, city Traffic Engineer Roy

The group walked along Hancock St. to Cottage Ave., and then proceeded through the Hancock municipal parking lot. Officials strolled from the Parkway and Ross Way to Granite St.

Phelan stopped several times to point out his concerns and possible solutions.

Although the downtown area has improved overall, more work needs to be done, he said.

The mayor was particularly concerned with the appearance of several storefronts of downtown businesses. A few storefront windows were cracked, dirty or cluttered with signs, he observed.

Phelan commented about the need for business owners to be diligent in keeping up the appearance of their properties. He said downtown business owners should be contacted and encouraged to keep their areas clean.

"There has to be some standards, and I'm sure local business owners will be more than willing to maintain their properties," Phelan said. "We will all benefit from local businesses cleaning up their property."

Fink agreed that business

• On July 15, 1606, the great Dutch master Rembrandt van Rijn is born in Leiden. His more than 600 paintings, many of them portraits or self-portraits, are characterized by rich brushwork and color, and a dramatic interplay of shadow and light.

• On July 14, 1789, Parisian revolutionaries and mutinous troops storm and dismantle the Bastille, a royal fortress that had come to symbolize the tyranny of the Bourbon monarchs. It marked the beginning of the French Revolution, a decade of political turmoil and terror in which tens of thousands of people were executed.

School Race Heating Up; Preliminary Election Certain

The school committee race is heating up and shaping up as a third preliminary (primary) election.

Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairman of the Quincy College Board of Governors, has nomination papers out and will be the seventh candidate when she files them.

And, that will require a preliminary runoff Sept. 16 for the six spots on the final election ballot Nov. 4. Three seats are at stake.

And there could still be other contenders now that Christine Cedrone has decided not to seek re-election, creating a tempting open seat.

David McCarthy of Whitney Rd. became the sixth candidate with an announcement earlier this week that he is running. He's director of security for General Dynamics in Needham.

Incumbent Linda Stice is seeking her fourth term. Elaine Dwyer, the city council-school committee convention choice to fill out Mayor William Phelan's term on the school committee, is running to keep that seat.

Other announced candidates are Brian Buckley, Stephen Golden and Ron Iacobucci.

A Squantum resident and a Quincy attorney, Lord-Piatelli says:

"As a parent of a Quincy public school student, I believe I have an intense interest in our school system. As a graduate of the Quincy schools, I have great faith in our schools. And, as someone who truly believes in the value of public service, I believe I can make a positive contribution to the school committee."

She says she will file her papers shortly. It sets the stage for three preliminary contests Sept. 16.

Preliminary runoffs are already assured for the Ward 1 and Ward 6 city council seats.

Six candidates seek the Ward 1 seat Greg Hanley is leaving: James Bottary, Joanne Bythrow, Gretchen Grant, Joseph Keegan, former Councillor Leo Kelly and Sean McArdle.

And there are five running for the Ward 6 seat Joseph Newton is vacating: Mark Bracken, Alicia Gardner, William Keener, Maryann Mahony and Brian McNamee.

Two will be nominated in each of those wards and square off in the final election Nov. 4.

Bryan Connolly's decision not to run for a second term in Ward 4 was expected to set off a scramble for that seat.

But as of this writing there is only one official candidate, Atty. Jay Davis. Kevin Worley of Douglas St. has nomination papers but had not filed them at this writing.

If Worley does not file and no other candidate steps forward, Davis would walk unopposed into the open seat. That, in Quincy's political history, is rare with an open seat beckoning.

DAVIS

Especially in Ward 4 which can – and has been – a political hotbed in the past.

WELL, WE'LL SOON know who all the players are in this year's city election.

Deadline for filing nomination papers, reminds City Clerk Joseph Shea, is Tuesday, July 29 at 5 p.m. That's just 12 days away.

SHEA

IF YOU AREN'T a registered voter and want to cast a ballot in the Sept. 16 preliminary elections, you also have a deadline. You have until Wednesday, Aug. 27 (8 p.m.) to register at the City Election Department in City Hall.

AND IF YOU are registered and want to vote in the Sept. 16 election, but will be away that day, you can apply for an absentee ballot. Deadline for that is Monday, Sept. 15 at noon.

GOOD FRIEND Charlie Sweeney is a patient at Quincy Medical Center but expects to be going home any day now.

SWEENEY

A former long-time school committeeman, he is now on the Quincy College Board of Governors and the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars.

Charlie, who was admitted June 19 (Room 658, A Wing) has warm praise for the care he has received.

"The doctors and nurses have been great," he says. "If anyone complains about the care they get here, they'll get a good argument from me."

Charlie's daughter, Joann, had him smiling the other day when she presented him with two red roses.

There were from that famous mail order rose bush of his that several years ago miraculously produced two artificial roses. (With an assist from his better-half, Betty).

"See," he was soon telling visitors, "they're the real thing. Nothing artificial about these roses."

And, there's nothing artificial about Charlie, either. He's a genuine article. In every way.

But with one flaw. He's a damn Yankee fan. But his friends forgive him for that.

And we're all rooting for you, Charlie.

MILESTONE: You might say Sheriff Michael Bellotti and Gayle have a Yankee Doodle Dandy in the family.

He's Daniel Michael who arrived on the Fourth of July at Sturdy Memorial Hospital in Attleboro weighing in at 7 pounds, 13 ounces.

And he got a big welcome from sister, Colleen, 8, and brother, Dillon, 6.

Scenes From Yesterday

Dance Hall, Houghs Neck, Quincy, Mass.

across America pay for their signs as long as the name Moxie was a prominent part of it. This large ballroom was a popular summer tourist attraction for many years; it later became known as Taylor's Ballroom and Bowling Alleys and then it became DiMarzio's Roller Skating Rink.

Sheriff's Electronic Incarceration Program Receives National Accreditation

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Electronic Incarceration Program is the first in the Northeast and one of only four in the nation to be accredited by the American Correctional Association (ACA), Sheriff Michael Bellotti announces.

National accreditation awards released this month also show that Bellotti's "bracelet program" was the only one to be 100 percent compliant with ACA standards — the national benchmark for correctional centers across the United States.

"We're proud to carry this distinction," Bellotti said.

"And we will continue to distinguish ourselves in community corrections and electronic incarceration. Today's public safety challenges demand it.

"As jail overcrowding continues to be an issue even as thousands of offenders are being released into our neighborhoods, better utilization of parole and probation systems are coming to the fore in public safety.

"Dedication to new ideas in public safety are necessary if we're going to build upon the success of crime-fighting initiatives we saw in the 1990s."

Community Corrections is a collaborative venture between the Sheriff's Office, the courts, probation and parole.

Currently, the state Office of Community Corrections operates 22 community corrections centers under contract with the state's 14 sheriffs.

These centers are designed to provide judges with a viable alternative to incarceration, thereby alleviating overcrowding and freeing up valuable jail space for violent offenders.

In Norfolk County, the Sheriff's Community Corrections Center is responsible for the operation of the Electronic Incarceration Program.

It also conducts random drug testing, substance abuse treatment and basic education classes to create meaningful structure and accountability for lower-level offenders who might otherwise be incarcerated.

In addition to the bracelet program, the Sheriff's Correctional Center in Dedham, which houses the county jail and house of correction, also scored highly during its re-accreditation process with an overall score of 97.8 percent.

The Correctional Center has been in compliance since 1996, when the ACA conducted its first audit of the jail and house of correction. The ACA review process takes place every three years on a voluntary basis. The standards reflect practical up-to-date policies and procedures.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Buyers' Strike Looms Over Meat Prices

Shoppers in Quincy Square gathered outside local food stores to discuss plans for a "buyer's strike."

As the first shipments of meat came into the city, shoppers began lining at meat counters, but boycotted the meat when prices were posted.

With steaks selling at $1.20 a per pound and roast at 89 cents per pound, the average family was expected to be back eating fish again this week.

NURSES TO REQUEST PAY INCREASE

Request for a pay increase for hospital nurses was scheduled to be presented before a special meeting of the City Council this week.

According to Helen Potter, director of the Nursing School, wages at Quincy City Hospital were about $10 a month lower than the schedule recommended by the state nurses' association.

The present scale began at $100 a month and increased to $110 at the end of the year.

QUINCY'S NUMBER ONE POLICEMAN RETIRES

Patrolman Henry Thorne, Quincy's oldest police officer in both years and point of service, retired this week, on his 70th birthday. He had served the city for 44 years.

Thorne had been stationed in City Hall for the past 11 years and was one of the best known police officers on the South Shore.

He joined the force in 1904 as a special officer. He was made a reserve officer and finally in 1906 was made permanent.

His biggest night came when he arrested 14 "drunks" in Quincy Point.

Mayor Charles Ross passed up a box seat at the All-Star Game at Fenway Park so he could pay tribute to Thomas at City Hall ceremonies.

Amelia Earhart 106th Birthday Party At Beechwood Center

The Aviation History Info Center will host an informal 106th birthday party for Amelia Earhart tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at Beechwood on the Bay, celebrating her life and early flying days at Dennison Airport.

Earhart, who was born in Kansas on July 24, 1897, made the first official flight from Dennison Airport when it opened in 1927 at the corner of Quincy Shore Drive and East Squantum Street, current site of the Aviation History Info Center.

The birthday celebration will emphasize her Quincy days with a display of original pictures, a special video and the taped recording of a speech she made before a Rotary group on Boston in 1928 or 1929.

"We will reveal her favorite recipe, too," said Sharon Beals, director of the Beechwood on the Bay Community Center. "She never claimed to be much of a cook but she had two favorite recipes."

"We will also have yellow balloons in memory of her first airplane, which was painted yellow."

A number of old timers

who recalled the days of Dennison Airport, which went out of business in 1941, will be on hand, including Frank DeLear of Centerville, a longtime Quincy journalist and air historian.

"Frank's brother was the chief pilot at Dennison Airport," said Beals, "and he once had breakfast and lunch with Charles Lindbergh."

The Amelia Earhart birthday party is open to the public.

Childrens' Activities At Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library will be sponsoring several activities for children during the summer season.

Art To Go - a program for children of all ages. Projects are open-ended so that a toddler can complete them with an adult's help and older children can express their creativity through design and detail.

Craft time is from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Main Library on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays. This week's project involves making and framing your own masterpiece.

Tiny Tot Tunes - Registration for the August 1 program begins on Monday, July 21. This program is for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult. Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. Visit the library or call 617-376-2411 to register. A diversity of styles such as classical, rock, jazz, and blues are presented, exposing children to the sounds, scales instrument and rhythms of diverse ethnic groups.

16th Annual Summer Storytellers Series - In keeping with this year's arts theme, the performers will include music, dance and puppetry with their stories. These programs are for school-age audience. Five-year-olds just entering kindergarten may prefer the Pajama Time programs. Both programs are presented at the Main Library in Quincy Center on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and do not require registration. Storyteller Carolyn Martino makes her Quincy debut on July 22 with Stories from Stuff. Ms. Martino's interactive repertoire of multicultural folktales, literary and original stories, humorous tales of wit and wisdom, songs and jokes, will delight and inspire.

Pajama Time is a drop in storytime presented by Storyteller Cheryl Dunford that includes stories, songs, rhymes and a simple craft. Children are welcome to attend in pajamas. This program is a complement to the Storytellers Series for older children so that younger siblings or children too young for the other program can have a story all their own. Pajama Time is intended for children ages 2-5.

Family Book Bingo - A new program this summer for the whole family. When your family registers between now and Aug. 15, you will each receive a bingo card. After each family member has completed a bingo card, return all the cards to the library. As a prize for playing your family will receive a bright green Read! Think! Create! book pack, while supplies last. Each family will also receive a summer reading certificate.

For more information about these programs please visit the Thomas Crane Public Library's website at <http://ci.quincy.ma.us/tepl/>.

Treasures Program To Tour Organic Farm

The Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures program will host a free tour of the organic vegetable farm on Long Island Wednesday, July 23, at 6 p.m.

Participants will be able to observe spectacular views of Quincy Bay while learning about organic gardening from the farm manager, Jean-Claude Bourrut.

Preregistration is required by calling 617-472-0799 before Tuesday, July 22, at 8 p.m. Leave name and phone number on answering machine.

North Quincy Class Of '48 Planning 3-Day Reunion

The North Quincy High School Class of 1948 will hold its 55th anniversary reunion Wednesday through Friday, Oct. 15 to 17, at several locations around its old hometown.

There will be a reception Wednesday, Oct. 15, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Adams Inn on Hancock Street, North Quincy.

Classmates will go on a twilight cruise of Boston Harbor Wednesday from 5 to 8 p.m., boarding the boat at Marina Bay.

A bus tour of Quincy is on the docket for Thursday, Oct. 16, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., especially for those members of the class who moved away from the city.

A banquet will be held Thursday evening starting at 5 p.m. at Rafael's in the State Street South area of North Quincy. Cost is $50 per person.

Friday, Oct. 17, the reunion group will tour North Quincy High School, where Peter Crisom, a member of the Class of '48, was once principal.

Any classmate who has not been notified of the reunion should contact Lorraine Rooney at 617-328-6322 or Millie Johnson at 617-328-4775.

The reunion committee is seeking the whereabouts of these "missing" members of the class:

Warren Andrews, Irving Ayers, Robert Beckett, Margaret Birmingham, Robert Blackwood, Marilyn Bryan Moore, Janet Cadigan Daly, Kenneth Campbell, Eugene Chafe, Phyllis Dolan, Barbara Duggan Marotta.

David Sawyer Installed As Quincy Lions Club President

David Sawyer was recently installed as president of the Quincy Lions Club at the club's installation dinner held at The Neighborhood Club.

Other officers serving during the 2003-2004 administrative year are:

Youssef Abdouh, first vice president; Jennifer Logue, second vice president; Joyce Hogan, third vice president; Elaine duJardin, treasurer; and Denis Tardo, secretary.

The installations were conducted by Lions Club District Cabinet Secretary Treasurer Doreen Martel.

Sawyer, who succeeds Christine Cedrone as club president, praised Cedrone and the Lions Club for their continuing efforts to fight blindness and to aid blind and visually impaired individuals. He shared the story of Thomas, a Quincy teen whose serious vision impairment prevented him from going to the movies, driving to his job, playing sports and otherwise participating in typical teen activities.

With the help of the Quincy Lions Club, however, Thomas's family was able to purchase specialized optical equipment that has enabled him to participate in those activities and, in Thomas's words, feel like a "regular kid."

"Thomas's story is a perfect example of why I care so much about Lionism," Sawyer said. "It's why I spend a Saturday working at the Lions Club Run/Walk for Sight or a Sunday morning serving pancakes at our annual pancake breakfast. We change people's lives."

Sawyer noted that the installation began with a thought for the day: "It is better to light one small candle than to curse the darkness."

"As Lions, we must continue to raise funds so that we can continue to light the small candles," he said.

Sawyer, 33, is vice president of Eastern Investment Advisors, the Trust and Management Division of Eastern Bank. He lives in Franklin with his wife, Lisa, and their daughter, Allyson.

With more than 1.4 million members around the world, Lions Clubs International is the largest service organization in the world. The Quincy Lions Club, established in 1941, has served the local community for more than 60 years.

In addition to collecting used eyeglasses for repair and distribution in developing countries, the Quincy Lions Club raises funds to provide eye exams and new eyeglasses for area residents, college scholarships for local high school students and to fund eye research at the nation's leading hospitals and research facilities.

David McCarthy Candidate For School Committee

David McCarthy of 48 Whitney Road is a candidate for the Quincy school committee.

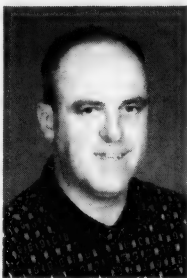

McCarthy has his nomination papers in circulation and says he will soon file them.

He is the director of security at General Dynamics in Needham where he has been employed nearly 20 years.

He is a member of the Quarry Hills Golf Course Advisory Board and is active in St. John's baseball league where he is a coach and in the basketball league.

He is a member of the YMCA basketball league committee for St. John's.

McCarthy was one of the candidates seeking to fill the remaining two years on William Phelan's school committee term after the latter was elected mayor. A joint convention of the city council and school committee elected Elaine Dwyer.

McCarthy was selected in December, 2001 to carry the Olympic Torch in Massachusetts, sponsored by family and friends.

McCarthy graduated from Boston College High School in 1979 and the University of Massachusetts in 1983 with a Bachelor of Science degree in criminal justice.

He was recently honored this year by Boston College High School with the St. Ignatius Loyola Award, the highest honor bestowed upon an alumnus.

McCarthy and his wife, Rosanne, are the parents of seven children ages 4 through 11, all of whom are in the Quincy public school system.

Hancock St. Closed During Sidewalk Festival

QTA President Urges 'No' Vote On New QHS

Alan Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, has urged residential taxpayers to ask their city councillors to vote against any bond order for a new Quincy High School.

Cousin said the combined project to build a new high school and renovate the old one as a middle school will cost a total of $110.5 million, only 60 per cent of which will be reimbursed by the state.

The result, he said, would be a direct cost of $44.2 million to the taxpayer.

"For one thing," said Cousin, "there are unreimbursable costs exceeding $14 million. For another, the state's reimbursement is based on a formula of so many allowable square feet per student."

Cousin said the existing high school is still usable, although it may require extensive repairs and capital improvements.

Also, he said, the city needs to do something about the deteriorating Central Middle School, but doesn't need a new high school.

More important, he added, no one has ever fully analyzed alternatives to building a new high school.

"No one has analyzed the costs and reimbursements for building a new Central," he said. "No one has fairly analyzed the costs and reimbursements for renovating the existing Central."

Keenan Urges Mayor To Act On Study Of Fire Department

Councillor John Keenan has called on Mayor William Phelan to act on the city council's resolve for a comprehensive study of the Quincy Fire Department.

Keenan, who introduced the resolve April 22, sent a letter to Phelan urging him to take action.

Keenan noted that at the June 2 council meeting he asked Fire Chief Paul O'Connell, William Arienti, president of the Quincy Firefighters Local 792, and Tom Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, if they would commit to the study request and they said they would.

The council passed the resolve June 16.

Keenan said he wrote to Phelan because nearly three months have elapsed since the resolve was introduced and one month since it was approved.

The resolve calls for the mayor, the fire chief, Local 792 and a designee of the city council to update the study framework and:

- Send out a request seeking detailed innovative proposals for a comprehensive study of the Fire Department.
- The study to include, but not be limited to, an evaluation of fire station locations, staffing patterns (crew sizes) and emergency medical response.

• The study also to seek recommendations that will result in the city efficiently and effectively meeting fire suppression and emergency service needs.

In the letter to Phelan, Keenan pointed out that since he introduced the resolve, the council passed a proposed ordinance requiring minimum staffing and response time standards. The proposed ordinance calls for the minimum standards to be phased in by July 1, 2009.

Keenan said the cost estimates of implementing the proposed ordinance, the asserted need for additional firefighters, and the predictions of station closings have been made with consideration of making changes in the Fire Department.

"I have respectfully disagreed with figures and assertions," wrote Keenan. He said that just to add 40 firefighters would be to accept the status quo and would be to ignore the need for, and results of, a comprehensive study of the department.

Keenan urged Phelan to convene a meeting of the individuals designated to prepare and disseminate his fire study proposal. In a separate letter to Council President Daniel Raymond, Keenan requested that he be designated as the council's representative on the fire study committee. Even if he is not the council's designee to the committee, Keenan has pledged to help the mayor, the council and the committee in any way possible.

To get the study process started right away, "will ensure that the city's fire department meets minimum standards as required by July 1, 2009, and provides for the public's safety in a planned operationally and fiscally efficient manner," wrote Keenan.

Jay Davis Files Papers For Ward 4 City Council Seat

Jay Davis has filed his nomination papers with the city Election Department as a candidate for the open Ward 4 city council seat.

Davis submitted 170 signatures which he said he personally gathered by knocking on doors. Only 50 signatures are required.

Davis said he decided to run for the seat in early June after incumbent Bryan Connolly announced he would not seek reelection.

"Bryan's announcement took many of us by surprise," Davis said, "so compared to some races in other wards, this race is off to a late start. By collecting signatures in persons as I have done, I am getting a good sense of the concerns of the Ward 4 voters. I look forward to continue knocking on doors to talk with friends and neighbors and to introduce myself to those who I have not yet met."

Davis, 38, lives at 33 Shawmut St. with his wife,

Honor, and their two daughters, Madison and Meghan. He is the managing partner of a Quincy Center-based law firm, Graeber, Davis and Cantwell, PC.

"My campaign is now fully operational," Davis said. "I have knocked on several hundred doors. We have already sent out our first mailing. Visibilities will begin this week and my campaign kickoff will be held Thursday night."

Davis campaign kickoff fundraiser will be held tonight (Thursday) from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Common Market Restaurant. The suggested donation is $25. Tickets are available at the door.

Phelan To Discuss Homeland Security

Mayor William Phelan will discuss Homeland Security in Quincy Friday, July 18, at 2:30 p.m. at the Marina Bay Skilled Nursing & Rehabilitation Center, 2 Seaport Drive, North Quincy.

His topic will include the measures Quincy's Fire, Police and Emergency Management Departments have taken to ensure the safety of Quincy residents in times of emergency.

Joining Phelan will be Emergency Management Director Tom Gorman, the former fire chief, who will display one of the city's new emergency trailers designed to bring equipment to the emergency site.

Residents are welcome to inspect the trailer and question Gorman.

Quincy Tourism At 'All Time High'

mayor's director of operations and a member of the tourism board.

Although it may not appear that the board has accomplished much, the city is in a much better position to promote tourism than a year ago, said Priscella. The board is working on a strong marketing plan, as well as a blueprint to link many of the city's businesses and attractions with the trolley service, she said.

"It may not seem that progress is being made, but a foundation has been put into place that will bear fruit in the coming year," she said. "You have to have the organization, the infrastructure, a branded image and a marketing campaign. These are things we can do in the short term. We have made more progress than most groups do in a year's time."

Peak said the kiosk, which first opened last fall, has been very helpful.

"As a visitor, there is nothing more frustrating than to visit somewhere and not know where to go," said Peak, a board member. "The kiosk has been very successful in directing visitors to Quincy's attractions."

Priscella said she expects approximately 300 visitors to the kiosk per month.

Events such as the Babe Ruth World Series and the Quincy Landmarks Concert Series will attract a large influx of visitors and business to the area, she said.

"We have not seen a decrease in tourism—quite the opposite, we have seen a marked increase in the number of visitors to the city," said Priscella.

Expanding the trolley service would help to ferry visitors to many different locations, including hotels and Marina Bay, said Peak. The board would have to foot the bill for any expansion, she said. Currently, the trolley takes visitors from the Quincy Center visitors center to the park.

Three new trolleys will replace one already in use, she said. The new trolleys are not on the road yet as she searches for an outside vendor to operate them. Peak said the board is seeking help from other historical organizations that may benefit from utilizing trolley service. They may be able to chip in to help pay for a route expansion, she said.

Giblin said expanding the trolley service to include hotels would boost tourism.

Michael McGurl, representing the Harbor Express in Quincy and also a board member, said linking the water transportation service to the trolley is a good idea.

"This would be a huge opportunity for tourism," he said. "After people take the Harbor Express they need transportation to the Quincy sites." McGurl said the Harbor Express regularly promotes tours for students and senior citizens.

Quincy Tourism Inc., however, is still operating without an executive director.

Priscella said the job will not be filled until the board raises more money.

"It was the board's opinion that we need more money," said Priscella. "We have a limited stream of dedicated income coming from the hotel/motel tax. Devoting the entire amount of those funds to pay for a director's salary would not be beneficial at this time."

Priscella said the tourism board would need approximately $200,000 annually to sustain an effective program. "To hire a director and conduct all the marketing, that is the least amount we would need," she said. To date, approximately $60,000 has been collected from the city's hotel/motel tax, she said.

Approximately 15 percent of the money raised from the hotel/motel tax is dedicated to promoting tourism.

She said the board is also examining alternative ways of raising money, such as offering advertising space to business owners for a Quincy services brochure.

"The brochure would be similar to the 'Historic Quincy' insert," said Priscella.

The city is also promoting the Second Annual Mayor's Garden Party, which is designed to raise money for tourism.

Galligan, who sits on the board, said the body has accomplished much since its inception.

"In all the years I've been involved with it, this is the first effort that is devoted to nothing but tourism," he said. "We have done a number of things in the past 24 months that have never been done before. We have the best staff of folks I've ever worked with regarding tourism."

He said Quincy's efforts have been hampered because the city is not part of the Regional Tourism Council

A GRAND RE-OPENING — Members of Quincy Tourism Inc., the board entrusted with attracting visitors to the city, mark the re-opening of the Visitors Information kiosk in front of City Hall on Monday. The booth will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The members are, from the left: Kristin Priscella, Mayor William Phelan's director of operations; Bob Galligan, innkeeper at the Best Western Adams Inn; Attorney Ed Fleming; Anne Mahoney of Cyclone Design; Sue Canavan of Aura Salon; kiosk volunteer Rita Huber; Mike McGurl of the Harbor Express; Joanne Dondoro, owner of Abigail's Crossing; Elaine Dujardin from South Coastal Bank; Mark Bertman, owner of Rogers Jewelers; Dave Giblin, general manager of the Boston Marriott Quincy hotel; Ed Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society; Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park; and Ed Keohane, owner of Keohane Funeral Home and president of The Quincy Partnership. Maralin Manning photo.

(RTC), which secures state taxpayer funds for tourism. Quincy dropped out of the program during the 1970s, Galligan said.

He said cities and towns like Salem and Plymouth derive funding from the RTC, which gives them a distinct advantage over Quincy.

In the meantime, Galligan said the board will be seeking matching funds, grants and donations from the Massachusetts Office of Travel and Tourism, the Greater Boston Convention Bureau, and private corporations such as Ford and Dupont.

"Instead of rushing out there we have taken our time to build a strong base so we can succeed as we go along," said Galligan. "We are beginning to build our coffers, and we will be applying for those funding mechanisms as best we can."

Galligan said a greater portion of the city's hotel/motel tax should have been earmarked for tourism. But he praised City Council President Dan Raymond, the city council, and the Phelan administration for drafting and implementing the tax.

Many Families Unknowingly Qualify For WIC Assistance

Women, infants and children under the age of 5 may qualify for the Women Infants and Children (WIC) program but not realize they're eligible.

WIC assists many families struggling to make ends meet, especially in these tough economic times. WIC's income guidelines have recently increased making it possible for a family of four with a gross weekly income of $655 to qualify for the program.

Qualified applicants will receive checks for nutritious food such as milk, eggs, juice, cereal, peanut butter and infant formula that can be used at local stores. These checks can save an average family $45 a month on groceries.

Quincy WIC is located across the street from Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St. There are also sites in Hull, Weymouth, Norwood, Foxboro and Randolph.

Three-Day Event Opens Today

33rd Sidewalk Festival In Quincy Center

Food, entertainment and bargains will transform Quincy Center into an outdoor bazaar during the 33rd annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival, which begins today (Thursday) and runs through Saturday.

Sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA), the three-day event will be held on Hancock St., which will be closed to vehicular traffic from Granite St. up to Hancock Ct.

Once again, shoppers and residents will be able to stroll down Hancock St. dotted with some 85 canopied booth and turned into a pedestrian mall, leisurely looking over merchandise in front of stores and at vendors and crafters' booths.

"Summer has been a long time coming, and we knew it really arrived when sidewalk time was upon us," said Maralin Manning, QCBPA executive director. "This event each year makes Quincy a must place to visit during the summer season. No one will be disappointed this year."

Manning said the festival provides a great opportunity for the local workforce to enjoy their lunchtime dining or shopping.

Entertainment and other activities are scheduled from 11:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. today and tomorrow, and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

Featured performers for this year's festival are:

Matthias Lupri Group, today, from 12 noon to 2 p.m., sponsored by South Shore Savings Bank. Visitors will be entertained by the group's vibraphone sound on original jazz renditions.

Back Eddy Bluegrass group, tonight, from 5 to 7 p.m., sponsored by 3 Phase Elevator Company & East-ern Bank.

Also performing today are: Pickles the Clown, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., sponsored by the Stop & Shop Companies; and Suzy Q, Suzanne Lockwood, from 2 to 4 p.m., sponsored by the Flatley Company.

Jah Spirit, tomorrow, from 5 to 7 p.m., sponsored by Norfolk Electric Company. Enjoy dynamic and spirited reggae sounds during this early evening show.

Also performing tomorrow are: Pickles the Clown, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., sponsored by the Bank of Canton; KISS-108 FM, broadcasting live from 12 noon to 2 p.m., sponsored by Papa Gino's; and Suzy Q, Suzanne Lockwood, from 2 to 4 p.m., sponsored by State Street Corp.

The Forbes Irish Step

PICKLES THE CLOWN, a crowd pleaser, will be back for this year's Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival.

Dancers, Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 12 noon, sponsored by the Flatley Company.

Part Time Lovers, Saturday, from 2 to 4 p.m., sponsored by Sherman Realty. This energetic band will feature slick, polished Chicago-style blues.

Also performing Saturday are: Pickles the Clown, from 12 noon to 2 p.m., sponsored by Stop & Shop Companies; and the NE Reptile and Raptor Exhibit by Marla, from 1 to 2 p.m., sponsored by the Bank of Canton and Stop & Shop Companies.

In addition, the sidewalk festival will feature Race-A-Way Motorsports for those who wish to experience the thrill of a NASCAR driver. A large track with six controlled racing units and complete with full size steering wheel and speed throttle will be on site. From time to time, surprise authentic winning drivers will be on hand during the event.

There will be daily demonstrations by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Dog Sniffing Team, as well as the students of Jae Kim's Tae Kwon Do.

A FAMILY FAVORITE, the 33rd annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival, begins today (Thursday) and runs through Saturday. Hancock Street will be transformed into a pedestrian mall for the event which is sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA).

Return Yogurt Lids For Adams Park At Festival

Folks who have been collecting specially marked lids from Colombo Yogurt cups to aid the Adams National Historical Park will be able to turn them in for credit at the Roger's Jewelry booth at the Sidewalk Festival that starts today (Thursday) in Quincy Center.

Bob and Ann Colombosian, members of the founding family of Colombo Yogurt, are pledged to contribute 20 cents for every lid turned in with the money going to repair the deteriorating Adams' copy of the Declaration of Independence.

The goal is enough caps returned at 20 cents each to raise $100,000, with whatever is left over from repair of the Declaration going to rehabilitate some of the other artifacts that are preserved at the Old House.

Clean lids can also be brought to the Adams National Historical Park, 135 Adams St., Quincy, or mailed to Preserve Our Heritage, Box 2317, Maple Plain, MN 55592-2317. That's the home of General Mills, Colombo's parent company.

PICKLES THE CLOWN, a crowd pleaser, will be back for this year's Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival.

Century 21 Abigail Adams Agency Designated Fines Homes & Estate Brokerage

CENTURY 21 Real Estate Corporation announces that CENTURY 21 Abigail Adams Agency has earned the distinction of a Fine Homes & Estates office.

"This is both a wonderful achievement and huge accolade for our office to earn this designation," said Jayne Magown, Broker/Owner of CENTURY 21 Abigail Adams. "Participating in the Fine Homes & Estates program enables us to offer the upscale consumer our Pinacle Award Quality Service we are known for while adressing the specific needs of this market segment."

"We have access to specialized marketing tools to assist in effectively planning a marketing campaign for upscale homes and luxury properties," said Sandra Fennelly, sales manager. "The program is highly comprehensive targeting the higher end consumer by introducing properties to potential buyers in such publications as the Wall Street Journal, Boston Magazine and CENTURY 21 House & Home. In addition we will be using the Fine Homes & Estates logo and yard signs to distinguish those properties participating in the program," Fennelly said.

For more information about the Fine Homes & Estates program available on the South Shore and offered by CENTURY 21 Abigail Adams, call the office at 617-471-7575.

Neighborhood Housing Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in collaboration with Brockton Housing Partnership, will sponsor a First-Time Homebuyer Workshop Saturday, Aug. 9.

The workshop will be held from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Uniti Credit Union, 115 Commercial St., Brockton. Lunch will be provided.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend. Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate related professionals.

Downpayment grants up to $10,000 per family are available. Participants must complete this workshop to qualify for grant programs.

Advanced registration is required. For more information call 617-770-2227, ext. 31, or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Jack Conway & Co. Honors Top Producers At Quincy Office

Jack Conway & Co. recently announced its top producer awards to recognize the agents in each sales office who excelled in listing and selling homes during May 2003.

In the Quincy office,

Cheryl Keohane was the Top Seller and Daniel Desmond was the Top Lister for the month.

"We're very proud of these agents and their accomplishments," said Conway President Richard F.

Cahill. "They are involved in their communities and give quality service to buyers and sellers across the region."

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 710 associates in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. In 2003, the company was ranked 77th in the nation among real estate firms in the annual Power Broker survey, compiled and published by National Relocation and Real Estate magazine.

Trees Too Close To Power Lines Can Pose Dangers

The Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI) and the American Public Power Association (APPA) remind homeowners about dangers associated with trees planted too close to power lines.

Power outages can occur and dangerous shock hazards can develop if tree limbs touch electric wires or if branches fall on the utility line.

"Trees can also hinder utility repair work and recognition of a hazard," warns ESFI Executive Director Michael G. Clendenin. "Recently in Indiana, a landscaper was killed and a responding police officer was severely injured after accidentally contacting a downed power line hidden in the branches of a tree."

"Utility workers had repaired a downed line around the corner the night before but did not realize there was a second downed line, and neither the landscaper nor the police officer saw the line before contacting it."

For that reason, ESFI and APPA recommend that only naturally low-growing trees should be planted under or near overhead utility wires.

To prevent trees from interfering with power lines, ESFI recommends that homeowners call the local utility or a tree-trimming professional to prune problematic tree limbs. Trimming trees near power lines can be very dangerous and should be handled only by trained professionals.

Children should be advised against climbing trees that are located close to power lines. "It takes only 10 to 40 milliamps for serious injury and even death to occur, Clendenin said. "Utility power lines can carry thousands of volts, nearly ensuring death to the victim."

For other electrical safety tips call 703-841-3229.

Your Lawn

Cutting Remarks To Keep Your Grass On The Grow

(NAPS) — For the grass to be greener on your side of the fence, here are a few facts that may grow on you:

- Water early in the day so the grass blades stay moist.
- Control weeds. Apply herbicide to grassy weeds, such as crabgrass, in the spring, and to broadleaf weeds, like dandelions, in the fall.
- Avoid fertilizer overdose — even good medicine harms when used improperly.
- Follow the One-Third Rule. Cut only a third of the grass blade at each mowing and leave the clippings. They contain important nutrients.
- Keep the cutting blade sharp. A dull blade can shred your grass, leaving it vulnerable to disease.

If you have a lot of lawn to mow (or just hope to someday), you may be glad to know about the first zero-turn mower with optional PowerLink that generates up to 1000 watts of continuous AC electric power (1500 watts intermittent). Zero-turn lets the machine pivot through 180 degrees without leaving a circle of uncut grass. That means more maneuverability for reaching tight spaces and getting closer to trees, edging and other obstacles, greater speed, easier handling and more sure-footedness.

The new Bob-Cat LEO zero-turn mower is built using the same rugged, commercial-grade design that made Bob-Cat mowers popular with professionals. The mower offers homeowners a choice of 17.5, 18 or 25 HP engine and side discharge-mowing decks designed to handle tough mowing jobs. Standard features include a padded, high-back, vinyl covered seat, cup holder, electric ignition and clutch, hydrostatic transmission and five-gallon fuel tank.

The PowerLink option, which is standard on the 25 HP, provides the convenience of portable power to run tools, lights or use as a back-up generator. Owners can hook right up to the lawn mower instead of running extension cords or hauling an additional generator to a job when they need to run electrical tools such as hedge trimmers, blowers, power drills and saws. In addition, PowerLink can work as a back-up generator running appliances and sump pumps, in emergency situations.

Additional information is available at www.jacobsen.com.

Tips To Keep Weeds Out Of Your Lawn

By Lance Walheim
Fox News USA

(NU) — Why control weeds?

According to the Lawn Institute, homeowners may realize up to a 15 percent increase in property value from a well-maintained lawn and landscape. But weeds can really make a lawn look bad. They not only reduce curb appeal, they rob the lawn of nourishment and moisture. So how do you keep weeds from taking over your lawn?

The best way to keep weeds out is to have a balanced lawn care program. Here are some tips on keeping your lawn weed free:

- Water properly. Over- or under-watering invites weeds. If you look behind you and see footprints in your grass, it's time to water — about 1 to 2 inches per week in mid-summer, usually broken up into two or three applications. Water early in the morning to avoid lawn diseases.
- Fertilize. Feed warm-season grasses in late spring and summer and cool-season grasses in the fall and spring.

- Mow frequently. Set your mower at the proper height for your type of lawn grass. Cut it too low and you'll weaken the lawn, inviting weeds. Mow the lawn when the grass reaches one-third higher than the recommended mowing height.

Still, the weeds do have a way of getting in your yard despite your best attempts to prevent them, especially after extreme cold or drought. Do you know what kind of weed are in your lawn?

Most weeds fall into two categories: broadleaf weeds, like dandelions and clover, and grassy weeds, like crabgrass. The trouble is, traditional lawn weed killers only kill one of the two types of weeds. But Bayer Advanced Lawn has introduced a product that kills both types of weeds with one application.

Bayer Advanced Lawn

All-In-One Weed Killer kills lawn weeds plus crabgrass in one easy step. It eliminates more than 200 broadleaf and grassy weeds including dandelions and crabgrass. The ready-to-use formulation has SmartTrack, a nonstaining red-colored marker that lets you know which weeds you've sprayed and which ones you haven't.

Bayer Advanced Lawn Southern Weed Killer With Trimec is designed specifically to control broadleaf weeds in Southern lawns. It kills more than 200 listed weeds including dandelions, dollarweed and clover.

You can learn more about caring for your lawn and garden and about discounts on various Bayer Advanced products by visiting www.bayeradvanced.com or by calling 1-877-BAYERAL.

Lance Walheim is a gardening expert for Bayer Advanced products.

Morrisette Makes Playoffs, Quincy Out

By CHRIS POISSON

The Morrisette and Quincy baseball teams could've have starred in the movie "Trading Places" with the way the final week of the season shaped up in American Legion District 6 action.

At the beginning of last week, Quincy rested comfortably in third place — the highest in recent memory — with an 8-4-1 record. Meanwhile, Morrisette had a 4-7-2 mark and seemed in danger of missing the playoffs for the third straight season.

Heading down the stretch, however, each team's season flip-flopped. Morrisette (9-8-2) reeled off five wins in six games while Quincy (8-10-1) dropped six straight. And it all came to an end Monday night at Kincaide Park when Morrisette topped Quincy, 6-3, locking up a postseason berth while knocking Quincy out of playoff contention.

"The kids put it together the last couple of weeks and played real nice ball," said Morrisette manager Ray Cattaneo. "They just started believing in themselves. We've been getting good pitching, defense and hitting. We're looking all right and I think we're going to surprise some teams in the playoffs."

Morrisette played its final game of the regular season Tuesday afternoon at Milton. If it defeated Milton or if West Roxbury lost its final game, Morrisette would move up from the No. 5 to the No. 4 seed in the playoffs.

The top five teams in District 6 East play the top five teams in District 6 West. The playoff match-ups were announced yesterday (Wednesday) with the opening round scheduled to begin Friday.

In Monday's showdown, John Folino went the distance for the win, scattering three runs on nine hits while striking out five and walking three.

Morrisette jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the second inning. Ray Marchand ripped a two-out, two-run single that scored Neal Gavin (single) and Tom Hughes (reached on error). Liam Powers followed with an RBI single, stole second base and scored on Steve Priscella's single.

In the third, Morrisette tacked on a pair of runs without a hit. Don Cook walked and stole second and Brian O'Hanley was intentionally walked. Both runners moved up on an errant pickoff throw and both scored on wild pitches while Gavin was at the plate.

Quincy's Dennis Thomson relieved Dean Sandomato and shut down Morrisette over the final three innings, allowing only a hit.

Unfortunately, the offense managed only single runs in the fourth, sixth and seventh innings. Kevin Richardson scored on a wild pitch, Thomson stroked an RBI single that scored Drew Loud and Steve Sullivan knocked in Mike Feetham with a sacrifice fly.

"I'm happy for the older kids that aren't coming back next year," Cattaneo said. "This is their third year with me and it's the first time they've made the playoffs."

Morrisette suffered a 4-2 loss to Weymouth Sunday but won four games prior to that. It swept a doubleheader against Cohasset last Saturday (18-3, 11-5), blanked Quincy, 4-0, last Thursday and pulled out a 6-5 win over Canton last Tuesday.

Youth Baseball, City To Host Jimmy Fund Tourney July 24-27

Quincy Youth Baseball and the city of Quincy will host the third annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament July 24-27 at Mitchell/McCoy and Faxon fields.

More than 24 teams of 10- to 12-year-old players from surrounding communities are scheduled to play. There will be lots of food, candy, baked goods and raffles.

Point Panthers Football, Cheerleading Registration

The Quincy Point Panthers will hold football and cheerleading registration Saturday from 9 to 11 a.m. at the rear of the Fore River Clubhouse on Nevada Road.

Registration fee is $85. The Panthers' territory is south of Quincy High School and east of the MBTA train tracks including Penns Hill section.

For more information call Tom Ford at 617-479-9475.

HALFWAY SAFE?

The tread on your vehicle's tires can give up a significant amount of grip before they are even halfway worn. This poses a potentially worrisome problem. During a study by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, at least half of the vehicles checked had at least one tire with half-worn tread. Another ten percent of the cars, pickup trucks, vans, and sport-utility vehicles that were checked had at least one bald tire. This problem is particularly troubling on wet roads, where the grooves in the tread are not sufficiently deep to effectively channel water away from beneath the tread. As a result, the tread skims the watery surface (hydroplaning) and no longer responds to the steering wheel. Tires are a critical part of your car's safety system and should be replaced when worn. Our ASE Certified service technicians here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum efficiency, performance, and safety. Sunoco an most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. HINT: A tire is considered bald when one or more of its grooves reaches 2/32 of an inch deep, compared with about 10/32 of an inch for new tires.

Quincy Medical Center's 14th annual Golf and Tennis Classic held at the Wollaston Golf Club in Milton raised more than $167,000 to benefit the medical center's Simon C. Fireman Diagnostic Imaging Center for Women.

The day-long festivities, including a golf and tennis tourney, an awards presentation, and dinner and auction, raised 25 percent more than last year's event.

"The unprecedented support of Quincy Medical Center's 14th annual Golf and Tennis Classic from the business and civic community is like a hole-in-one for the people of the South Shore," said Christine Schuster, president and CEO.

The event is an important component of QMC's capital campaign, which was launched with a $1 million challenge grant from the

Adams Field Renovations Moving On Tight Schedule

By CHRIS POISSON

It's a pennant race between time and man.

In 29 days the 2003 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series is scheduled to begin at Adams Field in Merrymount Park with opening ceremonies and a three-game slate.

A big question, though: Will the renovations at Adams Field be completed for the Aug. 15-23 tournament?

"It's going to be close, but we'll pull it off," said Tom Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"I wish we had a little more time to get it done. Another month would be great. We're working with the Babe Ruth Committee to make sure we meet the requirements. We'll meet the minimum standards at least. Hopefully when the first game is played there won't be signs saying 'Wet Paint.'"

Most of the work is being done by city personnel in an effort to save the city money, and local union plumbers, electricians, mason and carpenters are volunteering with the project.

With the deadline just around the corner the project crew can't afford to miss any days, as it has worked right through the Fourth of July weekend and during rain last Friday morning.

"Everything is on a tight schedule," Koch said. "We're doing a lot of the work in-house. I can't say enough about the Park Department and the construction crew. It's a testament to the skills our municipal employees." "From what I've been told and from what I've seen, it looks like it's going good," said Dick Lombardi, president of Quincy Babe Ruth. "The guys in the Park Department have given a little extra so I'm sure it will all get done."

So far, the diamond has been moved toward the outfield with the infield area cut out, allowing for trees to be planted along Vietnam Veterans' Drive. The old infield clay has been stockpiled for re-use.

The new dimensions of Adams Field will be: 340 feet down the left field and right field lines; 365 feet to the left field power alley; 375 feet to the right field power alley; and 400 feet to dead center field.

Foundation for the dugouts has been constructed and foundation for the bleachers on the third base side has been excavated. The new permanent aluminum bleachers will meet the standards of the Americans with Disability Act.

On the visitor's side there will be three sets of hydraulic portable bleachers, allowing the use of the same bleacher systems at various locations in the city during different sport seasons.

Foundation for the new two-story building, replacing the old rest room facility, has been paved, with plumbers and bricklayers scheduled to begin work this week. The building will house the rest rooms and a concession stand on the first floor and a press box on the second floor.

Also this week, the bases for the new light poles were scheduled to arrive. The new lighting system will replace the original lighting system installed in 1973.

All underground utilities have been completed and some changes to the irrigation system have been made.

Mayor William Phelan allocated $800,000 — the city's first expenditure from the hotel/motel tax monies — for the project which began in late May.

"The mayor has been very supportive," Koch said. "He has indicated that all departments will make resources available to the park department."

The project was hampered in mid-June when environmental activist William Aylward filed a state appeal to the project, arguing that the concrete foundation for the bleachers intruded on an environmentally protected area.

Certain construction couldn't continue while the appeal was pending with the state Department of Environmental Protection.

City and Aylward brokered a deal at a special council meeting. In return for withdrawing his appeal, Aylward received concessions from the city, including the approval of a wetlands study of the Blacks Creek area and environmental improvements in the area.

Over 80,000 baseball enthusiasts are expected for the fifth annual 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series. In addition to hosts Quincy and Weymouth, teams will include eight regional champions, an international team from Italy and the eastern Massachusetts state champion.

Granite See Positive Side After Season-Opening Loss

By CHRIS POISSON

Greg Wilson sounded as if his Quincy Granite football team was on the winning rather than the losing side of its 33-21 decision to the Clinton Irish Blizzard last Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The first-year head coach said he saw more positives than negatives, pointing out the Eastern Football League season opener was essentially its first organized game of the year (no scrimmages) and it's still trying to put the team together after off-season retreats and injuries.

"I'm very encouraged from what I saw," said Wilson, who replaced Ken McPhee after he retired. "We'll be a good football team. We'll be back in the playoffs. We're just a couple of players short."

Quincy, which reached the EFL championship game last season, will try to rebound Saturday night at 7 when it hosts the Middleboro Cobras, who knocked off 12-time defending champion Marlboro in its opener last week.

The Granite held a 21-20 lead going into the fourth quarter before surrendering a pair of touchdowns. Clinton quarterback Phillip Naismith tossed a 42-yard TD pass to Andrew Flynn, his third of the night, for a 26-21 lead with 9:18 remaining in the game.

Quincy's Nick Odom and Tony Barnes each picked off Naismith twice after that, but the Granite failed to take advantage both times. Jamal Chatman closed out the game with a 38-yard TD scamper with 3:08 left to account for the final score.

"We had our opportunities," Wilson said. "We had over 300 total yards in offense but it wasn't enough. We still have tremendous speed on offense. Defensively, once the team learns the new system we'll be fine."

Clinton struck first with 5:34 in the opening quarter when Naismith lofted a 49-yard touchdown pass to Flynn. Paul Barilone added the extra point.

On the ensuing kickoff, Quincy's Derek Wright returned the ball 35 yards to the 50-yard line. After a pair of running plays, first-year quarterback Matt Scott fired a 38-yard TD strike to wide receiver Bo Garcia to even the score with 3:48 left in the quarter. Matt Kulesza kicked the extra point.

Quincy cornerback Garnet Brown intercepted Naismith on Clinton's next series to give Quincy the ball at its 27. And on the first play from scrimmage, Scott hit wide receiver Jeff Lang in stride along the left sideline for a 73-yard TD and a 14-7 lead with 1:02 left in the first.

"Scott had a great game," Wilson said. "He set the Granite record for most completions in a game with 17."

The Irish Blizzard tied the game with a 65-yard drive that began at the end of the first quarter and ended with 11:08 left in the second. Naismith found Flynn for a 29-yard TD pass.

On its next possession Clinton regained the lead. On the third play of the drive Flynn caught a short pass over the middle and raced 61 yards before he was tracked down by Quincy's John Morant at the 2-yard line.

Two plays later running back Darion Brown plunged into the end zone for a 20-14 lead with 5:24 left in the half. Al Casey blocked Barilone's extra-point attempt.

The Granite had a golden opportunity to score on its ensuing series after Morant returned the kickoff to the Clinton 14. But Quincy was penalized for holding, threw two incomplete passes and had a 37-yard field goal attempt blocked.

Midway through the third quarter, Quincy had another chance to get on the board but came up short. On third-and-9 from his own 31, Naismith fumbled the ball which defensive lineman Christos Arsoniadis recovered at the Clinton 5.

On third-and-goal from the 1, Quincy was hit for an illegal procedure penalty that pushed them back to the 6. On the next play, Scott was intercepted for the second time by defensive back Robby McCoy, who returned the ball to the Quincy 23.

Clinton gained only 2 yards on its series. Barilone's 38-yard field goal attempt clanked off the left pole.

The Granite, pumped by the defensive stand, capitalized right before the half. On a third-and-14 play at its own 17, wide receiver John Barr hauled in a spectacular 19-yard catch with one hand while falling down. On the next play, Scott fired a 64-yard TD pass to Garcia down the right sideline for a 21-20 lead with 20 seconds left in the half.

"I've seen John Barr make that catch in practice before," Wilson said. "I'm probably harder on him than anyone else on the team because I expect that out of him. He's just a phenomenal all-around athlete."

Kessler Offers Advice For Moms-to-Be

Pregnancy and Back Pain Go Hand-in-Hand

Back pain is one of the most common complaints during pregnancy. In fact, more than half of all pregnant women will experience this kind of discomfort especially in the later months. However, many pregnant women can find some relief by understanding the cause and learning how to prevent and manage the condition.

Behind the pain

The weight gain that accompanies pregnancy is the primary reason back pain develops. "As a baby grows, a woman's weight shifts forward, forcing her to compensate by leaning back at the waist, which, in turn, increases pressure on the joints in the lower back," explained Lori Saunders, assistant director, Outpatient Therapy, Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation, East Orange, NJ.

At the same time, the natural release of pregnancy hormones impacts the stability of the pelvis and lower back causing the muscles to become easily overstretched when stressed.

"While much of what is changing is occurring naturally, back pain should not be accepted as just a part of being pregnant," Saunders explained.

Managing the Pain:

The good news is that back pain during pregnancy can be reduced. A moderate exercise program — for at least twenty minutes, three to four times a week — can usually accomplish this.

"Walking is a great total-body, low impact workout that provides moderate aerobic conditioning with minimal stress on the joints," recommends Saunders. Adding strengthening exercises that target the muscles in the abdomen, back, and leg such as mini squats — stand with feet shoulder width apart, slowly squat down while keeping the stomach tight and back straight until there is a slight bend in the knees, hold, and return to starting position — can also be beneficial.

In addition to exercise, Saunders offered the following tips to help minimize back pain associated with pregnancy:

- Maintain good posture when sitting or standing;
- Lift appropriately by bending at the knees and hips, not at the waist, keeping the object close to your body at all times;
- Wear sensible, flat or low-heeled shoes;

- Avoid standing for long periods of time

- When seated, use a small pillow or towel roll behind your back for lumbar support. Keep your body high enough in the chair and far enough from its back that you can get up without straining. Also, use the armrests to help take pressure off your spine.

An important point to remember is that any back pain lasting for several weeks or even months can be a predictor for continued problems after delivery. For this reason, pregnant women are encouraged to seek appropriate treatment for back pain during pregnancy.

Today, Kessler Rehabilitation Corporation continues to lead this field through a growing national network of inpatient rehabilitation hospitals, outpatient centers, and onsite rehabilitation services, as well as rehabilitation products and equipment.

Parents Should Address Health Issues Before Students Depart For College

As parents prepare to send their children to college, they should not overlook the health of their soon-to-be college students.

"This will be the first time in a lot of cases where the student will be taking charge of his or her own health," said Mark A. Goldstein, M.D., chief of the Adolescent Division at Massachusetts General Hospital. "Parents have to prepare students to do that."

Dr. Goldstein said there is basic health information that both parents and students should have before the student arrives on campus. These include:

- An understanding of the campus health care facilities and how they operate. Don't hesitate to call the school's infirmary for answers to any questions you may have.

- What the family health insurance will cover — and what is not covered.

- Understanding that when the student is concerned about a personal health matter, it is appropriate to seek care from a physician or nurse at the college infirmary.

Dr. Goldstein advises parents of college students to use the summer months to help their students develop a health profile — including medical history, medications they take or are allergic to.

"That's a good time to get baseline information on the student's physical and mental condition," he said.

This includes having a comprehensive physical examination and receiving appropriate immunizations if necessary. Most colleges will require students and their physicians to complete a health form prior to the start of classes.

Dr. Goldstein said students are wise to be immunized against chicken pox (varicella) and meningitis (meningococcal disease). The usual tight quarters that exist in college dormitories make immunizations for these contagious, and potentially deadly, diseases important, he said.

Health issues students are certain to encounter in college, Dr. Goldstein said, are those of drinking alcoholic beverages, sexuality and emotional health. "All three will come up and probably in the first year," he said. "It's an important part of the parent's role and physician's role to talk about these things."

Binge drinking has long been a serious health concern on college campuses. National studies on college-age drinking conducted several years ago showed 44 percent of college students surveyed reported binge drinking.

Dr. Goldstein said studies also show binge drinking leads to problems that include sexual assaults, injuries and sleep deprivation. It may also hurt academic performance, he said.

"Realistically, college students drink," Dr. Goldstein said. "Parents need to provide information about drinking as well as their opinions on the issue."

Conversations between adolescents and their parents about drinking ideally should begin long before a student is ready to move on to college. The goal is simple: to prevent dangerous drinking.

Facts about sexuality are also important, Dr. Goldstein said. "A lot of students become sexually active in high school," he said. "But there is still a role for parents to discuss these issues."

Discussion should include practices to prevent pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases and unwanted sex.

Finally, Dr. Goldstein said moving from high school to living on a college campus carries great potential for stress and emotional difficulty. "Sleep patterns change, the workload changes and now parents are not there," he said.

Although parents may for the first time be hundreds of miles away from their college students, they can still be a source of emotional support.

"Parents need to stay in touch with their students in any way that is practical," Dr. Goldstein said. "Things are going to be difficult in college, and I encourage communications between parents and students."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
TAKING PROPER CARE

Among the biggest mistakes dental patients make is that they do not brush long enough. Most dentists recommend at least two minutes of brushing, including angling the brush and gently brushing at the juncture of the teeth and gums. Brushing the tongue is also important because that is where most bacteria that cause bad breath collect. Flossing is a must at least once a day because it reaches between the teeth where toothbrush bristles cannot go. Then, there is the matter of regular visits to the dentist. For a large percentage of patients, twice a year is acceptable, but visits every three to four months are preferable for those with a bridge, crowns, or a history of gum disease.

We believe in preventive dentistry. Oral health is a long-term commitment we share with each patient. Your teeth — with proper care — should last a lifetime. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are sensitive to the needs of all age groups, giving everyone patience and empathy they require. For superior quality dental care, call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quinceydentist.com.

P.S. Whether you use an electronic toothbrush or a manual one, be sure that it has soft bristles.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Each of us is blessed with a unique personality. Some outgoing and imaginative. Others cautious and shrewd. But it is a rare personality that is well-liked by all his companions in his social and business life. "You can't please everyone", -traits that appeal to some people are irritating to others. We all may benefit, however, from winning other's respect, good will and, hopefully, friendships...

A well-developed personality depends first of all on the ability to be oneself. You may be a bit on the solemn side or you may be an extrovert and "back-slapper." Start from what you are. Don't try to be something you are not... Take a great and real interest in other people. Be sparing in your criticism. Try to find out everytime you come in contact with something novel and unusual just what it is that gives this situation its appeal. In other words, touch life at many points. Be generous and understanding.

Granted, this may seem like trite and obvious advice, but it is the kind of thing that develops rich, charming, overwhelming personalities...

10. ANCIENT WORLD: What Roman general wrote the first history of Rome?

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your persistence pays off as the information you demanded starts to come through. The pace is slow at first, but it begins to speed up as the week draws to a close.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) An unwelcome bit of news jolts the Bovine who would prefer that things proceed smoothly. But it's at most a momentary setback. A Leo brings more welcome tidings.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You need to pay close attention to the details before making a commitment. Don't accept anything that seems questionable, unless you get an answer that can be backed up.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulations on getting that project up and running. But as exciting as it is, don't let it carry you away. Make sure you set aside time to spend with family and friends.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be sure you're part of the discussion involving your suggestions. Your presence ensures that you can defend your work, if necessary. It also helps gain your colleagues' support.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A misunderstanding needs to be dealt with, or it can grow and cause more problems later on. Be the bigger person and take the first step to clear the air.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Set some strict guidelines for yourself so your heavier-than-usual work schedule doesn't overwhelm the time you need to spend relaxing with loved ones.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel a little uncomfortable being among people you hardly know. But remember that today's strangers can become tomorrow's valuable contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Reward yourself for all that you've accomplished despite some annoying situations that got in your way. Enjoy a well-earned getaway with someone special.

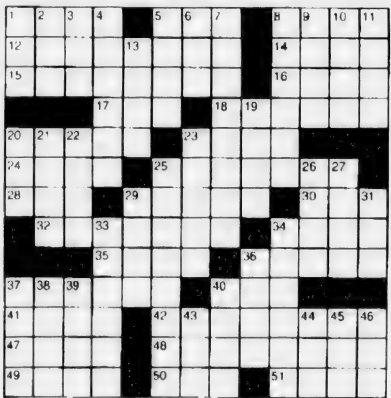

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Realizing that someone else is taking credit for what you did is bound to get anyone's goat, but especially yours. Be patient. The truth soon comes out.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Forget about opposites attracting. What you need is to find someone who thinks like you and will support your ideas, even if others say they're too radical.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Workplace problems can affect your financial plans. Be prudent and avoid running up bills or making commitments until things begin to ease up by the 25th.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your intuition helps you communicate easily with people and understand their needs.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Docket No. 03E0057-PP1
To Athina L. Phillips of Canton in said County, Lawrence A. Phillips of Canton in said County, respondents, and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Jonathan G. Palsson of Duxbury in the County of Plymouth and Joan E. Palsson of Duxbury in the County of Plymouth representing that they hold as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Quincy in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows:

A certain parcel of land, situated in that part of Quincy called Granch Hill and being part of Lot 'B' on a plan by Ernest W. Branch, C.E. Dated May 2, 1912 and recorded in Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 1219, Page 142, bounded as follows:

Beginning at a point in the northerly line of Dimmock Street at the southwesterly corner of Lot 'C' on said plan; thence:

NORTHWESTERLY by said lot 'C' one hundred seven and 27/100 (107.27) feet, thence SOUTHWESTERLY by land formerly of Paul R. Blackmore sixty (60) feet, thence SOUTHEASTERLY by the remaining portion of said lot 'B' one hundred three (103) feet, more or less, to said Dimmock Street, thence NORTHEASTERLY by said street, sixty (60) feet to the point of beginning. For title reference see deed recorded at Norfolk Registry of Deeds, Book 7956, Page 65 setting forth that they desire that - all - of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than four hundred fifty thousand ($450,000.00) dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk Probate & Family Court, 35 Shawmut Road, Canton, MA, 02021 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the twentieth day of August 2003, the return day of this citation.

"The city is doing all it can do - we can't take over private property," he said. "We need the business community to make the effort." Fink said the city will undertake similar cleanup efforts in Wollaston Center and North Quincy.

After the initial work is done, the city will continue to maintain the areas, he said.

"During the summer we will continue to pick up trash and do whatever needs to be done to keep the downtown areas clean," said Fink.

City officials agreed there is a lack of uniformity regarding the appearance of street and parking signs and trash containers.

Phelan also wants BFI to empty trash containers in the downtown area more often.

At the mayor's request, Fink said the city would repaint many pedestrian crosswalks with a thermo-plastic white paint containing glass beads for higher reflectivity. In addition, fluorescent green pedestrian signs will replace existing ones, he said.

"The ultimate goal is pedestrian safety in the busier streets and intersections," said Fink.

AERIAL LADDER Orientation - Probationary Firefighter Matthew Walsh takes his turn climbing 75 feet high on a ladder during exercises last week at the Quincy Firefighter Training Academy, located at the former Fore River Shipyard. 21 Tough It Out At Academy Firefighter Recruits Undergo Intense Training

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

It is so dark you can't see the hands in front of your face.

Crawling on all fours, you struggle through a maze-like structure with 50 pounds of equipment strapped to your body. The sweat beads down your face from the intense heat. An exhausting, 15-minute search ends when you find a child cowering under the bed. It's time to retrace your steps and bring the child to safety. Suddenly, the alarm on your air tank begins to rumble. You have four minutes left before your oxygen runs out...

Welcome to the Quincy Firefighting Training Academy.

Located in a two-story facility at the former Fore River Shipyard, the academy is the proving ground for 21 new recruits who were recently sworn in as Quincy firefighters. They are in the midst of an intense, eight-week course of study that will prepare them for life as a firefighter.

Taught by Lt. James Kennedy, Capt. Joseph Verlicco and firefighter Gordon King, the "maze" drill is just one of many simulated situations recruits will face.

"These men are a great set of recruits," said Kennedy. "They are doing a tremendous job, sometimes you have to slow them down."

New High School Bond Issue, Fire Dept. Ordinance On Agenda Special Council Meeting Aug. 18

A special city council meeting will be held on Monday, Aug. 18 at 7 p.m.. Council President Dan Raymondi announces.

Tom Largey, Mayor William Phelan's executive secretary, said the mayor intends to present to the council with a financing plan for the proposed new high school. The financing will come in the form of a bond issue, Largey said. The exact cost of the bond was not known at press time because the administration is still working on the numbers, he said.

The deadline for submitting a plan to finance the new high school is Aug. 29.

Raymondi said the council will vote to override Phelan's veto of a council-approved ordinance that seeks to hire additional firefighters.

By a 7-2 vote, the city council approved an ordinance which adopts a portion of the National Fire Protection Association's standard 1710.

The measure calls for every piece of fire apparatus to be staffed by three firefighters and one officer. In order to satisfy the ordinance the city would have to hire approximately 40 additional firefighters.

Phelan vetoed the measure, saying the standard is too costly at this time.

The council called it crucial to the safety of firefighters and citizens.

Councillor Frank McCauley and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro dissented.

Vice President's Wife Tours Adams Historic Sites

By TOM HENSHAW

Yes, that was Lynne Cheney, the vice president's wife, who was in Quincy last Friday, taking in the sights at the Adams National Historical Park.

She was readily identifiable by the squadron of Secret Service agents that dogged her trail in the interest of homeland security.

"She didn't want any publicity," said Marianne Peak, the superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park. "It was a private visit and we respected her wishes."

Cheney, with a daughter and two grandchildren, Elizabeth and Katie, in tow, visited the Adams Birthplaces in South Quincy and the Old House on Adams Street.

"They had a wonderful time," said Peak. "She is the first wife of a sitting vice president to visit the houses. I invited her back and she seemed interested."

Cheney, the author of a children's book, "America... A Patriot Primer," is known for her interest in things historical. She also visited Concord and traversed the Freedom Trail in Boston.

She and her party were escorted to Quincy by State Police and Secret Service agents checked the Old House for possible dangers prior to the visit.

Those stories about how regular tour groups were ousted from the premises while the Cheney party toured the Old House may or may not be true.

"The Secret Service is responsible for her safety," said Peak. "What we needed to do was manage her tour so it would fit in with the other tours."

Harvey Kertzman To File Papers Today Businessman Surprise Candidate For Mayor

There may be a contest for mayor of Quincy in 2003 after all.

Harvey Kertzman, 54, who bills himself as "a hands-on guy... a working stiff" and has never before run for public office, has taken out papers to run against Mayor William

HARVEY KERTZMAN

Phelan in the fall.

"I need 50 signatures," said Kertzman, who owns a gas station in Quincy Point. "I got 150. They tell me I need 50 or 60 more. I'll turn them in Thursday (today)."

Kertzman, who lives at

To Combat Public Drinking, Rowdiness State Police Resumes Patrols On Quincy Shore Drive

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Public drinkers and rabble-rousers beware: The State Police has resumed patrols along Wollaston Beach in an attempt to put a stop to ongoing problems in the area.

The state Legislature recently restored some $365,000 in funding, including $35,000 for Quincy, to cover State Police patrols for the fiscal year. Gov. Mitt Romney had cut the funds by veto for fiscal 2004.

"We want to have the troops lined up, and we want to send the public a message that we will not tolerate public drinking and rowdiness along the beach," said Sen. Michael Morrissey, who voted in favor of the override.

State Police will be patrolling the areas in the form of foot patrols, cruisers, motorcycles and mounted bikes, and they will be adopting a zero tolerance policy regarding public drinking, Morrissey said.

"Young adults should behave," he said. "Otherwise, you could be picked up and spend a short stay in jail."

Morrissey criticized Gov. Mitt Romney and former Gov. Jane Swift for cutting the funds.

"Swift didn't understand this was a quality of life issue for the people who live along the beach and use the facilities," he said.

Morrissey urged Mayor Phelan to extend community-policing efforts to include Wollaston Beach.

"I think we need a concerted effort to police Quincy Shore Drive," said Morrissey. "If you are a police officer in Wollaston, why not take a swing by the beach. If you are patrolling Merrymount why not swing by Caddy Park?" Morrissey asked rhetorically.

Phelan said the Quincy Police Department is cooperating with the State Police and will continue to do so.

"Every ward has a community police officer, and if there is an issue in a particular area I'm sure it will be addressed," said Phelan. "There's no reason why a community police officer cannot address a problem on the beach."

Morrissey said the Quincy Police Department has done an excellent job with its community-policing program so it would make sense to extend the service to include other areas.

"We have a well trained and well respected police force that has a lot of experience dealing with community police issues," he said. "If they see something going on I'm hoping they take the time to help out."

"Wollaston Beach needs as much help as possible. The city has a history of helping out the MBTA, so I see Wollaston Beach as the same type of issue," said Morrissey.

Phelan said restoring the funds for a State Police presence was very important.

"We don't want the state to reduce their resources in an area and expect Quincy to pick it up," he said. "What we need is more police presence, which means the state should maintain its presence. Quincy should be visible as well."

Now You Can Dunk A Donut At Home Depot

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

When you go to purchase anything at the new Home Depot on Centre Street, you will also be able to have coffee and a doughnut.

The License Board Tuesday granted Dunkin' Donuts permission to open a counter in the store pending floor plans following an occupancy permit.

Chairman Joseph Shea explained that The Home Depot has entered into an agreement with Dunkin' Donuts.

nuts.

However, Shea said when the Home Depot on Willard Street had requested a Dunkin' Donut counter, it was denied because of a directive stating that food was exclusive of the store. However, in the case of the store on Centre Street, there was no such directive.

Shea also indicated that the store on Willard Street cannot obtain a license because of the earlier directive.

William Donovan, president of Domestic Services, a food service, said the counter will be similar to that of Stop & Shop in North Quincy.

Donovan said the coffee and donuts counter will be just as you enter the automatic doors under the canopy just inside the store. He said it will be either 200 or 250 feet long, and will be self serving.

Donovan said employees will be from Dunkin' Donuts and not Home Depot.

Manet Health Center Receives $25,000 From American Legion

The Manet Community Health Center has received a gift of $25,000 from the American Legion Massachusetts Department.

Past State Commander James Fratolillo presented a check in that amount to Toni McGuire, Manet CEO, at a recent installation of officers at Houghs Neck Legion Post.

Manet Community Health Center, which has been in operation nearly 25 years, provides health care services to individuals and families regardless of their ability to pay.

More than 20,000 patients were seen in more than 60,000 visits at Manet's five sites during the past year.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On July 24, 1901, William Sydney Porter, otherwise known as O. Henry, is released from prison after serving three years for embezzlement from a bank. His second story collection, "The Four Million," contained one of his most beloved stories, "The Gift of the Magi," about a poor couple who each sacrifice their most valuable possession to buy a gift for the other.
- On July 22, 1916, in San Francisco, a bomb at a Preparedness Day parade on Market Street kills 10 people and wounds 40. The parade was organized by the city's Chamber of Commerce in support of America's possible entrance into World War I.
- On July 26, 1943, Michael Phillip Jagger, later known simply as Mick, is born in Dartford, England. He dropped out of the London School of Economics to form the Rolling Stones with Keith Richards, Bill Wyman, Charlie Watts and Brian Jones.
- On July 25, 1956, 45 miles south of Nantucket Island, the Italian ocean liner Andrea Doria and the Swedish ocean liner Stockholm collide in a heavy Atlantic fog. Fifty-one passengers and crew were killed.
- On July 21, 1967, actor Basil Rathbone dies. He was best known for his role as detective Sherlock Holmes, but also received two Academy Award nominations.
- On July 23, 1967, one of the worst riots in U.S. history breaks out in the heart of Detroit's predominantly black inner city. By the time it was quelled four days later by 7,000 National Guard and U.S. Army troops, 43 people were dead.
- On July 27, 1996, in Atlanta, the XXVI Summer Olympic is disrupted by the explosion of a nail-laden pipe bomb in Centennial Olympic Park. In 2003, Eric Robert Rudolph, the principal suspect, was arrested in North Carolina.

So Far, It's Phelan's Year

Dan Raymondi's decision not to run for mayor takes some of the steam out of Election Year 2003.

And, some of the interest, too.

But it appears incumbent William Phelan will still have an opponent or two but not one of Raymondi's political magnitude.

Harvey Kertzman, 54, of Adams St., a businessman, political newcomer and a registered unenrolled voter, has nomination papers in circulation and says he will file them today (Thursday).

Robert Boussy, who ran against Mayor James Sheets in 1999 and has also run for the Ward 3 city council seat, took out nomination papers several weeks ago. Boussy, incidentally got 2,476 votes against Sheets' 14,487 in that election.

If both Kertzman and Boussy should file the required valid 50 signatures, it would mean a preliminary election for mayor. If only one files, it will go to the Nov. 4 final election.

Deadline for filing for mayor, city council and school committee is July 29 -- just five days away.

Political observers will be watching to see how many votes Kertzman (Boussy, too, if he files) can get against Phelan. And trying to measure how many Raymondi might have gotten.

If neither filed, Phelan would get a free ride to a second term.

Only three mayors in Quincy's 114-year history as a city have been given free rides -- no opponent -- to reelection:

SHEETS

Thomas Burgin (1940), Frank McCauley (1983) and Sheets three times: 1991, 1993, 1997.

A Phelan-Raymondi match would, no doubt, have escalated into an old fashioned political slugfest.

TOBIN

LaRAIA

Reminiscent, maybe, of the 1977 battle between Arthur Tobin and Joseph LaRaia. Tobin, now Phelan's father-in-law, was city council president then, challenged and ousted LaRaia from the mayor's office. The defeat made LaRaia Quincy's last one-term mayor.

Environmental Network To Discuss Toxicity July 31

The Quincy Environmental Network will hold an informational meeting open to the public Thursday, July 31, at 6:30 p.m. in the main conference room of the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center.

The topic of the panel discussion is toxins in the environment with a focus on common chemicals such as pesticides, fertilizers and mercury and their effect on the environment.

The panel will include Joe Cotter, an organic landscaper accredited by the National Organic Farming Association; Dan Lee, a member of the group Chemicals Out; and Joe Lyons, a researcher who speaks regularly on mercury toxicity.

Or, the one two years before between incumbent Walter Hannon and LaRaia.

Hannon went home election night an apparent third-term winner by a slim 134 votes. But LaRaia called for a recount which showed some wrong counting of paper ballots. LaRaia was declared the actual winner by 483 votes.

A Phelan-Raymondi match might have made those two elections look like a game of croquet.

Politically, Phelan and Raymondi are miles apart on most issues. And, personally, miles apart. They aren't exactly friends.

What has been the reaction to Raymondi's decision not to run for mayor this year?

"People who have supported me are disappointed but they tell me 'we trust your judgment,'" Raymondi says.

What about a future run?

"I'm not closing the door to anything."

But Election Year 2003, you might say, belongs to Phelan. So far, at least.

Just two years ago, he was a little known member of the school committee in his second year on that board.

Back then if someone mentioned the name Phelan most people would have thought of Chuck Phelan, the former Ward 5 city councillor but no relation.

Mainly because of his opposition to building the proposed new Quincy High School on a toxic site off Quincy Ave., he challenged six-term mayoral incumbent James Sheets.

Phelan was given little chance against the popular Sheets but when it was all over, he was the winner by 17 votes in the city's closest ever mayoral election and biggest political upset.

Just a scant 17 votes.

And this year he has no major name opponent to contend with enroute to a second term.

He has come a long way in just two years.

Germantown Volunteers To Be Honored Aug. 1

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 real photo postcard view of Shelton Road in Adams Shore. For the most part these houses were then newly built as summer cottages and included a sizable lot across the road with access to Shell Beach also known then as Shell Place. This section of Adams Shore was one of the first parcels of the Adams' Mt.

Wollaston farm to be sold to developers. One of the first buildings here was the large wooden Shelton Hotel that was destroyed by fire after just a few years of operation. The houses shown here are now year round homes and most have been altered accordingly.

Councillors At-Large Cede Too Much Power To Ward Councillors

I moved to Quincy in 1984 and noticed quickly that Quincy's form of government seemed exactly like Boston's. A strong mayor and weak council.

However, unlike Boston, at-large councillors in Quincy cede too much power to ward councillors. Giving them near Pope-like status. Infallible on ward issues.

When I moved to Quincy, it was very much a working family community. Is it still?

City councillors at-large are supposed to have a citywide overview on issues affecting all six wards but too often go silent allowing ward councillors to tackle citywide issues on a ward-to-ward basis.

Is this any way to run local government? City councillors elected at-large are too often mute when it comes to issues like housing and development. Not wanting to step on toes, they remain in the background.

Perhaps, if we had a citywide master plan on housing, we wouldn't be faced with two different developers wanting to build two sets of luxury housing between North Quincy High School and the Neponset Bridge.

Wards are not independent of one another. City problems spill over from one ward to another. Is a developer's plan to build over an MBTA parking lot a ward or citywide issue?

For years we deal with things such as new housing, whether on Hancock Street or Quarry Street or Sea Street, as separate issues when they are one and the same.

Quincy needs one voice when it comes to overdevelopment or public safety or new streets and sidewalks.

It is time for ward councillors to see the bigger picture and it is time for at-large councillors to see how most ward issues are all tied together.

The mayor by virtue of his "Great and powerful Oz" status needs a much stronger city council working with him to do the right thing for all rather than pitting one ward against another.

The city council as a whole makes itself weaker when it starts acting like the scarecrow, tinman and cowardly lion.

We need a city council with nine members all interested in the entire city's best interests. We need leadership for a real change.

DAV Urges We Remember Korean War Armistice 50th Anniversary

In a tribute to the men and women who served and sacrificed in one of the most difficult wars in our nation's history, the "Forgotten War," the Korean War, the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) are asking citizens to set aside a few moments on July 27 to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the signing of the Korean War armistice.

For those churches, temples or synagogues having bells, we suggest ringing them 22 times at 10 a.m. recognizing the 22 United Nations countries, which provided troops during the war. For those without bell systems, may we suggest a moment of reflection to commemorate the sacrifice of those soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines whose fighting ended 50 years ago. Veteran service organizations may wish to have more formal ceremonies.

Recognizing the anniversary of the signing of the armistice is a fitting and honorable way to say thanks to all the veterans of the Korean War.

Quincy's Yesterdays

General MacArthur Gets Big Welcome

Thousands lined Hancock St. for a glimpse of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who visited Quincy for about an hour as part of a triumphal national tour that followed his dismissal by President Truman as commander of the United Nations forces in Korea.

The five-star general and his wife spent 25 minutes at the First Parish Church where, escorted by Mayor Thomas S. Burgin and City Historian William C. Edwards, they placed wreaths on the tombs of John and John Quincy Adams and their wives.

"These men engendered liberty and we cannot come here without being recreated by their spirit," the general said.

Security was tight for the controversial MacArthur as all Quincy police officers, some 100 auxiliary policemen and 125 men from the Squantum Naval Air Station turned out under Capt. William Ferrazzi, acting chief in the absence of vacationing Joseph F. Hughes.

Historian Edwards said the MacArthurs surprised him with their knowledge of history.

"Their questions were most indicative of a real knowledge of early American history with a definite interest in the men that helped to formulate the United States government," he said as their 16-vehicle convoy motored off to Milton.

'Miss Mildred' Celebrates Her 103rd Birthday

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Barbara's Scrumptious Coated Chicken

Our friend Barbara called very excited about a new way she prepares chicken with either thighs or other pieces. They are a bit different in the way they are usually coated, so I thought I would share it with all of you.

Barbara's Coated Chicken

6-8 chicken thighs (mix if preferred with chicken breasts)

3 egg whites

1/4 cup parmesan cheese (grated) mixed with plain bread crumbs.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Beat egg whites. Coat the chicken first in the egg whites and then the bread crumb and parmesan mixture.

Bake covered for about 35 minutes. Uncover and bake for another 10 minutes or so until tops are lightly browned. You will love the delicate flavor of the chicken.

The night I prepared it, I served it with sweet potatoes and creamed asparagus.

Businessman Surprise Candidate For Mayor

140 Adams St. with his wife, Noreen, is well-known in the Point as the proprietor of Kertzman's Auto Shop at 450 Quincy Ave. until his retirement in 2000.

Kertzman said he was inspired to run for mayor by his love for Quincy.

"I've been a Quincy guy all my adult life," he said. "I've worked here for 30 years. Quincy has been good to me. I'd like to give something back. I'm in a position to now. I can really make a difference."

He said he has not yet put together a platform — except to say "I am a businessperson" — or a campaign team.

He is also a licensed aircraft mechanic and a pilot qualified for 30 years to fly single engine planes. He was president of the Massachusetts Aviation Historical Society.

Kertzman said he started thinking about running for city hall's front office when City Council Daniel Raymond decided to pass up a run for the mayor's job and seek reelection.

"Raymond would make a great mayor," he said.

The emergence of Kertzman as a candidate means that there will be a preliminary contest for mayor if, as expected, lightly regarded Robert Boussey files as the third man in the race.

Kertzman undoubtedly will be the only man ever to run for mayor of Quincy who is mentioned in the Guinness Book of Records.

He and four or five employees of his auto shop a few years ago changed a Volkswagen engine, removed and replaced it, in a minute and 37 seconds.

A product of the Brookline Public Schools, he attended Hawthorne College in Antrim, N. H., for two years and East Coast Aerotech.

Kertzman has four children: David, 29, who lives in California; Becky, 21, who goes to school in Winter Park, Fla.; Eric, 18, who attends Colorado College; and Emily, 13, who attends South Shore Christian Academy in Weymouth.

He also has a stepson, Jesse, 29, a graduate of Salve Regina College, now a martial arts instructor.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Granted a one day permit to Amy L. Klotz, development officer at the Quincy Medical Center for the 6th annual Marie Curry Walk, Sunday, Sept. 7 starting and ending at Pageant Field. The run will begin at 9:30 a.m. and finish at 1:30 p.m.

•Granted permission for telephone solicitations from the South Shore Police Athletic League by All-Pro Productions.

Duxbury Police Chief Mark M. DeLuca said the office for the company is in the gym in the basement of 1452 Hancock St. Det. Lt. Robert Perchard commended DeLuca and his program primarily for "young kids who might get into trouble." The telephone calls will begin after Aug. 23, and last for four weeks.

•Granted a Motor II License to Joseph M. Hajjar, doing business as Hajjar Motor World, 136 East

Howard St. for a 25 car limit, pending the removal of debris and the extra 15 cars. Chairman Joseph Shea said he and the board will view the area and give a final inspection.

•Continued a hearing until Aug. 5 a common victualer license to Nicolaos Pesirdies and Stavros Koci, doing business at Romanza Pizzeria and More, 134 Washington St. pending a parking plan. It was formerly Redstone's Pizza. Shea said he would ask the traffic engineer to study the area for parking.

•Granted a transfer of stock and new officers and directors of Siam House, 1472 Hancock St. from Wipa Lieu to his sisters, Kida Kan Bupprungsdan and Jutaporn Sai Bang.

•Granted a Keno License to Paccini's Italian Eatery, 1506 Hancock St.

•Granted a transfer of ownership at The Hofbrau, 400 Sea St. from Joseph Manton to his nephew Michael Novak. Novak will pay his uncle $48,000 a year for ten years. Shea commended Manton for his service to the community and his charitable endeavors. Manton has owned the restaurant since 1986.

•Continued until Aug. 5 a hearing regarding a request from Ha Chu, doing business as Hundreds Joyful, Inc. 17 1/2 Beale St. for a common victualer license. It was the former Wollaston Nut Shop. Chu said he plans to sell cold and hot tea, ice cream sandwiches and spring rolls.

•Granted a one day permit for the annual "touch a Truck" fund-raiser for the Dianna DeVanna Center held at 500 Victory Rd., Marina Bay Sept. 221 from 12 noon to 4 p.m.

City To Observe 50th Year Of Korean War Truce

Once again, Quincy will do its duty as a Commemorative Community and remember the 50th anniversary of the truce that ended the Korean War.

Mayor William Phelan and Quincy Veterans' Services will hold the ceremonies Sunday, July 27, at 10:30 a.m. at the Korean War Memorial on Hancock Street at Merrymount Parkway.

Quincy has continuously honored the men and women who served during "the forgotten war" since 2000 when it was designated a Commemorative Community by the Department of Defense.

A high school graduation is scheduled in November for those who left Quincy and North Quincy High Schools to serve their country in Korea before graduating.

The names of 38 military personnel from Quincy who died during the Korean War era are etched on the city's Korean War Memorial. They include:

Robert L. Adams, Albert J. Bergeron, Thomas B. Bishop, Michael J. Broaderich, Lawrence A. Bruno, James H. Cameron, Howard E. Davis, Walter A. Della Chiesa, Robert James Duffy, Kenneth F. Ehlers, Gordon J. Erickson, Lee H. Favorite.

Robert J. Foley, Daniel L. Gilbert, Frederick H. Graves,

Albert J. Happel, Mervyn K. Horn, Robert W. Leaman, George R. MacDonald, Bernard A. MacDougall, David MacLachlan Jr., Lloyd S. MacLeod, Michael W. Mahar, John Mariano.

New Flag At Birthplaces, Thanks To SS Savings Bank

The Adams Birthplaces on Franklin Street have a brand new flag, thanks to good neighbors Lisa McGarry and the South Shore Savings Bank.

McGarry, manager of the bank's branch across the street from the Birthplaces, couldn't help but notice the flag at the historical site was weathered.

A phone call to the bank's president, John C. Boucher, and the new flag appeared forthwith, to the applause of Marianne Peak, the Adams National Historical Park superintendent.

"We are pleased to have neighbors aware of the significance of these remarkable homes," she said.

"We are proud and grateful to have an institution with dedicated employees so willing to help their neighbors."

At Least 14 Will Replace Retirees City To Hire More Police Officers

Mayor William Phelan said the city is in the process of hiring at least 14 new police officers to replace a wave of retirees.

That number could jump to as high as 22 before the end of fiscal 2004, he said.

"The chief is looking at his budget to see how much wiggle room he has," said Phelan. "We could hire as many as 22, depending on revenues."

Tom Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, said the swearing-in date for the new officers was not yet known.

Sons Of Italy Given Warning, Probation On Betting Incident

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St., received a verbal warning and a year's probation for a gambling incident at the lodge on Jan. 26.

Atty. Louis Cassis, counsel for the lodge right at the beginning of the hearing frankly admitted that the violation did happen the night at Super Bowl game.

Cassis added that it was "common that day that this was happening."

At the time of the incident, Capt. Robert Crowley sent a written complaint concerning the violation.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he didn't think the hearing would be "so quick," and called on Det. Lt. Robert Perchard, who in Crowley's absence said the Sons of Italy would receive a verbal warning with a year's probation. After one year if no other incidents occur, the probation will be lifted.

Perchard said that the money seized at the time of the incident, will be sent back immediately. Capt. Vincent Flaherty sitting in for Police Chief William Falco said the incident would be placed on file.

Phelan To Host Merrymount Meeting Tonight

Mayor William Phelan will host the first of a series of neighborhood meetings tonight (Thursday) from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Merrymount School on Agawam Road.

The meeting is to provide residents with updates on ongoing improvement projects and address any residents' concerns. In conjunction with the meetings, Phelan will be hosting a barbecue.

"It is important to me to hear from residents about the neighborhood issues that affect them on a daily basis," Phelan said. "I want to respond to these issues as soon as possible so Quincy residents understand that their government works for them."

Joining Phelan will be members of the Office of Constituent Services, Police Department, the Mayor's staff and other city personnel.

Phelan will host a series of neighborhood meetings this summer and fall. A schedule of the meetings can be found on the city Web site (www.ci.quincy.ma.us) or by calling 617-376-1990.

"People deserve a city government that listens to their needs and responds to their concerns," Phelan said. "Philosophically, this is an important issue to me and I hope Quincy residents take full advantage of this opportunity to directly address the people responsible for solving their neighborhood concerns."

Quincy Business Council Told

Growing Asian Population Important To Community

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

As Quincy's Asian population continues to grow, it is important for those residents to develop strong social, cultural and economic bonds within the community, according to Kao Li, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources Inc. (QARI).

At Tuesday's meeting of the Quincy Business Council, held at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Li outlined plans to encourage civic participation and develop community leadership for Asian residents, which now account for 15 to 20 percent of the city's population.

"We have an aggressive agenda, and we appreciate the support from the community," Li told members of the business council.

Although still in its infancy, QARI has made great strides in helping Asians to assimilate into mainstream society, Li said.

QARI, a non-profit organization, is helping to bridge the gap by assisting Asians to utilize city services, attract new resources, and encourage business and home ownership.

"Many Asians still do not know what's available for services and resources," said Li.

Many factors have attracted Asians to the Quincy area, including convenient public transportation, competitive housing prices and a competent school system, he said.

He said Quincy businesses can tap the Asian market by offering bilingual material and hiring Asians to offer services to the Asian community.

Li also presented statistics regarding the Asian population in Quincy. Among them:

- The Asian population in Quincy has increased 144% since 1990.

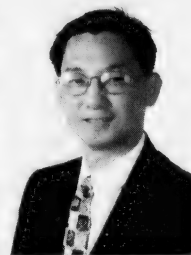

- Approximately 16% of the Quincy population is Asian, or 13,456.

- The home ownership rate for Asians is the highest of any group in Quincy (52%) compared to 48% overall.

- Approximately 25% of Asians are under the age of 18.

- There are 2,500 registered Asian voters in Quincy.

Among the goals for the future, Li said QARI intends to develop a monthly, bilingual newsletter for the community, as well as create a cable television show on Quincy Access Television for the Asian population. He said many other Quincy businesses and organizations have affiliated with QARI, including the YMCA, Eastern Nazarene College and Quincy Medical Center.

Li said he hopes QARI will be used as a model for other ethnic groups as they assimilate into mainstream society. In addition, QARI is working with the Anti-Defamation League to incorporate the city's "No Place for Hate" campaign for the Asian community, he said. Li also thanked Mark Bertman, owner of Roger's Jewelers, for providing a $500 contribution to the drive.

City Seeking Public Input On Downtown Redevelopment

The city is soliciting public input by email regarding the proposed redevelopment of the downtown district, according to Mayor William Phelan's office.

Residents are encouraged to weigh in with suggestions on a number of issues related to the lower Hancock St. area, including commercial/residential mix, zoning, open space, pedestrian access and traffic flow.

Residents can email their suggestions to: downtown@ci.quincy.ma.us by Aug. 22, the mayor's office said. Residents without internet access can mail their suggestions to the mayor's office in City Hall. Residents should mail suggestions to the attention of the Downtown Redevelopment.

"The redevelopment and revitalization of Quincy Center is long overdue," said Phelan. "We have recently been quite successful in making the area cleaner, safer and more inviting to families and visitors - and we will continue those efforts - but now it's time to act to secure the overall long-term economic and aesthetic future of our great city's hub. I want the public to play a key role in this process."

The suggestions will be reviewed by the newly-created Quincy Downtown Redevelopment Committee, which is comprised of local business professionals, labor officials, technical experts and city officials. The committee is chaired by former Mayor Walter Hannon.

Kristin Priscella, the mayor's director of operations, said: "We will be looking to incorporate many of the suggestions into proposed plans for the downtown. We look forward to hearing about the vision residents have for downtown Quincy."

How To Make Cleaning Up Better For You

(NAPS) According to new consumer research by the Soap and Detergent Association, the cleanliness of a home was ranked as the biggest influence on a first impression. While cleaning your home is beneficial for the 50 million Americans who suffer from asthma and allergies, ridding a home of dust, mold and bacteria may itself trigger wheezes, sneezes and sniffles. Fortunately, there are ways to reduce the symptoms caused by cleaning. Here are some tips from experts at the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers (AHAM).

- Decrease the amount of surfaces on which dust can collect. Use clean-ups as a time to eliminate as much clutter as you can. Try to store collectibles and mementos inside curio cabinets. Less things to dust means less exposure to dust. Vacuum the carpets and drapes regularly, and remember to vacuum in long, straight lines.

- To eliminate mold and bacteria build up, wipe down surfaces in bathrooms, kitchens and bedrooms with a diluted bleach solution on a regular basis. Open the windows and lift the blinds to increase ventilation and to discourage mold from occurring. Consider replacing old shower curtains, floor mats and anything on which mold is likely to reappear.

- Tackle cleanups with a portable air cleaner. By catching airborne allergens and pollutants as they circulate throughout the room you can improve air quality.

For more than 10 years, AHAM has certified air cleaners and has made it easier for consumers to choose the air cleaner that will be most effective. The association developed the Clean Air Delivery Rate (CADR) measurement system that rates air cleaners according to the reduction of tobacco smoke, dust and pollen within a room. The ratings are broken down per allergen and the effectiveness is specific to room size. When choosing an air cleaner you can use the CADR numbers to compare the rates on different units.

For a copy of the AHAM Guide to Air Cleaners Brochure or a Directory of Certified Room Air Cleaners, call 800-267-3138. For more information, visit www.CADR.org.

Recruit Murphy Joins Firefighter Ranks

Quincy Firefighter Gerald E. Murphy has graduated from the Massachusetts Fire Fighting Academy in Stow and has been assigned temporarily to Ladder 1, Group 1.

Murphy was one of 37 graduates, 34 men and three women, who completed the academy's Recruit Firefighting Program, a rigorous 55 days of basic training.

"Recruit Firefighter Murphy has demonstrated excellent skill and ability advancing the nozzle and fire suppression," said Quincy Fire Chief Paul O'Connell.

"He should be a valuable asset to his department."

In addition to basic firefighting skills, the program the students also are trained in hazardous material incident mitigation, flammable liquids, stress management, water rescue procedures and public fire education.

Completion of the program means that all students have met national standards of the National Fire Protection Association 1001 and are certified to the level of Firefighter I and II by the Massachusetts Fire Training Council.

Morrisette Drops Series To Norwood

By CHRIS POISSON

In his 34 years of coaching, you'd think Morrisette manager Ray Cattaneo would have been involved in every type of game imaginable.

Sunday evening, though, Cattaneo witnessed firsthand a game he wished he'd never seen.

Morrisette, the No. 5 seed in District 6 East, outplayed its counterparts from the West, No. 1 seed Norwood, only to see its season come to an abrupt end with a frustrating 4-3 loss at Kincaide Field.

Morrisette dropped the opening game of the best-of-three first-round series, 5-2, last Saturday at Norwood.

"This is my 34th year and I've never been in a game like (Sunday's)," Cattaneo said. "I was frustrated. We outplayed them. We made all the plays and we didn't win. What a shame."

In Sunday's game, John Folino picked up the loss despite a solid outing. Norwood reached him for all four of its runs in the second inning, but Folino silenced them the rest of the way, allowing just a sixth-inning double.

"Folino pitched well," Cattaneo said. "He quieted them down after that second inning."

Morrisette broke through offensively in the sixth inning. Brian O'Hanley almost homered, smoking a ball to dead center field that landed high atop the backstop of the softball field for only a double.

Tom Hughes knocked him home with a single. After an out, Joe Priscella singled and both runners advanced a base when the ball got a way from the cutoff man. Ray Marchand (2-for-3, 2 doubles) stroked a two-run double to make it 4-3.

In the seventh, Don Cook beat out a bunt to lead off the inning. Pat Bregoli reached on a fielder's choice and moved to second on a passed ball. After a walk to O'Hanley, Norwood retired the next two batters to end the game.

Morrisette also had great opportunities to score in the third and fifth frames. In the third, Liam Powers ripped a shot into the right-center gap and was circling the bases before he was called back to second base after the ball went through a hole in the fence. He was stranded there.

In the fifth, Morrisette had men on second and third with no outs but couldn't push a run across home plate.

"We had runners on before the sixth inning and after and we didn't score," Cattaneo said. "We had two doubles that could've been more. Liam's hit found a hole in the fence in right field and if O'Hanley hit it anywhere else it would've been a home run."

In the first game, Morrisette couldn't generate any offense, striking out 10 times and mustering only three hits.

John O'Connell gave up five runs on nine hits and two walks with three strikeouts in six innings.

Trailing 5-0, Morrisette scored both runs in the seventh inning. O'Hanley singled up the middle and Gavin followed with a single. With two outs, Priscella lined a shot off the leg of the pitcher, who picked up the ball and fired wildly to first base allowing the runs to score.

"These two playoffs games were the best we played all year," said Cattaneo, whose team didn't make an error in the series. "We did everything right, but win. It was a good year for the kids. They played their hearts out in the two games and went out in style."

Infinity Mortgage Wins Babe Ruth International Crown

Pitcher Kevin Sullivan recently led Infinity Mortgage to the Babe Ruth International League championship with a 2-1 victory over State Street Global Advisors at Pond Street Field.

Sullivan allowed one run on three hits and struck out 10. Mixing an occasional curveball with a lively fastball, he was never in trouble after giving up the lone run in the first inning.

In the sixth inning, center fielder Brian Smith singled to move Sullivan to third base. Shortstop Anthony Black (single) hit a towering sacrifice fly that plated Sullivan (2 runs) with the go-ahead run.

Black and third baseman Dave Casey made play after play defensively in a game that featured no errors. First baseman Jim Christie also made several fine plays in the field.

For State Street Global Advisors, D.J. Andrews allowed just four hits while punching out 11. Andrews and Ben Hamlin had the only hits. Corey Morgan and Gary Saunders made strong defensive plays to keep their team in the game, while first baseman Joe Connelly handled every play cleanly.

The Babe Ruth International League All-Star Game will be held Aug. 3 at 1 p.m. at Pond Street Field.

GETTING MORE MILEAGE

Whether you want to increase your vehicle's mileage due to environmental concerns or simply to benefit your wallet, there are simple steps you can take to wring the most out of every drop of fuel. To begin with, if your vehicle's fuel economy is noticeably low, have a technician perform some diagnostic tests to check the brakes, ignition timing, engine compression, and a host of other factors. For your part, bear in mind that aggressive driving wastes gas by as much as 33% on the highway and 5% around town. Each 5 mph that you drive over 60 mph is like paying an additional ten cents per gallon of gas. Use cruise control and overdrive gears whenever possible.

To save gas keep your car in tune. Computer diagnostics can save considerable time in troubleshooting your car's performance problems. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) is your local auto center that can handle all your automotive service and repair needs, a shop that wants to earn your return business, a shop that treats you like a person and not a number. You can trust your auto maintenance and repairs to us. Open: Mon-Fri 8am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: A loaded roof rack on your vehicle can decrease fuel economy by 5%.

North Quincy Track Holds Awards Banquet

The North Quincy High School boys and girls spring track programs recently held their awards banquet at the Koch Family Recreation Center with 80 parents and athletes attending.

Boys' awards included: Alex Austin, MVP; Corey Piazza, Coaches Award; John Murray, Unsung Hero; Will Gardner, Old Colony League Sportsmanship Award.

Girls awards included: Paula Morgan, MVP; Jen Venuti, Coaches Award; Shauna Kelly, Unsung Hero; Katie Timmins, OCL Sportsmanship Award.

Eligible athletes received varsity letters and all athletes received certificates.

Head table guests included Principal Lou Ioanilli as well as coaches Peter Chrisom Jr., Damian Kellogg and Tim Semchenko. Coach Geoff Hennessy was master of ceremonies.

Granite Baseball Team Playoff Drive Alive

The Quincy Granite baseball team kept its playoff hopes alive by sweeping the Pawtucket Black Sox, 10-9, 7-1, in a doubleheader Sunday.

Quincy (7-9) looks to get back to the .500 mark this Sunday morning at 9 when it hosts the Brockton Angels in a doubleheader at O'Rourke Park.

In the first game, Sean MacLean allowed nine runs (earned on five hits and two walks with five strikeouts before leaving the game with the bases loaded after 2 2/3 innings).

Closer Joey Flynn yielded two consecutive walks and a bases-clearing hit before pumping three straight fastballs by the last batter to end the game.

"Flynn needed to warm up coming from center field and he was not," said coach Jason Riley. "Thankfully he did by the fourth batter. I could've let MacLean finish but I have confidence in Flynn and we won."

Chris Lockhead powered the offense, going 4-for-5 with a home run, three RBI and two runs scored. Flynn went 2-for-4 with a run and two stolen bases and MacLean also went 2-for-4 with a triple and two runs.

In the second game, without excused pitchers Brian Deputula and Kevin Walsh, Riley approached MacLean and asked him to take one for the team.

And the ace delivered, giving up a run on five hits and three walks while fanning seven in a complete-game performance.

"As the day went on Mac improved," said catcher John Fidalgo. "He struck out four of the last five batters."

"You could hear the frustration of the Black Sox as they kept telling themselves 'We've seen this guy pitch all day. Let's jump on him.' But what did they see?" said right fielder Eric Ricupero, referring to MacLean's seven-pitch arsenal.

"You can't sit on Mac and wait for your pitch," Riley said. "You won't get it. That's what makes Sean an MVP and two-time all-star."

The previous week, Quincy snapped a six-game skid with a sweep of Eirz Pub in a doubleheader.

Quincy cruised to a 16-2 win in Game 1. The game was close for six innings but Quincy sent 16 batters to the plate and scored 10 runs in the seventh.

Deputula threw a complete game, allowing the two runs on six hits while striking out five to earn his second win of the season.

In Game 2 the Granite jumped on the Pub early and often, scoring 11 runs on 14 hits as it won the game, 11-1, in the sixth inning by slaughter rule. MacLean pitched a gem, giving up a run on three hits.

Flynn, Lockhead, Fidalgo and Walsh went a combined 12-for-14 with nine RBI and seven runs scored in Game 2.

On the day, the foursome went a combined 20-for-25 with 11 RBI and 18 runs scored. Lockhead led the group, going 6-for-7 with three RBI and seven runs.

Granite Seek First Win Saturday Against Marlboro

The Quincy Granite will host the Marlboro Shamrocks Saturday night at 7 at Veterans Memorial Stadium in a rematch of last year's Eastern Football League championship game.

The top two teams a year ago have struggled so far this season, as they limp into the showdown with 0-2 records.

Quincy is coming off a 21-14 loss at home to Middleboro, while 12-time defending champion Marlboro is fresh off a 14-6 setback to Charleston.

"I'd hate to say it's a must-win game in the third week," said head coach Greg Wilson. "It's a must that we continue to make improvements. If we do that we'll be in the playoffs. We're 0-2 but we're approaching the game like we're 2-0. We know we're a good football team."

In the Middleboro game, Quincy took a 7-6 lead in the second quarter when quarterback Matt Scott fired a 35-yard touchdown pass to Bo Garcia, who has over 350 receiving yards through the first two games.

Late in the half, though, Middleboro picked off pass and returned it 30 yards for a touchdown to grab a 14-7 lead with 45 seconds remaining.

"I made a bad call," Wilson said. "I called for a play-action pass and it was intercepted and returned for a touchdown. I need to be accountable for that. I ask the guys to be accountable so I also have to be. I was trying to get the ball down field and get a field goal. We have the best kicker in the league."

Quincy evened the score at 14 in the second half on Bunny Jefferson's 65-yard touchdown, but the Cobras struck last for the victory.

"The guys played probably the hardest I've seen in five years," Wilson said. "They played their hearts out."

32 Local Youngsters Compete In Hershey State Track Finals

Recreation Director Barry Welch announces 32 youngsters were invited to compete in the recent 26th annual Hershey's Track and Field State Finals at Braintree High School.

The boys and girls, ages 9-14, earned the invitation by competing in a local meet held at Veterans Memorial Stadium June 25-26, and then having their times and distances compared to boys and girls who competed in 70 other meets statewide.

The state finalists and their events are:

Ages 9-10: Julia Nee, 200-meter dash, standing long jump, 4x100-meter relay; Julia Free, 400-meter dash, 4x100-meter relay; Jada Yusufu, 4x100-meter relay; Cassandra Swanson, 4x100-meter relay; Calvin Austin, 100-meter dash; 4x100-meter relay; Matthew Poles, 400-meter dash; Devin Alexander, 50-meter dash; Sean Patrick Hannon, 4x100-meter relay; Nicholas Thomas, 4x100-meter relay; Kyle Ptak, 4x100-meter relay.

Ages 11-12: Samantha

Barkowski, 100-meter dash, 4x100-meter relay; Rachael Kananoff, 800-meter run; Lily Man, 4x100-meter relay; Akilah Mahteen, 4x100-meter relay; Kerry Turok, softball throw; Kayla McGonagle, 4x100-meter relay; Erskine Hinds, 100-meter dash, 4x100-meter relay; Victor Aliberti, 200-meter dash, standing long jump; Shane Regan, 400-meter dash, softball throw, 4x100-meter relay; Andrew Beaton, 4x100-meter relay; Nicholas Poles, 800-meter run, 4x100-meter relay.

Ages 13-14: Kerry Regan, 1600-meter run; Nicole Affannato, 200-meter dash, standing long jump, 4x100-meter relay; Krystin Newsom, 4x100-meter relay; Melissa Mendall, 4x100-meter relay; Alexandra Nee, 4x100-meter relay; Brigid Kyle, softball throw; Patrick Watkins, 200-meter dash; Mark Jordan, 800-meter run, 4x100-meter relay, standing long jump; Kevon Mason, 4x100-meter relay, softball throw; Austin Free, 4x100-meter relay; Bradley Austin, 4x100-meter relay.

The winners of the state meet will have their time and distances compared with other New England state champions and the top qualifiers will go to the National Championship in Hershey Park, Pa. All expenses for national qualifiers are paid by Hershey Park, and no fees are charged at any level.

The Hershey's program is the largest youth sports program of its kind in the United States. It was developed to offer a quality recreational activity, where children have fun and are introduced to physical fitness through basic track and field events. Welch notes Hershey's Track and Field Youth Program is "more than a track meet" and emphasizes the importance it places on participation, friendship and sportsmanship. He also thanked Quincy Track Club Director Geoff Hennessy for his outstanding commitment to the program, as well as the members of the Quincy Recreation Department staff who officiated at the meet.

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth Wins Last 2, Finishes In Second

Wollaston won its final two games of the season to finish in second place in the Senior Babe Ruth League with a 12-6 record.

Wollaston faces South Boston in the first round of the playoffs. The best-of-three series began Monday with Game 1 and Tuesday with Game 2. If necessary, Game 3 will be held today (Thursday) at Kincaide Field.

Wollaston headed into the postseason with strong pitching, anchored by Gary Dalton (2-0), Chris Dolbear (1-0), Steve Reardon (4-2), Ryan Conley (3-3) and Jeff Tam (2-1).

In the regular season finale, Conley and Dalton combined on a five-hitter and 10 strikeouts in a 7-1 win over Braintree.

With the game tied at 1-1 in the sixth inning, Reardon led off with a single and Dolbear blasted his second home run of the season down the left field line. Chris Kirshner and Shaun Gibbons each singled and scored on Matt MacNeil's double.

Wollaston played well defensively, highlighted by Kirshner's running, over-the-shoulder catch with the bases loaded and two outs to end the game.

In a 12-5 victory over Hanover, Tam pitched well, giving up six hits and fanning 10 in seven innings. Gibbons (2 hits, 3 RBI) and Jason Fidalgo (2 hits, 3 RBI, 2 runs) powered the offense. Andy McAllister and Dan Cosgrove each had a hit with two RBI and two runs.

In the third week of the season, Wollaston played its best ball by winning five of six games to move into first place.

Dolbear fired a four-hitter with eight strikeouts and no walks to lead Wollaston to a 1-0 victory over Hingham. Conley knocked in Dolbear for the only run of the game in the third inning. The infield turned three double plays and center fielder James Zapata gunned down the tying run to end the game.

Wollaston routed Weymouth, 11-1. Tam allowed only four hits while punching out seven and walking two. Reardon went 3-for-4 with three RBI to lead the offense. Rich Zapata, Tam, MacNeil, James Zapata, Mike McLaughlin and Terance O'Connell all had two hits.

Wollaston suffered an 11-4 loss to Cedar Grove. Fidalgo (Navy bound in August) led the offense, going 3-for-3 with a triple and three RBI.

Against then first-place South Boston, Wollaston rebounded with thrilling back-to-back victories by scores of 10-8 and 7-6.

In the first game, Reardon battled Southie batters all night, giving up seven hits while striking out six and walking one. Down 3-0 in the first, Cosgrove and Fidalgo each singled and scored on Dolbear's three-run homer into the tennis courts.

James Zapata ripped a two-run triple in the third inning and Gibbons also tripled in two runs in the sixth. Kellan Losi came off the bench to knock in an insurance run in the sixth.

In the second game, Dalton relieved Dolbear in the first with no outs and Wollaston down 6-0. Dalton proceeded to blank Southie, fanning eight, walking two and allowing three hits.

Wollaston chipped away with a pair of runs in the second inning. McAllister doubled in Dalton and Gibbons, who had both singled. In the third, Dalton blasted a double that plated Reardon (double), James Zapata (single) and McLaughlin (single).

In the fifth, McAllister walked to lead off the inning and scored on Dolbear's triple to tie the game. Cosgrove put down a perfect squeeze bunt to score Dolbear for the go-ahead run.

Vic DiGravio Memorial Golf Tourney

The fourth annual Vic DiGravio Jr. Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Monday, Aug. 4, at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

The registration deadline is Monday, July 28.

The tournament is being held in memory of Vic DiGravio who died of cancer in 1999.

The tournament will be a scramble format with a 1 p.m. shotgun start. Dinner will be served at the South Shore Country Club immediately following the tourney at approximately 6:30 p.m.

Entry fee is $100 per person, which includes greens fees, cart, gifts and dinner. For those attending just the dinner, the donation is $30 per person.

All proceeds from the tournament will fund the Vic DiGravio Jr. Memorial Scholarship at Bridgton Academy in North Bridgton, Maine. The scholarship provides financial aid to students from Quincy, Weymouth and Marshfield who attend Bridgton.

In the last three years the tourney has raised $48,000 for the scholarship fund for local students attending Bridgton Academy. Over 100 golfers played in last year's tourney, with 150 people attending the post-tournament dinner and awards ceremony.

Vic DiGravio grew up in Weymouth and attended Weymouth High School where he was an outstanding athlete. He graduated from Bridgton Academy in 1959. After marrying, he lived in Quincy where he owned and operated Spotlight Tavern for over 20 years.

Entry fees and/or donations can be sent to: Vic

DiGravio Jr. Memorial Golf Tournament, 89, Puritan Drive, Quincy, MA 02169. For more information call Vic DiGravio III at 617-328-8170 or Sean Downing at 781-356-5191.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Taking The Steps To Find A Cure For Diabetes

(NAPS) — There's no doubt about it, walking is good for you. It's good for your heart, it's good for your lungs and it's good for your overall well-being.

Yet many of us limit the amount of walking we do daily while relying on cars, escalators or moving walkways rather than taking the necessary steps to get where we are going. This often results in missed opportunities for daily physical activity.

Walking is an excellent form of physical activity, particularly because of its versatility. Almost anyone — of any age and/or fitness level — can do it anywhere.

Here's an opportunity to get together for a non-competitive yet beneficial walking event: America's Walk for Diabetes is a walk to raise money to help find a cure for diabetes and improve the lives of all people with diabetes.

Every year, more than 100,000 Americans in almost 250 cities across the country team up with their families, neighbors, co-workers and friends to raise funds to find a cure for diabetes.

Most of these local walk-a-thons are less than five miles, and you can sign up online. Walkers gather donations from local businesses and individuals to help raise funds for diabetes research. Some people form corporate teams within their workplace, having their employers sponsor and also participate in the walk.

Approximately 17 million people in the United States, or 6.2 percent of the population, have diabetes. While an estimated 11.1 million have been diagnosed, roughly one-third are unaware that they have the disease.

The cause of diabetes continues to be a mystery, although both genetics and environmental factors such as obesity and lack of exercise appear to play roles in developing type 2 diabetes. The best advice: stay fit, help raise money in the fight against diabetes and reduce your risk of developing type 2 by joining America's Walk for Diabetes.

The national presenting sponsor of the walk is Equal Sweetener. Other national corporate sponsors include Cary's Sugar Free Syrup, Fiber One Bran Cereal, Glucerna, Hershey's and Reeses Sugar Free Chocolate Candy, Kraft Diabetic Choices, Murray Sugar Free Cookies, US DenTek Oral Care and Veryfine Fruit. Both Health and People magazine are the event media sponsors.

For more information on America's Walk for Diabetes, to sign up as a walker, sponsor or volunteer, or to donate, call the American Diabetes Association at 1-888-DIA-BETES (1-888-342-2383) or visit www.diabetes.org/walk.

The American Diabetes Association is the nation's leading voluntary health organization supporting diabetes research, information and advocacy. Founded in 1940, the association has offices in every region of the country, providing services in hundreds of communities.

'Operation HeartSafe Summer' American Heart Association Launches Safety Campaign

Summer is here, which means more and more time will be spent engaging in summer sports and activities.

For many of us, this means spending time around water — the backyard pool, local lakes and ponds, and ocean-front beaches.

With this in mind, the American Heart Association has launched its annual "Operation HeartSafe Summer" campaign to educate the public about ways to stay safe this summer. One way is to learn CPR.

"Learning CPR is the number-one thing you can do to make this a safe summer for you and your family," says Boston EMS Capt. George Murphy, who is also an American Heart Association BLS/ACLS regional faculty member. "Drowning is a leading cause of death in children, and we urge parents, grandparents, and other caregivers to learn CPR so they will be prepared in case of an emergency."

It only takes a few hours to learn CPR, and the American Heart Association offers classes in every community. To find a class, call 1-888-CPR-LINE.

Operation HeartSafe Summer Tips

- Know how to swim. Check with your local YMCA or fitness club for classes.

- Keep a constant watch over infants and children who are swimming. A child can drown in minutes, even in shallow water.

- No child is "drown proof," and the ability to swim doesn't prevent drowning. A drowning child often sinks quietly without screaming for help or thrashing in the water.

- Be aware of your location, especially if you are traveling and in an unfamiliar place. If you have to call 9-1-1, you may have to give your location to the dispatcher. Keep a cell phone by the pool.

For people living with heart disease or stroke, the elderly, and other high-risk groups, avoiding heat exhaustion and heat stroke is crucial on days when the heat and humidity soar.

Dehydration is also a major concern, as extreme fluid loss can lead to heart and brain damage. Watch for symptoms of heat exhaustion, including sweating; cold, clammy skin; dizziness; rapid pulse; throbbing pressure in your head; chills; flushed appearance, and nausea.

The symptoms for heat stroke include warm, dry skin with no sweating or heavy sweating; cold, clammy skin; low blood pressure; confusion; becoming unconscious; high fever; slow pulse; and ashen or gray skin.

The American Heart Association has also developed a new first aid course, called Heartsaver First Aid, which is designed to train lay rescuers to recognize and treat medical emergencies and injuries until emergency medical services (EMS) personnel arrive.

For more information on Heartsaver First Aid, call 1-888-CPR-LINE.

REPAIRING A BROKEN TOOTH

When a tooth is chipped, it can be quickly and easily repaired with bonding, in most cases. This restorative technique involves preparing the tooth surface with a mild acid, after which a bonding agent is applied to the tooth and cured with a special light. Next, the tooth is built up with resins to duplicate the color and shape of the original tooth. The repairs can usually be made without the use of a local anesthetic. On the other hand, if the nerve (pulp) of the tooth is involved, a root canal may be necessary. In cases where a tooth darkens or discolors following trauma, the permanent tooth may be bleached or even veneered with bonding material.

The majority of chipped teeth can be repaired with bonding. We will make suggestions to help you maintain good oral health. Today, life expectancy is projected well into an individual's eighties and beyond. With proper home care and professional supervision, there is no reason why a person can't enjoy the comforts of good dental health well into later life. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. For a more elegant and longer-lasting treatment of chipped or discolored teeth, porcelain veneers may be considered.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Thank God for memory, that most gracious artist, who softens the hard things in our life, and makes more beautiful the beautiful ones.

As we grow older memory becomes a treasure storehouse. The highlights of our years are there... vivid pictures of beauties appreciated. The heart-warming reminiscences of friends we've known... The tender thoughts of family and events that have happened... The satisfaction of recalling work well done... The feeling that we have meant something to those who meant so much to us... highlights stored in memory's treasure house to be recalled at will to encourage and sustain us whenever we need them...

"Memory is a capricious and arbitrary creature. You never can tell what pebbles she will pick up from the shore of life to keep among her treasures, or what inconspicuous flower of the field she will preserve as the symbol of 'thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears.' ... And yet I do not doubt that the most important things are always the best remembered." -- Henry Van Dyke devoted mainly to classroom study, while the afternoons deal with the physical aspects of the job. Recruits will receive instruction on a wide array of topics, such as the proper use of aerial ladders, fire pumps and hoses. They will learn how to make forcible entries, deal with car fires or extinguish blazes containing flammable liquids.

Firefighter Recruits Undergo Intense Training

The curriculum mirrors the guidelines set forth by the Massachusetts Firefighting Academy. "We tweak some of it to follow Quincy's needs," Kennedy said.

When tackling a blaze, firefighters must carry approximately 50 pounds of equipment, including fire-resistant boots, pants, jacket, gloves, helmet and a Self-Contained Breathing Apparatus, or SCBA unit, along with a backpack harness assembly.

"The body has to breathe, and fighting a fire can make it hot very quickly," said Kennedy, who has been teaching new recruits at the academy for five years. "It's like a sauna."

On this particular day, the recruits are conducting search and rescue missions in a simulated building fire. Recruits must enter the academy's "maze," and conduct a search of the premises and rescue any possible victims. Recruits are taught how

21 Recruits Enrolled In Firefighting Academy

Here is a list of 21 firefighters currently enrolled in the Quincy Firefighting Training Academy:

Michael Dwyer, Michael Eastwick, Nick Levins, Daniel Garrett, Michael Slade, David Grindle, Eric

to evaluate the layout of a building simply by observing the outside of a structure.

"This is the first time they have had to search for a victim, so I'm sure it's intimidating. I know it's intimidating," said Kennedy, a Quincy firefighter for 18 years.

"Remember guys, this is not a race, this is a confidence builder," Kennedy tells the recruits before they enter the maze.

Led by Daniel Garrett of Quincy, the first three recruits crawl into darkness and begin their search. "Anybody in here?" Garrett shouts several times while performing a left hand search along the walls of the structure. After 15 minutes of intense struggle, the men discover a victim lying under the bed. Now, switching to a right hand search, the recruits begin to exit the structure. Suddenly, one of their air tanks begins to sound an audible alarm. Along with the noise, the mechanism provides a vibrating pulse to the firefighter's face, which alerts the wearer that his air is low. An audible alarm by itself could prove to be confusing to firefighters in the heat of the moment, Kennedy said.

"When that alert goes off it means one of those guys has approximately 25 percent of air left in his tank," Kennedy said. "That means they have three to five minutes left of air."

The recruits manage to lug the simulation dummy out of the maze to safety. Mission accomplished. The entire exercise takes approximately 20 minutes to complete.

Kennedy said the fire department has two hand-held thermal imaging devices that aid firefighters during search and rescue missions. The units cost approximately $12,000 each, Kennedy said. The recruits will have to pass five written tests, including a final exam. In addition, they must pass all skills and physical tests, including the two-man ladder throw, operating an SCBA or fire pump.

Before it's over, recruits will also put their knowledge and skills to the test by fighting real blazes under controlled circumstances at Logan Airport and Moon Island, the site of the Boston Firefighting Training Academy.

New to the academy's list of activities this year is placing firefighters in a "flashover" simulator, which is possibly the most dangerous situation they can face. A "flashover" occurs when an entire room bursts into flames. The results are often deadly, according to Kennedy.

Recruits will be taught how to recognize a "flash-over" circumstance. "If you are lucky you might get out," he said. "Chances are, if you don't move quickly you are going to die. There are tell-tale signs that this is going to happen. So you don't want to get yourself caught in that type of position. This is what the simulator teaches these guys - how to read the fire."

Quincy resident Eric Gomes, 34, one of the new recruits, said the training has been physically demanding.

"It's not overwhelming but we are moving at a good pace," he said. "Training in the heat makes it physically demanding, but it's part of the job. I wanted to become a firefighter because it's mentally and physically demanding."

Chris Malone, 25, a life-long Quincy resident, decided to become a firefighter after serving in the Marine Corps. He sees similarities between both endeavors because they involve teamwork.

"The structure is very much the same," he said. "I've always loved Quincy, and this is an opportunity I have to give back to the wonderful city I grew up in."

CITY OF QUINCY observed the 50th anniversary of the truce that ended the Korean War, long known as 'the forgotten war,' with solemn ceremonies Sunday at Quincy's Korean War Veterans Memorial. Here, participants in the ceremonies stand at attention while the Rev. Margie King Saphir, affiliate minister of United First Parish Church, gives the invocation. Retirement Board Lawyer Reviewing Maher Pension

The Quincy Retirement Board has its attorney researching the possibility of revoking the $36,000 annual pension of Ralph Maher, the retired chief plumbing inspector who was convicted of a felony.

Maher, who held the city job for 27 years, pleaded guilty last week to breaking and entering, larceny in a building and wanton destruction of property during a City Hall break-in in December, 2001.

He was sentenced by Judge John Cratsley in Norfolk Superior Court to six months probation and ordered to pay a $500 fine and make restitution of $393 to the city for the door to Personnel Director Kevin Madden's office that was damaged.

"We have given the matter of Maher's pension to the Board's attorney to research," said George McCray, chairman of the Retirement Board. "We just can't discuss taking it away on the basis of a newspaper story.

"We have very little discretion. If he is guilty of a crime in the performance of his duty, we have to take away his pension. If not, that's another story. We don't take things like that lightly."

McCray said the results of the attorney's research may be ready for discussion at the Board's next meeting, which is not yet posted but probably will be held around Aug. 26.

The Board is made up of five individuals — Chairman McCray, a retired fire captain, and members Richard Crespi, a retired police officer; City Councillor Frank McCauley; Roger Perfetti, a retired banker; and Richard Fitzpatrick, the city auditor.

The Maher trial in Dedham drew in the name of former Mayor James Sheets, who lost his bid for an unprecedented seventh term to William Phelan by a scant 17 votes in the November, 2001, election.

Sheets said he was in his office cleaning out his desk on the morning of Saturday, Dec. 15, 2001, when Maher and Daniel Keating, Sheets' executive secretary, admittedly broke into Madden's office at City Hall.

Keating also pleaded guilty in April to breaking and entering and was given six months probation and fined $500.

Sheets said he did not know of the break until Madden noticed a new door on his office and Keating admitted to him that he had broken into the office to get a copy of the firefighters' contact.

However, the only things that were taken from Madden's office were parts of Maher's personnel file.

At Maher's trial, his attorney, Richard Egbert, said: "We specifically deny the allegation that the mayor had no knowledge of the incident." He refused to elaborate.

Sheets, in turn, denied Egbert's allegation, repeating that he knew nothing of the break-in until Keating informed him that he was involved.

Stage Is Set For Four Preliminary Elections Sept. 16 Newton Surprise Mayor Candidate

The stage was set for a mayoral preliminary election Tuesday when Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton entered the race as an 11th hour surprise candidate.

Three other preliminary contests will also be held Tuesday, Sept. 16, for the Wards 1 and 6 council seats and for school committee.

Thirty-two candidates for mayor, city councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committee filed nomination papers by Tuesday's 5 p.m. deadline.

Newton joined Quincy businessman and political newcomer Harvey Kertzman as a challenger to incumbent Mayor William Phelan, who is seeking a second term after upsetting Mayor James Sheets by 17 votes in Quincy's closest ever mayoral election in 2001.

JOSEPH NEWTON

Related Story On Page 19

Phelan and Kertzman had filed their papers by last week but Newton did not pick up his until Tuesday morning — the last day — and hustled off to get the required 50 signatures before the 5 p.m. deadline.

Newton in April had disclosed he would not seek a third term as Ward 6 councillor, citing "personal time demands."

But on Tuesday, Newton said he is running for mayor because "you have to have some competition" and "there are some issues that I want to see addressed."

City Council President Daniel Raymondi, who for months had been considered a major potential mayoral contender, filed papers for re-election to his Ward 2 council seat. No opponent filed.

Robert Boussy, who had papers out for both mayor and councillor at-large, filed for the latter. He became the sixth at-large candidate, just one shy of the seven that would have forced a preliminary runoff.

Mosque Fire Suspicious But Not A Hate Crime

Quincy Police and the State Fire Marshal are continuing an investigation into a fire at the Islamic Center in Quincy Point which has been described as suspicious but probably not a hate crime.

"It is suspicious because it started of undetermined origin outside the building," said Detective Capt. Allan Gillen. "But there is no evidence that accelerants were used. We have no suspects."

The fire started underneath the stairs of a wooden back porch leading up to the second floor of the Islamic Center of New England at 470 South St. and had begun burning the floor when it was discovered.

"The fire started about 2 a.m. Sunday," said Nezam Khan, the general secretary of the mosque. "We had just left the building at midnight when someone set the back porch on fire."

"It was discovered when the alarm system went off at fire headquarters. A cleaning crew was inside the building but they saw and heard nothing until the alarm went off."

Khan said a Monday appraisal set the damage at between $15,000 and $20,000.

No one was injured and worshippers were able to enter the building at 4 a.m. Sunday for the day's first prayers. There was no indication that there were religious or racial motives behind the arson attempt.

Khan recalled that nine or ten years ago someone had thrown a Molotov cocktail at the building and burned much of it down. Members had it rebuilt.

"Lately there's been some minor incidents," he said, "mostly by juveniles who did very little damage."

"The police in Quincy have been very helpful. They give the Center 24-hour surveillance at times, depending on what is going on around the world."

"Sometimes they leave a cruiser there all night."

Nearly 10,000 Free Copies Printed

Quincy Beach Guide Top Local 'Best Seller'

By TOM HENSHAW
The fastest-moving book in Quincy is not on anyone's best-seller list, has only 24 pages and no mention at all of Harry Potter and the Hogwarts School of Wizardry.

It's the fourth edition of "Quincy's Beaches," a guide to the salt water swimming holes in the city, prepared by Chairman Leo Kelly and the Quincy Beaches & Coastal Commission.

And, best of all, it's free for the asking.

"Our Beaches Guide provides all the information you need to enjoy our city's beaches," said Mayor William Phelan.

"In addition to Wollaston Beach, Quincy has 10 municipal beaches along our 27-mile coastline. Residents should take full advantage of the opportunities that living in Quincy offers."

Nearly 10,000 copies of the guide were printed by the city's Information Technology Department under the direction of Kelly and Ron Donovan, the director of the department.

The 2003 edition is dedicated to the memory Harbormaster Bernard Reisberg and Robert Lescinskas Sr., both members of the commission who died with the past year.

Copies of the guide are available at City Hall, the public libraries, community centers, variety stores, packies, bait shops and even the National Park Service visitors' center.

In addition to the city's beaches, the guide provide information on parking, beach amenities, a tide chart, shell-fishing rules, fishing tips and information on sampling water for possible pollution.

"Unfortunately, many people falsely assume that our coastal waters are still unfit for swimming," said Mayor Phelan. "The federal, state and local governments have worked hard over the last decade and have spent millions of dollars to clean our waters."

Quincy's municipal beaches are tested weekly for water quality by the Quincy Health Department. In 2002, more than 90 percent of the samples showed the municipal beaches safe for swimming. When the high-test samples were re-sampled, only one retest exceeded the state's water quality standard for swimming.

"Our coastal waters are as clean as they have been in a century," said Phelan. "We all paid to clean it up, we might as well enjoy it."

The Beaches & Coastal Commission will be conducting a series of "Beach Bashes" this summer to encourage people to return to the beaches.

A recent Beach Bash in Germantown featured a disc jockey, games, face-painting and a cookout. The event drew approximately 60 Germantown residents.
"Our beaches can be beautiful waterfront parks for our families to enjoy. You don't have to go to Cape Cod or Marshfield or anywhere other than Quincy this summer to enjoy wonderful beaches," added Phelan.

Zero Tolerance, Police Say

Crack Down On Wollaston Beach Drinking

Quincy Police worked alongside State Police Friday night in a sting operation designed to crack down on public drinking at Wollaston Beach.

Lt. John Dougan said two

Quincy Police officers joined five State Police officers in an attempt to put a crimp on public drinking and rabble rousing along the beach.

No arrests were made Friday night by Quincy Police, but Dougan said the patrols will be part of an ongoing effort to crackdown on problems along the beach this summer.

Mayor William Phelan said he asked Quincy Police

Chief William Falco to put together a sting operation to assist State Police.

"We needed more patrols along Wollaston Beach, now that the warmer weather is here," said Phelan.

Dougan said police are calling it "Operation: Zero Tolerance," which means anyone found with an open container of alcohol or minors in possession of alcohol will be arrested.

"Public drinking will not be tolerated," said Dougan. "We will be participating in these operations throughout the summer so people should be aware. Eventually, the word will get out that the police are making periodic stops here."

The state Legislature recently restored some $36,000 in funds for State Police patrols along Quincy Shore Drive and the beach. The funds had been cut by Gov. Mitt Romney.

Sen. Michael Morrissey last week said he urged Phelan to extend community-policing efforts to include the beach.

Approval 'Necessary'

Crucial Vote On High School Aug. 18, Mayor Says

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city council's stamp of approval on an $80 million bond for the construction of a new high school is "necessary to move the project forward," Mayor William Phelan stated.

At a special city council meeting on Aug. 18, the Phelan administration intends to present a funding plan to cover construction costs of a new Quincy High School on Faxon Field, next to the existing school on Coddington St. The current high school would be renovated and transformed into a new Central Middle School.

Financing for the new school will come in the form of a bond, estimated at approximately $80 million, Phelan said. Complete details of the plan will be revealed at the council meeting, he said.

"A vote to approve the bond is necessary to move the project forward," Phelan told The Quincy Sun.

Quincy is eligible to be reimbursed 90 percent of the cost of construction because the city is able to utilize the state School Building Assistance Program. Since the city has a racially imbalanced school, the Parker Elementary School, it was able to apply for the 90 percent reimbursement.

Soon after taking office,

Gov. Mitt Romney ordered a moratorium on the program, which meant Quincy was in danger of losing the funding.

But School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said state Education Secretary David Driscoll extended the city's deadline for submitting a funding plan to Aug. 29.

Quincy's original deadline for submitting a plan was June 30, he said. Projects approved must still meet the August deadline or risk being shut out, he said.

Sen. Michael Morrissey, who spoke to Driscoll about the project, said approval of the plan is crucial.

"If the council drags its feet it could kill the project," Morrissey said. "This is one of the largest legislative issues in the city's history. Funding must be approved because we will not get another opportunity to obtain 90 percent reimbursement."

Some councillors believe the plan is being forced into the limelight without proper public scrutiny.

"This is a big issue for the city and taxpayers," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin. "I feel like we have been in a crisis mentality with issues like the open space plan, firefighters and this. This is not the most effective way to operate. It puts us in a

A Woman Councillor -- Or Two?

One of the longest and bumpy political roads for women has been the one that leads to the city council chamber.

Only three have successfully traveled it in Quincy's 114-year history as a city.

It's been a virtual one-way street for men.

In those 114 years, there have been some 366 men on the council.

The only three women:

TOLAND

Edna Austin, the first, who was elected in 1942 and served until 1959 when she retired.

Joanne Condon, the second, was elected to the Ward 6 seat in 1977. She gave up the seat in 1985 to make an unsuccessful run against incumbent Mayor Frank McCauley.

Patricia (Pat) Toland was the third and last woman to serve in the council chamber. A former school committee member, she was elected to the council in 1981 and served until 1993 when she left and became assistant city clerk.

And, she is the only woman in the city's history to serve as council president, second only to mayor in political power under the city's Plan A charter. She held the post and the honor in 1988-1989.

Condon and Toland served two years together on the council but it has been all-male territory for the past decade.

Observers think that could change this election year.

There are four women candidates running for council seats:

School Committeewoman Jo-Ann Bragg is a candidate for one of three council at-large seats, the only woman in that field.

Joanne Bythrow, a political newcomer, seeks the Ward 1 seat incumbent Greg Hanley is leaving at the end of the year.

Also after that seat are James Bottary, Joseph Keegan, former Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly and Sean McArdle.

State Prescription Plan Set To Reopen Enrollment Aug. 1

The Legislature and the Romney Administration have reached a rare agreement on funding that will preserve the Prescription Advantage program through the fiscal 2004 state budget.

As a result, the state will resume enrolling new members in the drug insurance plan for senior citizens and low-income individuals with disabilities from Aug. 1 through 31 and start the plan anew Oct. 1.

Applications must be received no later than Aug. 31. "The restoration of Prescription Advantage will improve many seniors' quality of life by providing access to affordable medications," said Rep. Ron Mariano. "I am proud that we can continue to offer this program to those who need it most."

A number of cost share changes will be implemented Oct. 1. Members in all premium categories will see a reduction in their annual out-of-pocket spending limit. The lowest income members will have lower co-payments and no quarterly deductible.

For members who reach their annual out-of-pocket spending limit, Prescription Advantage pays the full cost of their covered prescription drugs through the end of the plan year. The new rates will be effective Oct. 1.

Applications and plan information may be obtained by calling Prescription Advantage Customer Service at 1-800-AGE-INFO (1-800-243-4636).

Adoption fees include initial vaccinations and Spay/Neuter as needed. 100% volunteer run, new volunteers always needed. WE NEED YOUR HELP!

We are currently over capacity with cats and kittens - PLEASE consider giving one of these animals a forever home!

DOGS Available for Adoption

JAKE, sweet 3 yr. old male Lab/Spinel/Pit mix. Needs training and exercise. Great with kids, people and other dogs, but no cats. Would make excellent walking partner.

EMMA, 2 1/2 year old female Shepard mix. Walks nicely on leash. Up to date on all her shots.

DAISY, beautiful white and brown spaniel/hound cross. 4 yrs. old, spayed and all her shots. Great with kids and cats, likes most dogs. High jumper - yard would be advantageous but not totally necessary.

AVAILABLE CATS

GROVER, all black neutered male. FIV+. A bit overweight, on a special diet of Science Diet Kitten Growth Formula. He is a people person cat and is the first one to welcome volunteers with a happy meow.

JENNA, 9 yr. old black female. DSH with emerald green eyes. Great with other cats, all types of people as well as older children. Was surrendered by an owner who said she sometimes missed the litter box. However, she has no problems in the shelter and we feel it might be a great attraction. Hardwood floors and linoleum floors would be best for this young lady.

BINNEY, black and white DSH, approx. 2 years old. Stripe down the center of his face. Good with other cats. A wonderful cat who needs to be kept mentally stimulated with a good game of toss or catch the mouse.

PUPPY, black and brown tabby, neutered male, 9-10 yrs. old. Would do well in a home without other cats, low activity level.

ROMEO, 5 yrs. old black male. DSH, FIV+. He had hurt his leg, brought to VCA by a Good Samaritan.

Scenes From Yesterday

Metropolitan Boulevard, Wollaston, Mass.

THIS IS A 1910 postcard view of Wollaston Boulevard looking north from the end of Rice Road. The Metropolitan District Commission had just built this road by filling in part of the tidal salt marsh along Quincy's shore, thus creating Wollaston Beach on the right and isolating lowlands along The Strand and Chick Street on the left. This view is from what was known as Rufe's Hummock, a glacial drumlin that was later leveled to take the rise out of the road and to create the parking area now on the right of this view. The loose soil from the hummock was used to fill in the marshes that are now the site of Princess Eve Drive. In the great Portland Storm of 1898 a large ship was washed ashore here near a colony of cottages that were removed when the road was built.

300 Boats Expected In First QBRW

Some 300 boats in 20 different classes were expected to take part in the first annual Quincy Bay Race Week, sponsored by the Quincy, Squantum and Wollaston Yacht Clubs.

Commodore Edward P. Shaw of Wollaston, race week president, called it "the biggest yachting event ever staged in American waters, save for the Marblehead events of the past few years."

Gov. Charles F. Hurley was to fire the first starting gun to begin the five consecutive days of water festivities and award the prizes on the final evening at Quincy Yacht Club.

POLITICS CHARGED

Contractor Stephen E. O'Meara of 36 Eustis St., Wollaston, charged that he lost a $3,700 contract to plaster the new central fire station when he disclosed his support of Charles A. Ross for mayor.

"Once I got a signed sub-contract for the plastering in my pocket I felt sure I was safe," he said. "I told a city councillor one night just where I stood between Burgin and Ross.

"I found out I wasn't as safe as I supposed."

GROSSMAN BOWS OUT

Joseph B. Grossman of Quincy stunned political circles when he announced his "temporary" retirement from politics after six years as a governor's councillor and 25 years in elective office.

RECIPROCAL RESCUE

Ashton Cox of 229 Arlington St., Wollaston, pulled his partner, Harold Robbins of 235 Newport Ave., to safety when he was trapped in a flaming garage pit at the Robbins and Cox Garage, 66 Beale St., Wollaston.

In May, 1937, Robbins had rescued Cox from a similar predicament when he was caught beneath a burning racing car that had overturned at the Speedway in Newmarket, N.H.

QUINCY-ISM

The diary of Oscar Bartolini, the Quincy handyman who was condemned to die in the electric chair Aug. 30 for the murder of Mrs. Grace Asquith, was running serially in the Patriot Ledger. . . Mrs. Arthur F. Hartford presided at a meeting of the Greater Quincy Townsend Club at Moose Hall in the Coolidge Building. . . Lettuce was 5 cents a head and spare ribs 15 cents a pound at the Stop and Shop on Southern Artery on the site of the old Morey Pearl Tent. . . Johnny Gillis of Quincy cleaned up the 135-pound class at the boxing tournament at Ocean Gardens, Nantasket, defeating Arthur Morris of Boston and Leo Stakenberg of Randolph and kayoing Tommy Emmanuella of Cohasset. . . The City Council appropriated $68,460 as Quincy's share in a $450,000 project to dredge and widen Town River to permit passage of ocean-going ships.

READERS FORUM

McCauley Takes Issue With Letter On City Councillors

I read with interest Mr. Giarrantani's recent letter to the editor entitled "Councillors-at-Large Cede Too Much Power to Ward Councillors."

Since Quincy became a city 114 years ago three city charters have been in effect. The original charter (1889-1916) provided for a city council of 23 members, with five elected at large and three elected from each of the six wards (too many).

The Plan E Charter (1950-1957) provided for seven members, all elected at-large (too few).

The charter that has worked the best over the years is the modified Plan A charter, with nine councillors, three elected at-large and six elected from the wards.

All city councillors, whether serving as ward councillors or councillors at-large, have the same rights and responsibilities. However, the ward councillors deal with the local problems and issues that emanate from their constituents. For councillors at-large to intrude in these matters would be classic cases of the old adage, "too many cooks spoil the broth." It is the councillors' at-large responsibility to lend support to the ward councillors if and when these issues and problems require city council action.

I take a strong exception to Mr. Giarrantani's statement that councillors at large "go silent allowing ward councillors to tackle citywide issues on a ward to ward basis." As a councillor at-large I speak "loud and clear" on all issues, including two recent citywide issues. An ordinance providing a minimum manning provision for the fire department and the $10 million bond issue for park and recreation upgrading and the purchase of land for open space.

Mr. Giarrantani pines for a "citywide master plan for housing." I have news for him: we do have such a plan. It is embodied in the zoning ordinances. Zoning was first enacted in Quincy in 1943 and has been refined and updated several times over the years.

The city has a Department of Planning and Community Development as well as three boards, the Planning Board, the Zoning Board of Appeals and the Conservation Commission, to oversee and to deal with zoning and environmental issues. The members of the three boards spend many hours on these issues and serve without pay.

If Mr. Giarrantani is really unhappy with the operation of our city government I suggest he put down his pen and offer himself as a candidate for the Quincy City Council. Francis X. McCauley

Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI), in collaboration with the Chinese Historical Society of New England, will host a photography exhibit featuring the lives of Chinese in Massachusetts dating back to the 1860s.

The exhibit will be held from Saturday, Aug. 2, to Sunday, Aug. 17, at the Kam Man Supermarket, Presidents Plaza, 227 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

The display is free and open to the public.

The exhibit uses photographs and narrative text in both English and Chinese to depict the lives and stories of the Chinese in New England. The themes covered include family, work, women, military and education.

"Quincy is known as the city of immigrants, the newest wave of immigrants in Quincy are Asians, predominantly Chinese," said Kao T. Li, executive director of QARI.

"It is important for recent immigrants to understand the fact that Asians started to settle in Massachusetts over a hundred years ago and to appreciate the contributions of Asian-Americans to society."

Childrens' Activities Continue At Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library is sponsoring several activities for children during the summer season.

Art To Go - a program for children of all ages. Projects are open-ended so that a toddler can complete them with an adult's help and older children can express their creativity through design and detail.

Craft time is located at the Main Library from 2 to 4 p.m. on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays. This week create a musical rattle.

Registration begins on Monday, Aug. 4 for the Aug. 13 and 15th Tiny Tot Tunes program. The program is for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult. Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. For more information visit the library or call the Children's Room at 617-376-2411 to register.

16th Annual Storyteller Series - In keeping with this year's arts theme, performers will include music, dance and puppetry with their stories. These programs are for a school-age audience.

On Aug. 5 at 7 p.m., Storyteller/Musician Sydelles Pearl entertains with a selection of stories and songs both old and new at the Main Library. Registration is not required.

Pajama Time is a drop in storytime presented by storyteller Cheryl Dunford that includes stories, songs, rhymes and a simple craft. Children are welcome to attend in their pajamas.

The program is offered as a complement to the Summer Storyteller Series for older children so that younger siblings or children too young for the other program can have a story all their own.

Pajama Time is intended for children ages 2-5. Registration is not required.

Puzzle Crafts will be offered on Friday, Aug. 8 from 2 to 2:45 p.m. at the Wollaston Branch. Hear a puzzling story and learn how to make different types of puzzles. Each participant will make a jigsaw puzzle, a stick puzzle and a set of tangrams. The program is for children ages 5-8. For more information please call the Wollaston Branch at 617-376-1330.

Family Book Bingo - A new program this summer for the whole family. When your family registers between now and Aug. 15 you will receive a bingo card. After each family member has completed a bingo card, return all of the cards to the library.

As a prize for playing your family will receive a bright green Read! Think! Create! book pack, while supplies last. Each family will also receive a summer reading certificate.

For more information about these programs visit the Thomas Crane Public Library's website at <http://ci.quincy.ma.us/tcpl/>.

Arts Affair On Boardwalk At Marina Bay Aug. 2-3

The eighth annual Arts Affair on the Boardwalk will be held the first weekend on August at Marina Bay, 500 Victory Rd., North Quincy. The Saturday, Aug. 2, showing will be from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and the Sunday, Aug. 3, showing will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

More than 300 pieces of art by professionals and amateurs from local art associations in eight surrounding towns will be on display.

For more information, call 617-479-2147.

Judy Mandeville Receives QMC's Excellence In Nursing Award

Judy Mandeville, RN, BSN, CPAN, a Quincy Medical Nurse for 28 years, is the 2003 recipient of QMC's Excellence in Nursing Award.

Mandeville, who works in QMC's Post-Anesthesia Unit, was recognized for her outstanding professionalism and compassion. The Excellence in Nursing Award is presented each year during the medical center's celebration of National Nurses Week.

Certified in PeriAnesthesia Nursing by the American Board of PeriAnesthesia Nursing Cer-tification, Inc., Mandeville is among only 4,000 of the nation's nearly two million registered nurses to have earned that certification. Mandeville, who received a standing ovation during the recent ceremony, was also acknowledged for her role as a mentor to the nursing staff.

Charles Doherty Awarded $5,000 Scholarship From Masons

Charles J. Doherty of Quincy was recently presented a $5,000 scholarship from the Grand Lodge of Masons of Massachusetts at their annual scholarship dinner held at the organization's Boston headquarters.

This year, the Masons of Massachusetts distributed more than $425,000 in scholarship funds to 85 deserving students.

Scholarship recipients are selected based upon criteria including academic achievement, participation in school activities and community involvement.

Doherty, a 1998 graduate of North Quincy High School, attends the University of Massachusetts-Boston, where he is majoring in communications, professional writing and political science.

He intends to pursue a career in sports journalism upon graduation.

Since its founding in 1995, the Grand Lodge Scholarship Program has distributed more than $1.9 million in funding to high school students across Massachusetts to be used at an accredited college, univer-

Wollaston Church Seeks To Understand Others' Faiths

The Wollaston Congregational Church will hold a series of four Tuesday luncheons and suppers designed to "Understand My Neighbor's Faith."

The first will be a luncheon held Aug. 5 from 12 noon to 1:30 p.m. at the church, 48 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston, and will feature a panel of five Protestant ministers.

They are the Revs. Ann Rearick, Nazarene; Don Remick, United Church of Christ; Stan Johnson, Presbyterian; Buz Wizmire, Lutheran; and Judy Krumme, Episcopal.

The Aug. 12 luncheon also will be from 12 noon to 1:30 p.m. and will hear the Venerable Thich Thien Hue, a Vietnamese Buddhist; and Rabbi Benjamin Lefkowitz, representing Judaism.

The Aug. 19 meeting will be a supper from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the church and the panel will be made up of Robert Mond, the principal of Islamic High School in Quincy, and Alex Kern of the International Quaker Society.

The final supper will be

August 26, also from 6 to 7:30 p.m., and will feature Tina Kahn, a Muslim, and Bill Martinson, who will explain the Native American traditions.

Cost of the luncheons and suppers is $4 per person with no reservations required and door prizes.

Federal Mandate Reinstated

QHA Residents Must Perform Volunteer Work

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

About 160 Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) residents are receiving notice they will be required to perform eight hours of community service per month if they are not working, disabled or in school, according to a federal rule.

Jack Mather, QHA executive director, said the authority sent out approximately 160 letters to residents who may be affected by the federal rule, which was reinstated June 20.

Housing Authorities nationwide are required to inform residents of the US Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Service Self-Sufficiency rule by today (Thursday), and make sure they are honoring the requirement prior to Oct. 31.

The rule will affect federal housing residents only, Mather said. He said the QHA has approximately 180 federal housing units for families.

There are more than a dozen exemptions to the rule, including those for residents age 62 or older, blind, working, in school, or engaged in job-training or job-search programs. Residents who are contacted should inform QHA of any exemption, he said.

Mather said residents will have many options for performing community service, including volunteer work at the hospital, Father Bill's Place or a childcare center.

He said QHA is in the process of compiling a list of organizations and agencies that are looking for volunteers.

Residents who fail to comply with the rule are subject to possible non-renewal of their leases, according to Carolyn Crossley, director of Program Management at QHA.

"If they do not comply this year individuals will have next year to make it up by volunteering 16 hours each month," said Crossley. "If they don't comply they would have to be evicted, according to the rule."

But Mather stressed that QHA will work with residents to ensure compliance.

"Our goal is to make sure we are not evicting families," he said. "QHA will be working with residents to make sure they abide by the rule."

The community service requirement was approved by Congress in 1998, but HUD took two years to complete the regulations. The rule went into effect briefly in 2001, but Congress put a hold on the plan through a Democratic-sponsored amendment.

Elaine Dwyer Candidate To Retain School Seat

Elaine Dwyer announces her candidacy to retain her seat on the school committee.

Dwyer has been serving on the committee since February, 2002 when she was appointed at the joint convention of the city council and school committee to complete Mayor William Phelans' term.

Dwyer, who currently serves as the chairperson of the Health and Safety Subcommittee, said she feels she has achieved two major accomplishments in her short time as member of the school committee.

"One was to lease/purchase seven state-of-the-art mini buses, hire back seven laid off bus drivers and transport our special needs students to their classes within the city thus eliminating our outside vendor service."

After that, she proposed to lease/purchase seven more mini buses to complete the project.

"In September all 239 students will be transported by Quincy public school employees on our own vehicles," she said.

Dwyer also serves on the Special Needs Subcommittee and heard parents' complaints about transportation.

"This project began as a cost savings to our budget, but I quickly learned that the transportation safety of our students is the priority and the cost savings of $300,000 per year was a bonus," she said.

Her second accomplishment, she said, was to request a safety review of every Quincy school facility and monitor the completion of enhancements such as lighting, crosswalks, signage.

"I hope these two projects have made a positive difference in the lives of our students," she said.

Dwyer also serves on the Budget and Finance Subcommittee.

"Last year with the devastating state budget cuts, I honestly feel I maintained the components of public education that are most important to parents and have the most dramatic positive results to students — small class size," she said. "I wanted every child in Quincy to have the same equal chance of getting a good education and statistics show that small class size does that."

Dwyer was also appointed to serve on the Teacher and Secretary Negotiation Contract Teams; the Quincy College Board of Governors appointing committee and the negotiating team to resolve the Quincy College rent dispute.

"This is the first time in over 20 years that a teachers' contract was reached prior to the start of school," she said. "I think as part of the negotiating team, I played a role in this accomplishment. Additionally, teachers and secretaries received a fair and decent raise to compensate for their dedicated service to our system."

As a parent of two daughters in the Quincy public schools, Dwyer said her commitment to public education started long before her seat on the school committee. She served as Merrymount PTO president and citywide representative, Broad Meadows PTO president and citywide representative and School Council Co-Chair and Quincy High School citywide representative.

"My active participation and volunteer work at all three levels of the Quincy public schools and at the citywide level has allowed me to gain an in-depth understanding and appreciation of the Quincy public schools administration and teachers," she said. "This past experience has provided me the tools to serve on the school committee."

"I feel I have made a tremendous difference in the lives of Quincy public school students in the short time I have served on the school committee but have not accomplished all my goals and objectives. I am still actively involved in the current plan to build a new Quincy High School and renovate QHS for Central High School and renovate Sterling Middle School. Unfortunately, this has been a slow and frustrating process through the state's regulatory agencies but I would like the opportunity to see this goal completed."

Newton Surprise Mayor Candidate

The field for the Ward 1 council seat incumbent Greg Hanley is leaving was narrowed to five when perennial candidate Gretchen Grant decided not to run.

The five contenders are: James Bottary, Joanne Bythrow, Joseph Keegan, Leo Kelly, who formerly held the seat, and Sean McArdle.

Five candidates also seek the Ward 6 seat Newton is leaving: Mark Bracken, Alicia Gardner, Atty. William Keener, Maryann Mahony and Brian McNamee. Mahony and McNamee have run for the seat before.

Eight candidates will square off in the school committee preliminary election:

Linda Stice, seeking her fourth term; Elaine Dwyer, the city council-school committee convention choice to fill out Phelan's term on the school board; Brian Buckley, coordinator of Intergenerational Programs for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office; Stephen Golden, educator; Ronald Iacobucci, who is heading up the Mini Fenway Park project; David McCarthy, General Dynamics security director; Theresa Lord-Piatelli, Quincy attorney and chairman of the Quincy College Board of Governors; and John Rodophele, store owner.

Incumbent Christine Cedrone decided not to seek re-election this year, leaving an open seat to be had.

Atty. Jay Davis found himself in a rare political position when he was the only one to file papers for the Ward 4 council seat freshman incumbent Bryan Connolly is vacating.

Normally, a number of candidates such as the turnout in Wards 1 and 6 would make a race for an open ward seat. Davis is virtually assured of being the next Ward 4 councillor before a vote is cast.

Kevin Worley had papers in circulation but did not file them.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, seeking a second term, is unopposed.

But Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin has a familiar opponent in John Cain, who has run for the seat three times.

Six candidates filed for city councillor at-large:

Incumbents Joseph Finn and Frank McCauley, John Keenan, who was elected by the city council to fill the term of Tim Cahill after he was elected state treasurer; Jo-Ann Bragg, a member of the school committee; Jimmy Liang, the first Asian-American candidate for the city council two years ago; and Boussy.

In the four preliminary elections, two are to be nominated for mayor, two each for councillor in Wards 1 and 6, and six for school committee.

The final election is Tuesday, Nov. 4.

Legislature Overrides Romney MWRA Veto

The Legislature has overridden Gov. Romney's veto of a $5 million for the sewer rate relief fund, which is designed to assist residents of the MWRA district with the burden of water and sewer rates.

"We worked very hard this year to produce a fiscally responsible budget, and in these difficult economic times we are fortunate to be receiving the necessary funds," said Rep. Ron Mariano.

In the letter to the leadership of the House and Senate, the MWRA Legislative Caucus argued against the governor's veto of the $5 million for debt service assistance.

The veto, said the letter, "presents a considered and substantial attack on the budgets of thousands of families within the MWRA district."

Both the House and Senate agreed by a 131-21 vote in the House and a 36-4 margin in the Senate.

Keenan Calls For Greater Enforcement Of Parking Ban In Front Yards

Councillor John Keenan called on the Department of Inspectional Services to re-new efforts to enforce the city's zoning ordinance that prohibits parking in front yards.

In a letter to Walter White, director of Inspectional Services, Keenan wrote that several residents have complained regarding the prevalence of parking in front yards.

"These residents find it particularly disturbing that despite the availability of parking spaces in driveways, people choose as a matter of convenience to park on lawns or to pave front yards for parking," Keenan wrote. "The matter is most obvious at multi-family structures."

White said he intends to talk to Keenan regarding the matter.

"This is an ongoing issue and a difficult one," said

White. "There was a movement a few years ago to do away with paving front yards, but it was defeated by the city council."

Keenan said it is important for residents to be aware they cannot park in paved areas that violate the city's ordinance. "If residents know this they will be less likely to pave the yards," Keenan said.

White said the issue is made more difficult because Quincy is an old city.

"Much of Quincy was developed when people had one automobile or none. Nowadays, each household has three or four cars. There isn't a lot of space anymore," said White. "There are some streets where there is no place to go. It's an issue that I'm well aware of and we struggle with it everyday."

Keenan said paving yards and parking on front lawn negatively impacts the look and feel of a neighborhood.

"It lowers property values," said Keenan. "Sometimes it is the little things like this that really impact a neighborhood. Stricter enforcement of existing ordinances will go a long way to solving this problem."

Keenan said the particular ordinance, Section 17.28.030 of the Quincy Municipal Code, prohibits parking in what is called the front yard setback.

A RIBBON-CUTTING ceremony July 10 marked the grand re-opening of Interfaith Social Services (ISS), which moved its operation to 105 Adams St. Among those participating in the ceremony were, from the left: Rev. Ann Suzedell from the Quincy Point Congregational Church; Rev. M. Alicia Corea from the Hough Neck Congregational Church; Mayor William Phelan; volunteer Matti Lang; Council President Dan Raymond; Robert Taylor, executive director of ISS; Tom Williams, ISS supporter; Lauren Stracco, president of ISS; and Monsignor Robert Deeley from St. Ann's Church in Wollaston. ISS has been serving South Shore residents for 56 years.

- learn about our degree programs
- join us for a free lecture on the Big Dig
- choose courses with our advisors
- come to our student art exhibit

Wednesday, August 13, 6pm-8pm
Quincy College's Coddington Hall

Featuring local author & historian David Kruh's....."BIG DIG"

Get the scoop on the Big Dig (and all the little and medium sized digs that came before it) with an illustrated slide show talk by historian, writer, and former Big Dig spokesperson, David Kruh. In his newest one-hour program, David will show how Boston has changed over the past 400 years, from the reduction of Beacon Hill, through the filling in of the Back Bay, ending with the country's most expensive construction job - the Big Dig. You'll go deep inside the project's tunnels and soar high above the towers of Boston's stunning new bridge over the Charles River. You'll also learn about the amazing technological advances being used to build this monstrous project in a working city, and why the price has climbed to $14 billion. Whether you're interested in Boston history, a fan of technology, or just a taxpayer who wants to see where your dollars are being spent by the government, this is a must-see show.

REAL ESTATE

Kits Make Kitchen, Bath Projects Simple

(ARA) - Kitchen and bath improvement projects are an easy way to spruce up the appearance of your home.

To do these types of projects more economically, many homeowners are trying to tackle them on their own. But no matter how handy you may be, the stocked aisles of your local home improvement store can be overwhelming. Not only is it a challenge to find the appropriate products to fit your project needs, knowing the correct quantities of product is crucial to avoid multiple trips to the store.

Fortunately, many companies have made it easier for DIYers to choose the correct product and the correct amount for their kitchen and bath projects by developing project kits for home.

• Shower and Tub Surrounds - As a focal point in the bathroom, installing a new tub surround provides a major facelift in the bathroom. Many manufacturers offer complete kits that include the shower panels and detailed installation instructions. And since you can't install the shower without proper adhesives and sealants, kits such as the PL and Polyseamseal Tub Surround Project provide the perfect amount of adhesive and caulk to install and seal one tub surround.

• Glass Block - Kitchens and baths are the most popular rooms for glass block, and what used to be reserved for professionals is now available to DIYers using Pittsburgh Corning's Kwik'N EZ Rigid Track Silicone System (www.pittsburghcorning.com).

This new system uses silicone sealant instead of mortar to create beautiful glass block creations in a fraction of the time. The kit includes all the material from spacers to sealants and is designed to be used with Pittsburgh Corning's Thinline Series Glass Block.

• Laminate Flooring - A

new floor can make an unbelievable difference in a kitchen or bath, but professional installation can be very costly. Luckily, with new Quick-Step Uniclic laminate flooring (www.quick-step.com), DIYers can install a floor that is durable, yet attractive in a fraction of the time. This kit contains all the tools and accessories needed and installs easily using uniquely milled-shaped panels that click together for a tight connection.

• Faux Like a Pro - With the high cost and hassle of wallpaper, faux finishes have never been more popular. But from "ragging" to "combing," it is hard for anyone to learn how to execute their favorite technique. To make it easier, a husband and wife team, comprised of an Internet visionary and an accomplished decorative painter, launched a new Web site called Faux Like A Pro (www.fauxlikeapro.com), which offers instructions and on-line kits to achieve your favorite faux finish.

To Help First-Time Homebuyers City Receives $25,000 Grant From State Home Loan Program

Quincy has been awarded $25,000 to help families buy homes through the state's SoftSecond Loan Program.

The funds will be used to help low- and moderate-income first-time homebuyers purchase a new home or condominium. Over 50 cities and towns across the state have just received additional mortgage funding totaling $1.96 million.

"Without the state's investment, owning a home would be far out of reach for many low- and moderate-income families," said Jane Wallis Gumble, director of the state Department of Housing and Community Development, which administers the program in conjunction with the Massachusetts Housing Partnership.

A SoftSecond loan combines a first mortgage from a bank with a state-subsidized second mortgage, meaning a typical first-time homebuyer earning $48,000 can now afford a $200,000 home or condo as opposed to $162,000 home with a conventional mortgage.

Created in 1990 to address discriminatory mortgage practices in Boston, SoftSecond soon expanded statewide and has now helped over 6,500 low- and moderate-income families purchase their first home. The program leverages almost $130,000 in private bank financing for every $5,000 in state subsidy.

For more information contact the Massachusetts Housing Partnership at 1-800-752-7131.

(NAPS) - Tired of paying high energy bills? According to the United States Department of Energy, the typical U.S. family spends close to $1,300 a year on their home's utility bills. Unfortunately, much of this money is wasted on energy loss through typical "energy eaters" - poor insulation, leaks, cracks, holes and older appliances in and around the home.

There are practical and simple steps you can take to ensure that your home is energy efficient and that you're using energy dollars wisely. Lennox Industries, a global leader in air conditioning and heating systems and a 2003 ENERGY STAR® Manufacturing Partner of the Year, offers a complete line of energy-efficient products and the following simple tips to help consumers combat energy eaters:

Step 1: Home Analysis

- Locate leaks and holes. Holding a tissue in one hand, quickly trace around windows, doors and floors. If the tissue begins to wave that means air is escaping or entering, and it's time to do some sealing and caulking.

- Look inside walls. Check the level of insulation in walls by making a small hole in the wall in a discreet place, such as a closet, to see if the wall cavity is filled with some form of insulation material. You can also purchase or rent a "laser" thermometer, which detects temperature fluctuations if there is little or no insulation in the wall.

- Determine your home's history. You should know when your house was built and in what geographical area and climate the house resides in order to determine your energy-saving needs. For example, an older home, especially one built before 1980, might not have the recommended level of insulation needed for today's energy use.

Step 2: Home Improvement

- Inspect your attic. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, up to 45 percent of a home's energy loss is through the attic. Be sure the attic is properly insulated and check and seal any openings around the door, pipes, ductwork and chimneys. If attic insulation is less than five inches, add more.

- Weatherize. Old or air-leaking windows and doors can account for 10 to 25 percent of your heating bill. After locating drafts around windows, doors, baseboards and flooring, fix air leaks in these areas by sealing them with permanent sealant or by installing double-paned or storm windows.

- Keep windows covered. Windows can be the greatest source of outdoor heat entering a home. In addition to caulking or installing weather stripping, install the lightest possible color of drapes or blinds to deflect the heat.

Step 3: Home Equipment

- Energize with ENERGY STAR®. If your appliances are older models, consider upgrading to products that carry the ENERGY STAR® label. This government-backed program evaluates products to help individuals and businesses protect the environment through superior energy efficiency standards, and can save homeowners up to $400 on their annual utility bills.

- Control the temperature. Heating and air conditioning systems could account for up to 50 percent of a homeowner's utility bill. An automatic setback or programmable thermostat (such as Lennox Elite® Series or SignatureStat™, which also controls humidity levels) allows you to reduce energy costs by automatically controlling the temperature at certain hours of the day, to use less energy at night or when homeowners are away.

- Let there be (less) light. Whenever possible, keep lights off and replace short-lived incandescent lights with fluorescent bulbs, which are slightly more expensive but will make up for the extra cost in energy savings.

For more information on energy-efficient heating and cooling appliances for the home, including many that feature the ENERGY STAR® label, visit www.lennox.com or call 1-800-9-LENNOX.

'Residents Should Have An Alternative,' Newton Says

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Proclaiming that residents should have an alternative to Mayor William Phelan's candidacy for re-election, Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton has decided to mount a challenge for the city's highest elective office.

Newton, in a move that should raise a few eyebrows, filed approximately 80 signatures with the city's election office Tuesday, thus ensuring there will be a preliminary election for mayor on Sept. 16. Businessman Harvey Kertzman also entered the race last week.

"With a city of 90,000 people you have to have some competition," Newton told The Quincy Sun while gathering signatures Tuesday at 1000 Southern Artery. "People have to be able to express their views by a vote. If Mayor Phelan has a stance on an issue then people should be able to vote for someone who may hold a different view."

The two-term councillor said he decided to run against Phelan after Council President Dan Raymond declined to challenge the mayor.

"We all thought there was going to be a race and all the issues were going to be addressed, but that didn't materialize," said Newton. "Another gentleman (Kertzman) jumped in, and he has a lot of courage. But I haven't seen his platform, and there are some issues that I want to see addressed."

Newton, who announced last Spring that he would not seek re-election to his Ward 6 seat, said his campaign will tackle a number of issues, including firefighter staffing and the condition of the streets and sidewalks.

He criticized Phelan for vetoing a council-backed ordinance which calls for the city to adopt the National Fire Protection Association's standard 1710. The ordinance mandates that every piece of fire apparatus should be staffed with one officer and three firefighters. Currently, the city staffs each piece of equipment with one officer and two firefighters.

On a 7-2 vote to approve, the council called it crucial to the safety of firefighters and citizens.

Phelan said the measure is too costly and would hinder the city as it wades through tight fiscal times.

"I'm a strong proponent of 1710," said Newton. "When you hear about engine services being knocked out and merging fire stations, then we have to address that."

He said the city could afford to implement the ordinance.

"The administration complains about the costs of 1710, but look at all the bond issues we have passed," said Newton. "We owe public safety to the taxpayers of the City of Quincy without going over Proposition 2 1/2 and without trying to raise their taxes."

Newton said he is concerned about discussion he has heard regarding the possible consolidation of the city's fire stations.

"There's been discussion about merging the Squantum fire station with North Quincy and also merging Houghs Neck with Germantown," he said. "That raises a red flag. This all falls under 1710 and having proper staffing and resources."

In addition, Newton said the administration has not followed through with its promise to repair the streets and sidewalks.

"The condition of the streets and sidewalks has always been a number one priority for me," he said. I've brought up bond issues that have never been signed by the administration."

Newton said many residents have complained to him about bickering between the administration and the council.

"As I was going door to door today, everyone wants the infighting stopped," he said. "When we get in to office we are going to work together with the council and department heads. The 'my way or the highway' attitude doesn't work. Many people have told me they don't want to watch council meetings until 1 a.m. and watch us arguing with the mayor's office."

He also said Phelan's fiscal 2004 budget is overly optimistic and may contain "inflated" numbers, which will be revealed in the near future.

"They may not want to commit to 1710 because they have such an over-inflated budget," he said. "But this city is booming with new growth, so we should be able to pay for it."

Newton said he made the decision to run for mayor after much discussion with his fiancée, Laura MacKnight.

"Is this a fly-by-night decision? No way. I've talked to my fiancée and we really looked at this closely. It wasn't the easiest decision to make, but we both feel it's the right decision," said Newton.

"I just want to clear the record of any type of confusion," he said. "I am stepping down as Ward 6 Councillor and I have some commitments. I am still getting married this winter. I had a life change with my career. So I have time from now until my next career move. This run for mayor is going to keep the issues in check all the way through November."

Sixth Annual Marie Curry Benefit Walk Sept. 7

The 6th Annual Marie Curry Walk, benefiting the Marie Curry Fund for breast cancer services, will be held on Sunday, Sept. 7 at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

Sponsored by Quincy Medical Center and the Mayor's Commission on Women, the walk attracts business leaders, families and friends. Last year, more than 700 participants raised approximately $130,000 for the fund.

Established by the Curry Family of Quincy, the fund offers free breast cancer screenings and breast care services to women who lack health insurance or have inadequate insurance coverage. In 2002, the fund received the Sullivan Award from the Massachusetts Society of Clinical Oncologists in recognition of their work on the South Shore.

In addition to the four-mile, non-competitive walk along Quincy Shore Drive,

JOYCE LIVRAMENTO-YOUNG (left), chairperson of the Mayor's Commission on Women, and Carla Roudabush, vice president of public relations and marketing at Quincy Medical Center, discuss plans for the 6th Annual Marie Curry Walk, on Sunday, Sept. 7 at Pageant Field.

this year's walk will include a sunrise service, in memory of those who have lost their life to breast cancer and in honor of those living with the disease. There will also be a post-walk celebration with family entertainment and a lunch catered by Outback Steakhouse.

To become involved in the walk, as a walker, captain, volunteer or business sponsor, please call 617-376-5493 or visit www.quincymc.org.

Marina Bay Center Seeks Volunteers

Marina Bay Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Center, 2 Seaport Drive, North Quincy, is seeking volunteers to assist with patient activities.

The volunteers are needed to assist with activity programs, transport residents to various functions with the facility, visit with residents on a one-to-one basis and fulfill college internships.

Interested parties should call Michael Roubakis at 617-769-5152 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

'Residents Should Have An Alternative,' Newton Says

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Proclaiming that residents should have an alternative to Mayor William Phelan's candidacy for re-election, Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton has decided to mount a challenge for the city's highest elective office.

Newton, in a move that should raise a few eyebrows, filed approximately 80 signatures with the city's election office Tuesday, thus ensuring there will be a preliminary election for mayor on Sept. 16. Businessman Harvey Kertzman also entered the race last week.

"With a city of 90,000 people you have to have some competition," Newton told The Quincy Sun while gathering signatures Tuesday at 1000 Southern Artery. "People have to be able to express their views by a vote. If Mayor Phelan has a stance on an issue then people should be able to vote for someone who may hold a different view."

The two-term councillor said he decided to run against Phelan after Council President Dan Raymond declined to challenge the mayor.

"We all thought there was going to be a race and all the issues were going to be addressed, but that didn't materialize," said Newton. "Another gentleman (Kertzman) jumped in, and he has a lot of courage. But I haven't seen his platform, and there are some issues that I want to see addressed."

Newton, who announced last Spring that he would not seek re-election to his Ward 6 seat, said his campaign will tackle a number of issues, including firefighter staffing and the condition of the streets and sidewalks.

He criticized Phelan for vetoing a council-backed ordinance which calls for the city to adopt the National Fire Protection Association's standard 1710. The ordinance mandates that every piece of fire apparatus should be staffed with one officer and three firefighters. Currently, the city staffs each piece of equipment with one officer and two firefighters.

On a 7-2 vote to approve, the council called it crucial to the safety of firefighters and citizens.

Phelan said the measure is too costly and would hinder the city as it wades through tight fiscal times.

"I'm a strong proponent of 1710," said Newton. "When you hear about engine services being knocked out and merging fire stations, then we have to address that."

He said the city could afford to implement the ordinance.

"The administration complains about the costs of 1710, but look at all the bond issues we have passed," said Newton. "We owe public safety to the taxpayers of the City of Quincy without going over Proposition 2 1/2 and without trying to raise their taxes."

Newton said he is concerned about discussion he has heard regarding the possible consolidation of the city's fire stations.

"There's been discussion about merging the Quantum fire station with North Quincy and also merging Houghs Neck with Germantown," he said. "That raises a red flag. This all falls under 1710 and having proper staffing and resources."

In addition, Newton said the administration has not followed through with its promise to repair the streets and sidewalks.

"The condition of the streets and sidewalks has always been a number one priority for me," he said. "I've brought up bond issues that have never been signed by the administration."

Newton said many residents have complained to him about bickering between the administration and the council.

"As I was going door to door today, everyone wants the infighting stopped," he said. "When we get in to office we are going to work together with the council and department heads. The 'my way or the highway' attitude doesn't work. Many people have told me they don't want to watch council meetings until 1 a.m. and watch us arguing with the mayor's office."

He also said Phelan's fiscal 2004 budget is overly optimistic and may contain "inflated" numbers, which will be revealed in the near future.

"They may not want to commit to 1710 because they have such an over-inflated budget," he said. "But this city is booming with new growth, so we should be able to pay for it."

Newton said he made the decision to run for mayor after much discussion with his fiancée, Laura MacKnight.

"Is this a fly-by-night decision? No way. I've talked to my fiancée and we really looked at this closely. It wasn't the easiest decision to make, but we both feel it's the right decision," said Newton.

"I just want to clear the record of any type of confusion," he said. "I am stepping down as Ward 6 Councillor and I have some commitments. I am still getting married this winter. I had a life change with my career. So I have time from now until my next career move. This run for mayor is going to keep the issues in check all the way through November."

Sixth Annual Marie Curry Benefit Walk Sept. 7

The 6th Annual Marie Curry Walk, benefiting the Marie Curry Fund for breast cancer services, will be held on Sunday, Sept. 7 at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

Sponsored by Quincy Medical Center and the Mayor's Commission on Women, the walk attracts business leaders, families and friends. Last year, more than 700 participants raised approximately $130,000 for the fund.

Established by the Curry Family of Quincy, the fund offers free breast cancer screenings and breast care services to women who lack health insurance or have inadequate insurance coverage. In 2002, the fund received the Sullivan Award from the Massachusetts Society of Clinical Oncologists in recognition of their work on the South Shore.

In addition to the four-mile, non-competitive walk along Quincy Shore Drive,

JOYCE LIVRAMENTO-YOUNG (left), chairperson of the Mayor's Commission on Women, and Carla Roudabush, vice president of public relations and marketing at Quincy Medical Center, discuss plans for the 6th Annual Marie Curry Walk, on Sunday, Sept. 7 at Pageant Field.

this year's walk will include a sunrise service, in memory of those who have lost their life to breast cancer and in honor of those living with the disease. There will also be a post-walk celebration with family entertainment and a lunch catered by Outback Steakhouse.

To become involved in the walk, as a walker, captain, volunteer or business sponsor, please call 617-376-5493 or visit www.quincyinc.org.

Crucial Vote On High School Aug. 18, Mayor Says

very difficult situation."

Coughlin said the city should conduct public hearings to address the financial issues regarding the new high school.

"I would like to have had public hearings. You have to give the public notification, and you must have a deliberative process here. I'm not sure this is going to get the type of public input it deserves."

Council President Dan Raymond agreed. "The mayor should have acted in a more timely fashion. Obviously, the administration received communication from Driscoll's office regarding a deadline, but why wasn't the council informed? It's unfortunate that a major issue is dealt with in such a haphazard fashion."

But Phelan said the council has the opportunity to conduct public hearings on the issue. "If they feel their constituents desire one, there's enough time," he said.

Morrissey said city councilors should not feel as though they were taken by surprise on the issue.

"How long has this project been around, six or eight years? The taxpayers will never be able to fund this project without the 90 percent reimbursement," he said. "It's a simple question, either you want to move forward or you want to kill the new high school."

Granite Stonewalled By Marlboro, 26-7

By CHRIS POISSON

John Barr fielded the punt at his 25, shunned two would-be tacklers at the point of attack and jetted 75 yards down the left sideline for a touchdown, injecting life into a team in desperate need.

Now trailing 17-7 with nearly six minutes left in the third quarter of last Saturday night's game against Marlboro, maybe that would be the play that would turn the game around for the Quincy Granite.

More importantly, maybe that would be the play that would turn Quincy's season around after early stumbles.

Turns out that was just about the only highlight in the Granite's 26-7 setback to the Shamrocks (1-2), a rematch of last year's Eastern Football League championship, as they fell to a franchise-worst 0-3 start.

"We're on a break here and there from being 3-0," said head coach Greg Wilson. "We continue to turn the ball over and that's from our inexperience out there. I couldn't be more prouder of this team. They're playing so hard and putting forth a strong effort each week under these difficult conditions."

Quincy has been hindered this season by retirements and injuries, and has missed players due to personal reasons. Last year the Granite dressed 62 players; last Saturday they had 28.

"We've kind of had an Iron Man team out there, playing both ways," Wilson said.

After playing the first three weeks at Veterans Memorial Stadium, Quincy hits the road the next three weeks in search of its first win, beginning Saturday night at 6 against the Charlestown Townies (2-1).

"Every game is a playoff game now," Wilson said. "So the playoffs start Saturday for us."

As tough as the season has been so far, Quincy was saddened Sunday with the passing of Joseph Desmond, 78, a consultant with the team and former general manager.

"He was an integral part of the organization," Wilson

Alison Eleeey Wins Kids Golf State Title

Alison Eleeey, 10, of Quincy recently captured the U.S. Kids Golf state championship for her age group at Stow Acres Country Club.

Her brother, Peter, placed fifth in the boys' 12-year-old division and her sister, Jacquelyn, placed second in the girls' 8-year-old division.

Alison competed against dozens of her peers for the right to represent Massachusetts in the U.S. Kids Golf World Championship, which began yesterday (Wednesday) in Williamsburg, Va. This nationally televised four-day tournament brings together children ages 6-12 from every state and from around the world.

Accompanying Alison to Virginia is her family and Kevin Shea, 13, of Quincy, a family friend who was her caddie in the state tournament.

"I'm very superstitious whenever I do well in a tournament," Alison said. "I don't like to change anything so I only want Kevin to caddie for me. I will also wear the same clothes I was wearing at the state tournament."

Alison, who has been playing golf for two years, is also an avid tennis player. Her mother, Aileen, held the title of New England's No. 1 tennis player from 1988-1990 and continues to compete nationally.

"Alison is relatively new to golf and she will be competing against some very exceptional players," her mother said. "However, I think the true value of the tournament is the opportunity it will give her to participate in a world class sporting event. Tennis gave me so many great opportunities to travel and meet people all over the world and I'm just excited that Alison can have a similar experience at such a young age."

FROM A CHILD'S PERSPECTIVE

Mindful of the fact that motor-vehicle crashes (including crashes that involve pedestrians) are the leading cause of death and injury for American children, parents should not satisfy themselves with mere admonitions for their children to "be careful" in trafficked streets. Because young pedestrians are shorter than adults, with hearing and peripheral vision that are not as well developed, they are less able to correctly judge vehicle speed and distance. Children also do not have a realistic perception of traffic, often believing that the driver can see them if they can see the driver. Therefore, it is essential that children be taught basic traffic-safety skills that require adults to take them by the hands to teach them.

For safety sake it is also important to drive carefully and to keep your car's braking system in top operating condition. The safety of our customers and their families is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. We are small enough to provide friendly, personal service and large enough to have the latest equipment and outstanding ASE Certified technicians. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), we are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: Parents are urged to have their children and playmates in their sight before ever attempting to back out of a garage or driveway.

Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge Raises $1,400

Remington's of Boston recently won the fifth annual Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge for the second straight year.

The tournament raised $1,400, which will go to the Wollaston Beach Clean-Up Fund designed to promote educational and recreational events along Wollaston Beach.

"Wollaston Beach enjoyed plenty of sunshine, blue skies and competitive volleyball," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, event co-organizer.

While acknowledging his team only had one win, Gutro derived satisfaction in beating the squad representing John Kerry. "How many people can claim victory over John Kerry?" he said jest.

Karen Djerf, co-owner of Tony's Clam Shop and event co-organizer, said, "It was a resounding success. This event continues to generate excitement for Wollaston Beach and we are proud to be affiliated with it."

Twelve teams participated in the co-ed double-elimination tournament. They included: Tony's Clam Shop, The Clam Box, South Shore YMCA, John Kerry, Mayor William Phelan, Doug Gutro, Jim Bottary, Brian Buckley, Quincy Police, Remington's of Boston, Wollaston Yacht Club and Ginger Betty's.

Jim Rendle, head coach of the state champion North Quincy High School girls' volleyball team, again volunteered as the head official. Local sponsors included: Tony's Clam Shop, The Clam Box, The Beachcomber, Hot Rod Harry's, Coca Cola and Gutro.

Each player received a free volleyball challenge T-shirt. Winners and runners-up received prizes such as gift certificates, long sleeve T-shirts, coolers, beach towels, hats and bags with the Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge logo.

Patrick McDermott Dedicating Pan-Mass Bicycle Challenge To Memory Of Paul Harold

Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott will dedicate his 12th Pan-Massachusetts Challenge ride this weekend in memory of the late Paul D. Harold.

The PMC serves as the largest single fund-raiser for the Jimmy Fund of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. More than 3,600 cyclists from 37 states will participate in the 24th annual event, all pedaling to raise $16 million and surpass an overall fund-raising total of $100 million.

It marks nearly a year since cancer claimed the life of Harold, former state senator, city council president and Norfolk County register of deeds. McDermott affectionately recalled Harold as a political mentor and a friend who helped him both personally and professionally.

"Paul was an awesome figure in my life," he said. "He helped countless people through their own struggles."

Harold was a patient at Dana-Farber in his final months and McDermott recalled one of his last visits with him.

"He was tired but full of faith and words of wisdom," he said. "Then he presented me with a check for the PMC and told me I was doing a great service for the people of Dana-Farber. I'm proud to dedicate this year's ride to Paul."

PATRICK McDERMOTT

McDermott's participation in the PMC also serves especially as a way to preserve the memory of his late mother, Patricia, who died from cancer in December 1989.

"My mother inspired me in so many ways to never take life for granted and to look for ways to help others in need," he said. "Even though she lost her personal battle with cancer, her faith served as a beacon of hope for so many others who wait for a cure. I look forward to the day when we can refer to cancer as a disease of the past."

The PMC is a 194-mile bike ride from Sturbridge to Provincetown. McDermott will leave Sturbridge Saturday morning at 6 and ride to Bourne, where he'll spend the night at the Mass Maritime Academy. He will ride to Provincetown Sunday morning.

McDermott has raised $40,000 for Dana-Farber throughout his participation in the PMC. In order to participate each rider must raise a minimum of $2,500.

For those interested in sponsoring McDermott, visit the PMC's Web site (www.pmc.org) to make an on-line gift, or checks can be made payable to "PMC/Jimmy Fund" and forwarded to McDermott at 194 Federal Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

15 Youngsters Qualify For State Hershey Track, Field Finals

Fifteen youngsters finished in first place at the recent Hershey's National Track and Field State Championships.

The children earned an invitation to participate in the state finals after winning the local qualifying meet sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The state champions:

Ages 13-14: Brigid Kyle, softball throw; Nicole Affanato, standing long jump.

Ages 11-12: Samantha Barkowski, 100-meter dash, relay; Rachael Kasanoff, relay; Lily Man, relay; Akilah Mateen, relay; Erskine Hinds, 100-meter dash, relay; Victor Aliberti, 200-meter dash; Shane Regan, 400-meter dash, relay; Nick Poles, 800-meter run, relay; Andrew Beaton, relay.

Ages 9-10: Julia Free, 400-meter dash, relay; Jadah Yesufu, relay; Cassie Swanson, relay; Julia Nee, 400-meter dash, relay.

Two state champions — Erskine Hinds of Milton (100-meter dash) and Julia Free of Weymouth (400-meter dash) — were selected for the national championship to be held in August at Hershey Park, Pa.

Recreation Director Barry Welch congratulated the 32 youngsters who advanced to the state championship and the 15 state champions. He noted the two national qualifiers continue a tradition of over 20 years of local meet participants advancing to the national championships.

"We once again are in-debited to the Hershey Chocolate Company for their commitment to the youth of our community," Welch said.

Other local winners who participated in the state finals were:

Ages 13-14: Kerry Regan, 13th, 400-meter dash; Nicole Affanato, seventh, 200-meter dash; Krystin Newsom, second, relay; Alex Nee, second, relay; Melissa Mendall, second, relay; Patrick Watkins, ninth, 200-meter dash; Mark Jordan, ninth, standing jump and third, 800-meter run; Kevon Mason, fourth, softball throw.

WAYMAN PAYNE (18) eludes Marlboro linebacker Deondre Kennard as he flies up the field for an 18-yard gain in the fourth quarter. (Quincy Sun photos/Trish Bossart)

said. "He will be missed on many levels."

Following Barr's special teams' score, which was set up by John Morant's block, Marlboro returned the ensuing kickoff to the Quincy 31-yard line. The Shamrocks dropped a wide-open touchdown on third-and-goal at the 4 before settling for Steve Goodrich's 21-yard field goal and a 20-7 lead.

On the Granite's next series, Marlboro defensive back Rafael Dowdy intercepted Quincy quarterback Matt Scott on first down to give the Shamrocks the ball at the Quincy 33. They quickly capitalized.

After quarterback Ralph Barone's 26-yard completion to receiver Darryl Thomas, he tossed a beautiful fade pass from 6 yards out to Thomas, who made a diving catch in the left corner of the end zone for his third TD and a 26-7 lead with no time left in the third quarter. Marlboro botched the snap on the extra point attempt.

In the fourth quarter Scott sustained a concussion for the second straight week and did not return. His status for this week's game is uncertain. If he can't go, either Randy Campbell, Derick Epps or Derek Wright will get the nod.

In the first quarter, Quincy defensive back Troy Parks picked off Barone and returned the ball to the Marlboro 40. The Granite reached the 18 when receiver Bo Garcia tipped a Scott pass to receiver Wayman Payne, but the offense stalled.

In the second the Granite again had great field position at the Marlboro 31, but the offense couldn't take advantage and ended up missing a 37-yard field goal.

The Shamrocks proceeded to march down the field, anchored by a powerful rushing attack coupled with a 15-yard personal foul penalty against Quincy. They struck first with a 24-yard field goal with 1:04 left in the half.

And they struck even bigger when Quincy fumbled on the first play of the ensuing series. Three plays later, Barone fired a 20-yard TD strike to Thomas for a 10-0 lead heading into the locker room.

Marlboro built its lead to 17-0 with an eight-play drive to open the second half. The Shamrocks, which converted a fourth-and-1 play on the drive and also benefited from two Quincy penalties, scored with 9:46 left when Barone found Thomas from 5 yards out.

Spillane Law Offices Softball Defeats Braintree, Norwood

The Spillane Law Offices Under 19 softball team finished the regular season in third place in the Norfolk County League after sweeping a doubleheader against Braintree and defeating Norwood, 6-2, at home.

Spillane Law Offices played Braintree Tuesday in the first round of the playoffs, with the championship game being held Saturday at Faxon Park.

In Game 1 against Braintree, Rachel Sorensen pitched all eight innings with nine strikeouts in the 6-5 triumph for her seventh win of the year. May Ho and Kelly Barden smashed home runs and Lisa Schifone (3 for 4) scored the winning run in the eighth.

In Game 2, Rachel Sorensen scattered seven hits and fanned seven for her second win of the day. Her sister, Rebekah, tossed two hitless innings with three strikeouts.

Spillane Law Offices scored three runs in the first inning. Schifone ripped an RBI double that scored Beth Goodrich (triple) and Ho followed with an RBI double. Sheila Lynch stroked an RBI single. Kim Walsh scored the fourth, and ultimately the winning run, in the second.

Center fielder Casey

Lorman, second basemen Joni Rannstrom and Caitlyn Miller and catcher Goodrich were strong defensively.

In the Norwood game, Walsh took the mound and allowed one run on three hits for the win.

Lorman scored in the first after a walk and stolen base and made it 3-0 in the third when she belted her first home run of the season. Lynch led the offense, going 3 for 3 with a stolen base. Kendra Ciccone, Michelle Boyd, Ho and Schifone also chipped in. Korey Verhault played defensively at second base.

Max Wyatt To Compete In Rowing World Championship

Max Wyatt has earned a seat in one of five USRowing Junior Men's boats competing in the FISA World Championships next week in Greece.

He is the son Helen Johnson and Tom Wyatt of San Francisco, Calif., formerly of Quincy, and the grandson of Harry and Anneli Johnson of Quincy.

The U.S. delegation also includes four junior women's boats. This year's event will draw competitors from more than 30 countries. Last year, the junior men placed third in the eight, seventh in the four with coxswain, ninth in the four, 21st in the men's singles and 23rd in the double.

After a month of training and seat racing at USRowing's selection camp at Boston University, Wyatt said he's elated to be among the 35 junior men and women rowers representing the U.S.

at the international event.

"It's been one of my goals to compete at an international level," he said, "and I'm pulling with the most motivated junior rowers in the country."

The boat includes two other Californians: Matt King of Piedmont and Brian Geist of Fair Oaks. The coxswain is Joe Nozzolillo of Worcester and Solon Wayne Aposhian of Watertown is in the stroke seat. Evans Lionel is the head coach.

Wyatt, who began competing nationally in the ninth grade, raced in the top junior men's score in the Canadian Indoor rowing championships and is a three-time national medalist in the Canadian Secondary School Association's annual regatta.

While engaged in a full-time daily training regimen, Wyatt, who spent many summers in New England before high school, was given a few Sundays off to visit with family in Quincy.

"Just having family here has been a source of emotional strength for me," said Wyatt, whose family will travel to Greece to cheer on the American team.

Wyatt said he is looking forward to being home before returning to Shawngnan Lake School, B.C., Canada, in September, when he will start his senior year as a school prefect.

USRowing's junior programs are financially supported by rowers' families, gifts to the National Rowing Foundation and USRowing's commercial sponsors. USRowing is the non-profit membership organization recognized by the United States Olympic Committee as the national governing body for the sport of rowing in the U.S.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Make Eye Exams Part Of Back-To-School Routine

Parents want their children to succeed in school, and most will do whatever they can to help — seeking out the necessary supplies, packing nutritious lunches, carefully checking homework.

But have you thought about checking your child's eyes? Before the kids head back to school this year, consider taking yours to see an eye care professional for a comprehensive eye exam.

Why? Your child's vision is a critical tool when it comes to learning. In fact, 80 percent of learning is achieved visually. However, Prevent Blindness America reports one in four school-age children has some form of vision problem — which can hinder academic performance. And while many schools offer basic vision screenings, they are not a substitute for a thorough eye exam.

"Children can suffer from vision problems without showing any outward symptoms," says Dr. Jeff Smith, vice president of professional services at Pearle Vision. "Even if a child checks out 20/20 on the eye chart, they may still have a vision problem that needs correction. Many conditions such as nearsightedness, farsightedness, amblyopia and astigmatism can be treated successfully if caught early."

Left undetected, vision problems can not only lead to difficulties in learning, but also result in behavioral, physical and emotional problems. Many kids who suffer from vision problems are frequently misdiagnosed with learning disabilities.

The American Optometric Association recommends children be examined by a doctor of optometry or an ophthalmologist before entering kindergarten, and routinely throughout their school years to detect potential problems. If your child requires glasses or contacts, they should be seen every 12 months, since prescriptions frequently change as vision matures along with your child.

As a parent, be alert for symptoms that indicate poor vision. If your child uses a finger to follow along when reading, holds reading materials too close, squints, rubs their eyes frequently, sits too close to the TV, complains of headaches — or if they're receiving lower grades than usual — their vision may need correction.

Glasses Are Cool

The American Optometric Association reports approximately 58.8 million children in the United States wear corrective lenses. So if your child needs glasses, he or she will be in good company. And these days, there are so many great styles for kids to choose from.

Pearle Vision carries a variety of frames geared towards kids, including styles from Candles, Converse and StrideRite. The extremely popular Nickelodeon line features SpongeBob SquarePants, Blues Clues and the Wild Thornberrys — with each frame capturing the personality of a favorite Nick cartoon character. Pearle's new Kiwi line is created especially for teens looking for a fun, modern look.

Technological advances that have been used in adult frames are now available in children's frames, including flex titanium. The Flexibles-Youth line from Pearle Vision is made from the newest flexible frame material designed to withstand much of the stress children and teens put on their eyewear.

To keep eyes safe, shatter-resistant polycarbonate lenses are the best choice for kids. Pearle Vision fits children with exclusive kidSAFE lenses, which also feature UV protection. The lightweight, scratch-resistant polycarbonate lenses help protect your child's eyes at home, in the classroom and at play.

Now through Sept. 27, Pearle Vision is offering a special "Buy One, Get One" offer. Eye exams are available by either employed or independent doctors of optometry at or next to Pearle Vision stores throughout most of the United States. Pearle Vision, Inc. does not employ doctors of optometry and does not provide eye exams in California. Pearle VisionCare, Inc., a licensed Vision Health Care Service Plan, provides eye exams in California.

To locate the Pearle Vision store nearest you, visit www.pearlevision.com or call 1-800-YES-EYES.

Bacterial Meningitis: What Every Parent Should Know

(NAPS) — A little knowledge can help parents deal with a dangerous thing: Bacterial meningitis. It's a scary disease because it's not only life-threatening, but difficult to recognize, especially in the very young.

Although the condition is relatively rare, children between birth and eight months have a higher risk of contracting bacterial meningitis because of their immature immune systems and increased exposure to infections at this age.

Most meningitis cases occur when bacteria from an infection travels through the bloodstream to the brain and spinal cord.

The best defense, according to the American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP), is for parents and caretakers to know the signs and what to do.

"Bacterial meningitis can progress extremely rapidly in the first 24 hours," said Dr. Sharon Mace of ACEP.

Common symptoms in children and infants can include any of the following:

- Refusing to drink or eat and vomiting.
- High-pitched moaning

- Dislike of being handled.
- Difficulty waking up; increased lethargy.
- Fever.
- Blank, staring expression.

• Knees automatically brought up toward the body when the neck is bent forward or pain in the legs when bent.

• Inability to straighten lower legs after the hips have already been flexed 90 degrees.

• A rash that looks like small clusters of tiny pinpricks at the beginning then turn purple in color and will not turn white when pressed. This is an addition of an infection in the blood.

If any of these symptoms are present, the infant or child should be taken immediately to the nearest emergency department. Diagnoses may require a lumbar puncture, which involves the removal of spinal fluid. It is important for parents to know this test is essential to diagnosing meningitis and is a safe test for infants and children. When local anesthetic is used as part of the procedure, there is little discomfort.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

HARD TRUTHS

Tooth enamel is the hardest tissue in the body. This layer of calcium and phosphate resists acids, corrosive agents, and enzymes. It will not crack under the extremes of hot and cold. In addition, tooth enamel endures the stresses of chewing which can equal up to one hundred pounds of pressure on the front teeth and up to twice that pressure on the rear teeth. These facts about enamel's durability may lead a patient to ask why it is that he gets cavities. The truth is that as hard as the enamel is, it cannot withstand constant exposure to acid-producing bacteria. Just as the ocean wears away the rock formations on the shore line, constant exposure to acid wears away enamel.

Once it does, unlike bone, tooth enamel cannot repair itself.

Ask your dentist who for a smile consultation. He or she can evaluate your smile and provide a range of treatments available to help achieve the look you want. We're currently accepting new patients and welcome your call at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for superior dental care. We recommend regular check-ups and cleanings. Take the time to understand your health — it is worth the investment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

PATIENCE... What a word... Much has been written and said about this eight lettered word...

It has been said that many a man thinks he is patient when, in reality, he is indifferent. It has also been said that many a person takes credit for being patient when they are simply putting off doing something unpleasant... And then there is an old Dutch proverb which states: "An ounce of patience is worth a pound of brains."

We especially like this quotation written by David Sarnoff: "Patience is a two-sided coin. If patience is to be a virtue it must be employed in a willingness to obtain all the facts, do deduce from the facts what should be done, if anything, and to act in time and not too early or too late. If patience is merely to be used as an excuse for inaction, and if you don't do anything but wait - and you wait too long and the opportunity is past - of if you convert it into lethargy or inaction, then that is the other side of the coin."

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 8 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 8, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) With new facts to work with you should feel more confident in moving ahead. But continue to do so at an unhurried pace so you can spot details you might otherwise miss.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Taking on that new workplace project could be one of your smarter career moves. Expect a surprising show of support from someone you had always been a critic.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel you're too busy to undertake a new responsibility. But check it out before making any decisions. What you learn could persuade you to change your mind.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You feel quite content enjoying all the comforts of home right now. But the urge to travel grows stronger, and by week's end, you could begin packing your bags.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A hectic period begins to ease up. But that doesn't mean the Fine Feline can do much cat-napping these days. You need to finish those old tasks and prepare for new ones.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Expect to get some good news about your financial situation by week's end. But it could still be too early to rush out with a long shopping list of things to buy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your management skills make an impression on some workplace VIPs who might be looking for someone like you to take on an upcoming project. Good luck.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Meeting a former adversary might be unsettling at first. But time has softened hard feelings, and you could be on the brink of starting a new relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A troubling situation close to home might cause you to change your travel plans. But getting all the facts before you act might cause you to reconsider.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might be quite alone right now in deciding to support a major workplace shift. But others will join you as new information supports your bold move.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A former co-worker returns with news that could persuade you to reassess recently made plans. Be sure to consult with a trusted colleague before you act.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your motives behind a recent decision could be called into question by a rival. But once you present the facts, all doubts will be resolved. Enjoy an arts-rich weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: While you love being the center of attention, your generous heart allows you to share the attention with others.

City Seeks $2M In Grants For Downtown Road Improvements

The city is seeking up to $2 million in state grant funds to improve the Downtown Streetscape Infrastructure on local streets adjacent to the completed and planned sections of the Quincy Center Concourse, Mayor William Phelan announced.

In addition, Phelan will sponsor a public hearing on the physical scope of the project on Monday, Aug. 11 at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room of City Hall. The hearing will provide an opportunity

The city filed a Public Works Economic Development (PWED) Grant Application for up to $2 million with the Massachusetts Executive Office of Transportation and Construction, the mayor's office said. The application is being reviewed by the Executive Office and the state Highway Department, Phelan said.

The mayor's office said the grant application contains elements that include preliminary and final design for downtown streets, including section two of the Concourse, construction on city streets and land acquisition for the Concourse.

"In filing this application the city is continuing to aggressively seek funding sources to defray the local cost of downtown revitalization," said Tom Largey, the mayor's executive secretary. "The city looks forward to continuing its partnership with the Commonwealth in strengthening our downtown commercial district."

The PWED grant program was enacted in 1979 by the Massachusetts Legislature to provide funding for local public roadway improvement projects that would allow for the retention and creation of local employment opportunities. The grants was also intended to help to sustain the private financing of commercial and industrial development to be serviced by the improved public infrastructure being constructed under the grant.

"We are very fortunate, given the financial hardships that are being experienced throughout the state, to be able to hire and maintain the level of public safety in Quincy," said Phelan.

New Police Officers Academy Training Aug. 25

The city expects to hire approximately 14 new police officers within the next week in time to begin training at the police academy Aug. 25, Mayor William Phelan said. "The list of candidates is exceptional," said Phelan. "The final decisions are being made as to who will be hired."

A team of police officers finished conducting background checks and interviews with the candidates. The list has been forwarded to Police Chief William Falco, who will make his recommendations to the mayor. Phelan will make the appointments within a week.

At School Committee Special Meeting After Public Hearing New QHS Design Vote On Aug. 11

Plans to build a controversial new Quincy High School on Faxon Field will take a couple of giant steps forward, starting with a public hearing and a special School Committee meeting Monday, Aug. 11.

The Committee will hold a public hearing on the design selection for the new building at 7 p.m. in the auditorium of the present Quincy High School building.

"Design selection involves the placement of the building on the lot," said Christine Cedrone, vice chairman of the School Committee, "and what the building as a whole will look like."

Once the public hearing is over — or at 7:30 p.m., whichever comes first — the School Committee will meet in a special session to vote on the design selection.

"I expect the public hearing will go beyond 7:30," said Cedrone. "We had to pick a time for posting. We'll call the meeting at 7:30, then recess it and go on with the hearing."

The next move is up to the City Council.

The Council has scheduled a special meeting for Monday, Aug. 18, at 7 p.m. in the Council Chamber at City Hall to hear Mayor William Phelan's plan for financing the new school.

The precise size of the request for a bond issue that will be placed before the Council has yet to be worked out but the best estimates are around $80 million.

Newton, Kertzman Welcome Debates

Mayoral Challengers Gear Up For Preliminary Election

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

As the quest for the city's highest elective office begins, many observers will be asking how Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton or political newcomer Harvey Kertzman will campaign against the incumbent, Mayor William Phelan.

Both candidates indicated that they are coalescing campaign teams and drafting issues for the next six weeks, leading up to the preliminary election on Sept. 16.

Since announcing his run for mayor last week, Newton said he and five "core" people have been meeting regularly and drafting campaign plans. They are also in the process of enlisting family members, friends and volunteers to assist during the campaign run.

JOSEPH NEWTON

When it comes to fundraising, Newton realizes he faces an uphill battle. "It's like the David vs. Goliath story—Phelan has a war chest, I have a wallet," he said.

Newton said he must raise $20,000 to $30,000 from now until the primary to remain competitive. Last week, he indicated he has approximately $1,400 for his campaign.

"We will have to do it the old fashioned way—knocking on doors and handing out fliers," he said. "We have a six-week sprint until the primary."

Newton, whose campaign produced a new bumper sticker last week, said he hopes to distribute lawn signs and other material soon. He intends to hold a fundraising event at the end of August.

Kertzman, who is dipping his feet into political waters for the first time, said his campaign team would be made up of a group of people from the city that are politically savvy because "my weakness is that I am not a politician."

"Right now I'm putting together a core of a half dozen people that are politically knowledgeable, because I'm not," said Kertzman. "I've been busy working my career so I need some guidance in politics."

He will not ask for private donations, however.

"Everything seems to be driven by the dollar, and that's wrong," said Kertzman. "Lawn signs and bumper stickers should not determine who wins an election. A person's ability to manage the city's affairs should determine who is fit to serve. I'm not the type of guy to go out and ask people for money."

Kertzman said his political campaign might entail handing out business cards during door-knocking sessions. "I want to run this city like a business, so handing out business cards might be the way to go. My strength lies in the fact I'm a businessman."

Newton, a two-term Ward councillor, said Phelan's 2001 campaign against then-Mayor James Sheets, encourages him. Phelan defeated Sheets by 17 votes, the closest mayoral election in the city's history.

"After Phelan beat Sheets, it makes you think anything is possible," said Newton. "But it will be tough to beat him because he comes from a big political family." Phelan is married to Tracy Tobin, daughter of Arthur Tobin, the former mayor of Quincy and current Clerk Magistrate at Quincy District Court.

Both Newton and Kertzman said they welcome the opportunity to debate Phelan during the campaign run.

Kertzman, who owns a gas station in Quincy Point, said he will soon reveal an economic plan that could save the city "millions" of dollars. "There are less expensive ways to do things," he said. "I have very specific ways to save the city millions of dollars."

All candidates will be required to file a campaign finance report with the city's Election Department by Sept. 8.

Lt. Cmdr. Michael Hussey Receives Commendation Medal

Navy Lt. Cmdr. Michael F. Hussey, son of Regina Hussey of Quincy, recently received the Navy and Marine Corps Commendation Medal while assigned to Naval Ocean Processing Facility in Virginia Beach, Va.

While serving as watch officer, Hussey developed and implemented methods and standard procedures that contributed directly to the accurate and timely tracking of 5,000 vessels of interest in 25 different sports. His dedication strengthened interaction between U.S. Navy and U.S. Coast Guard watchstanding teams.

Hussey is a 1982 graduate of Boston College High School. He joined the Navy in June, 1987.

Raymondi Asks Mayor For Cost Reports On New High School

Council President Daniel Raymondi has asked Mayor William Phelan to provide the city council with financial and other information pertaining to the construction of a new high school so that the council may deliberate during its special meeting on Aug. 18.

The Phelan administration is scheduled to present a financial plan, an estimated $80 million bond, to pay for the construction of the new high school.

In a letter to the mayor, Raymondi requested the following information to be available prior to the meeting:

- Updated financial information regarding entire costs of the projects, include permitting, environmental, construction, drainage and traffic improvements.

• An analysis of the cost to the city over the life of the bond. This should include an estimate of interest rates, short-term borrowing costs, and the payment schedule of the bond. Raymondi is also requesting the council to obtain from the mayor's office projections for state reimbursements and the estimated net costs to the city on a yearly basis through the maturation of the bond.

• Updated school building needs reports, including the needs of the middle schools, high school and Center for Technical Education.

• Updated plans and estimated costs for drainage system improvements at Faxon Field.

• Updated study on traffic access pertaining to the new high school and middle school complex.

In addition, Raymondi has asked that certain parties attend the meeting, including Richard DeCristofaro, superintendent of schools; Jay Fink, DPW commissioner; Monica Conyngham, city solicitor; Roy LaMotte, Jr., traffic engineer; bond counsel and architects for the new high school.

• Updated school building needs reports, including the needs of the middle schools,

Kidnapping Report Mistake

Quincy police said a woman who thought she saw a kidnapping outside the Adams Shore library branch was mistaken.

Instead, the woman actually saw a misbehaving child who was being restrained by a parent, police said.

Police were called on Monday at approximately 2:30 p.m. and informed of a possible abduction. The woman told police it appeared that the child was being forced into a passenger van.

The tip prompted police to begin searching for the van. Investigators also went door-to-door in the neighborhood. Boston television stations broadcast stories about the incident.

Police said the parents of the child saw the television reports and called the police. Officers went to the parents' house and learned about the incident.

Next License Board Meeting On Aug. 19

$5,000 Reward Offered On Quincy Point Fires

The Arson Watch Reward Program is offering a $5,000 for information which helps prevent or solve arson fires, like the ones that have been plaguing Quincy Point in recent weeks.

The series of outside fires reached a head on the night of July 27 when trash under the stairs at the Islamic Center of New England was ignited and a dumpster set afire a few blocks away.

"Our investigators believe that someone in the community may know who is setting these fires or may have seen something that night that will help them," said Quincy Fire Chief Paul O'Connell.

"We are asking anyone with information to call the toll-free Arson Hotline at 1-800-682-9229."

Posters announcing the reward and the number to call with information have been distributed for posting around the city.

The investigation of the fire is being conducted jointly by the Quincy Police and Fire Departments and State Police assigned to the

Newton, Kertzman Welcome Debates

Mayoral Challengers Gear Up For Preliminary Election

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

As the quest for the city's highest elective office begins, many observers will be asking how Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton or political newcomer Harvey Kertzman will campaign against the incumbent, Mayor William Phelan.

Both candidates indicated that they are coalescing campaign teams and drafting issues for the next six weeks, leading up to the preliminary election on Sept. 16.

Since announcing his run for mayor last week, Newton said he and five "core" people have been meeting regularly and drafting campaign plans. They are also in the process of enlisting family members, friends and volunteers to assist during the campaign run.

JOSEPH NEWTON

When it comes to fundraising, Newton realizes he faces an uphill battle. "It's like the David vs. Goliath story - Phelan has a war chest, I have a wallet," he said.

Newton said he must raise $20,000 to $30,000 from now until the primary to remain competitive. Last week, he indicated he has approximately $1,400 for his campaign.

"We will have to do it the old-fashioned way - knocking on doors and handing out fliers," he said. "We have a six-week sprint until the primary."

Newton, whose campaign produced a new bumper sticker last week, said he hopes to distribute lawn signs and other material soon. He intends to hold a fundraising event at the end of August.

Kertzman, who is dipping his feet into political waters for the first time, said his campaign team would be made up of a group of people from the city that are politically savvy because "my weakness is that I am not a politician."

"Right now I'm putting together a core of a half dozen people that are politically knowledgeable, because I'm not," said Kertzman. "I've been busy working my career so I need some guidance in politics."

He will not ask for private donations, however.

"Everything seems to be driven by the dollar, and that's wrong," said Kertzman. "Lawn signs and bumper stickers should not determine who wins an election. A person's ability to manage the city's affairs should determine who is fit to serve. I'm not the type of guy to go out and ask people for money."

Kertzman said his political campaign might entail handing out business cards during door-knocking sessions. "I want to run this city like a business, so handing out business cards might be the way to go. My strength lies in the fact I'm a businessman."

Newton, a two-term Ward councillor, said Phelan's 2001 campaign against then-Mayor James Sheets, encourages him. Phelan defeated Sheets by 17 votes, the closest mayoral election in the city's history.

"After Phelan beat Sheets, it makes you think anything is possible," said Newton. "But it will be tough to beat him because he comes from a big political family." Phelan is married to Tracy Tobin, daughter of Arthur Tobin, the former mayor of Quincy and current Clerk Magistrate at Quincy District Court.

Both Newton and Kertzman said they welcome the opportunity to debate Phelan during the campaign run.

Kertzman, who owns a gas station in Quincy Point, said he will soon reveal an economic plan that could save the city "millions" of dollars. "There are less expensive ways to do things," he said. "I have very specific ways to save the city millions of dollars."

All candidates will be required to file a campaign finance report with the city's Election Department by Sept. 8.

Raymondi Asks Mayor For Cost Reports On New High School

Council President Daniel Raymondi has asked Mayor William Phelan to provide the city council with financial and other information pertaining to the construction of a new high school so that the council may deliberate during its special meeting on Aug. 18.

The Phelan administration is scheduled to present a financial plan, an estimated $80 million bond, to pay for the construction of the new high school.

In a letter to the mayor, Raymondi requested the following information to be available prior to the meeting:

- Updated financial information regarding entire costs of the projects, include permitting, environmental, construction, drainage and traffic improvements.

- An analysis of the cost to the city over the life of the bond. This should include an estimate of interest rates, short-term borrowing costs, and the payment schedule of the bond. Raymondi is also requesting the council to obtain from the mayor's office projections for state reimbursements and the estimated net costs to the city on a yearly basis through the maturation of the bond.

- Updated school building needs reports, including the needs of the middle schools, high school and Center for Technical Education.

- Updated plans and estimated costs for drainage system improvements at Faxon Field.

- Updated study on traffic access pertaining to the new high school and middle school complex.

In addition, Raymondi has asked that certain parties attend the meeting, including Richard DeCristofaro, superintendent of schools; Jay Fink, DPW commissioner; Monica Conyngham, city solicitor; Roy LaMotte, Jr., traffic engineer; bond counsel and architects for the new high school.

Kidnapping Report Mistake

Quincy police said a woman who thought she saw a kidnapping outside the Adams Shore library branch was mistaken.

Instead, the woman actually saw a misbehaving child who was being restrained by a parent, police said.

Police were called on Monday at approximately 2:30 p.m. and informed of a possible abduction. The woman told police it appeared that the child was being forced into a passenger van.

The tip prompted police to begin searching for the van. Investigators also went door-to-door in the neighborhood. Boston television stations broadcast stories about the incident.

Police said the parents of the child saw the television reports and called the police. Officers went to the parents' house and learned about the incident.

The witness acted correctly by contacting the police even though the tip turned out to be mistaken, police said.

Ford And The Nixon Pardon

Has Gerald Ford ever had second thoughts about pardoning Richard Nixon?

A comment he made to John Noonan, former Quincy Sun newsman and now chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging, makes you wonder.

Let's go back:

Twenty-nine years ago this Sunday — Aug. 9, 1974 — Nixon resigned his presidency in disgrace with impeachment charges hanging over his head for his involvement in the Watergate scandal.

Two years before — June 17, 1972 — the Democratic Party national headquarters in the Watergate office complex in Washington was broken into in a bungled burglary.

At first it was considered a petty, amateurish job but gradually mushroomed into a dirty tricks crime for the history books with Nixon dodging the bullet of blame until he was ordered by the Supreme Court to release transcripts of White House audio tapes in July, 1974.

The tapes tied him to the actual go-ahead for the break-in and the cover-up activities that followed.

Nixon was paranoid over his campaign for a second term in 1972. As it turned out, the break-in at the Democratic headquarters to steal political information wasn't worth the effort.

The burglars, soon linked to the White House, got caught inside the office. And whatever information might have been there — and they didn't get — wasn't needed in the campaign, anyway. Nixon swamped Democrat rival George McGovern in a landslide that November.

Ford was a popular congressman and Republican leader in the House when Nixon picked him for vice president in October, 1973 after Spiro Agnew was forced to resign for his own wrongdoings.

Ford, who became the 38th president — first not to be elected — on the day Nixon resigned, was a breath of fresh air in the White House after the Watergate stench. Remember those TV clips and newspaper photos showing him whipping up breakfast the morning after he became president? He projected the image of a man, a sort of regular guy, you could trust. The complete opposite image of Nixon sweating and proclaiming "I'm not a crook" on TV.

Ford's popularity soared. But came plunging down within a month when he jolted the nation Sept. 8 by pardoning Nixon for any federal crimes he might have committed while president.

Ford said he did it for the good of the country. To get FORMER PRESIDENT Gerald Ford being interviewed by The Quincy Sun's John Noonan in 1978.

Watergate behind us — and to move on.

But many weren't buying that. They wondered if a deal had been made between Ford and Nixon. Others just felt Ford let Nixon get off too easily.

The pardon became a political albatross for Ford and no doubt was a major factor in 1976 when he lost the White House to a little known governor from Georgia named Jimmy Carter.

The pardon has followed — if not haunted — Ford through the years.

Getting back to John Noonan, Ford was in Boston in 1978 to endorse former U.S. Atty. General Elliot Richardson for the U.S. Senate.

(Ford's unpopular pardon of Nixon may have rubbed off on his endorsement of Richardson. Richardson lost to Democrat Paul Tsongas.)

Noonan, reporting for The Quincy Sun's then cable news channel, in an interview with Ford asked:

"Mr. President, do you feel that President Nixon should have apologized to the American people for his role in the Watergate scandal?"

"I think," Ford replied, "it would have been the proper thing for Mr. Nixon to have done."

Ford's comment was picked up by the wire services and carried across the country by TV, radio and newspapers.

Nixon, who died April 22, 1994 at age 81, never apologized.

But if Ford was saying Nixon should have apologized, maybe he was having second thoughts — or regrets — about the pardon.

And there are some today who think that Ford, who turned 90 last month, maybe should apologize for granting that pardon.

Children's Programs Attendance Up At Library

Ann McLaughlin, director of Libraries, reports that the number of kids attending children's programs at Quincy's public libraries has increased dramatically over the past year.

The number of children attending programs jumped to 9375 in fiscal 2003, up from 6040 in fiscal 2002, McLaughlin said.

"Clearly, these programs are serving a need for young children and families," she said. "They are generating a lot of interest."

She said the number of programs offered to children and their parents also has jumped over the past fiscal year, from 306 to 383.

READERS FORUM

You Have The Right Of A Write-In Vote

I just read the "Sunbeams" column in the July 24 edition of The Quincy Sun.

I agree that Dan Raymondi's decision not to run for mayor might take some of the steam out of Election 2003. However, his decision seems to make for a much more interesting election season. I do not agree that it will be a free ride for

Mr. Phelan.

The write-in vote appears to be exploding as a major factor this year.

I am one of Mr. Raymondi's thousands of disappointed supporters, who still want a change in the current administration's practices.

M.G.L. Chapter 54, Section 42 provides for write-in voting. It's a simple procedure. A space is provided for each elected office, to write in the name and address (which is essential) of your choice and then you connect the arrows to the right as you would with a regular vote. Most candidates' addresses are right in the phone book. I encourage all voters to vote their consciences and write in their votes, if their choice is not on the ballot. One vote does make a difference, as the 2001 election proved. The 17-vote margin in that election represents only 8 1/2 voters changing their votes.

A Crisis Of Education

According to Mayor William Phelan, the city council will be taking a crucial vote on building a new high school at a special city council meeting on Aug. 18.

The mayor, according to last week's Quincy Sun, will present a funding plan to cover construction of a new high school on Faxon Field and for renovations to the present high school which will be transformed into a new Central Middle School.

A vote to approve the $80 million bond is necessary says Mayor Phelan. Quincy is still eligible for 90 percent reimbursement from the state but a funding plan must be submitted to the state by Aug. 29. According to Sen. Michael Morrissey, foot-dragging could kill everything.

While I agree with Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin that deciding pressing public policy issues in a crisis mentality is a horrible way to run government, a deadline is still a deadline.

I have been a substitute teacher at both Quincy High School and Central Middle School. If we can get 90 percent reimbursement, we owe it to the taxpayers to do so.

Both of these current buildings ill serve our children and public education. A new high school is obviously needed and Central feels like a size 12 foot squeezing into a size 6 shoe. It ain't working too well.

Even with the funding plan in place by month's end, the city still needs approval from both the Department of Environmental Protection and the Army Corps of Engineers since wetlands at Faxon Field are involved.

However, the bottom line remains Aug. 29. Morrissey is right, "It's a simple question, either you want to move forward or you want to kill a new high school." And, I would add a new middle school too.

The city council is right to question the crisis mentality of reacting to a series of recent measures but it really is a crisis of education that is being addressed. The mayor is doing the right thing for our kids.

Quincy Students Winners In Sheriff's Essay Contest

Central and Sterling Middle School students earned top honors for their compositions on the importance of respect in Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's annual Safe School Essay Contest.

"All of the students displayed a great aptitude for the subject matter and proved to be effective writers," Bellotti said.

Students from Central Middle School and Sterling Middle School participated in the essay contest.

The winners from Central were seventh grade twin sisters Colleen McCarthy, first place; and Caitlyn McCarthy, second place.

From Sterling Middle School's sixth grade class, the winners were: Samantha Troup, first place; Brooke Lally, second place; and Aldoron Villena, third place.

Sterling's seventh grade class winners were: Uyen Truong, first place; Kayleigh Quinn, second place; and Ethan Thomas, third place.

Each student wrote a 400-word essay on the theme of "respect" and how young people can give proper respect to their parents, teachers, siblings and friends.

The students were eight of 33 middle school winners whose essays were chosen from several hundred that were submitted to the sheriff's Education Committee. Middle school students from Braintree, Canton, Milton, Norwood and Stoughton also participated.

"Richard DeCristofaro, the school superintendent, does a great job in Quincy, and we're always happy to receive this kind of participation," Bellotti said. "It gives the children a voice and allows them to explore important social concerns in their own vocabulary."

Winning students received certificates of achievement and U. S. Savings Bonds at a recent reception at the Apollo Function Hall in Norwood.

PENNY SPELLBERG shows off her hillside garden on Welgast Circle in Wollaston.

Wollaston Club Members Tour Hillside Gardens

Some 20 members of the Wollaston Garden Club toured the hillside gardens of Penny Spellberg and Dyanne Gardiner recently and pronounced them a real learning experience for all.

Spellberg, a member of the garden club's evening division and serves on the club's board in charge of garden walks, has a garden with a variety of sun and shade perennials.

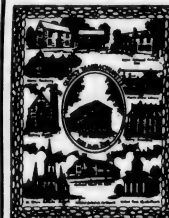

She noted that she was just beginning to understand all the different micro-climates located within her hillside property. She especially enjoys growing yarrow and coreopsis.

Gardiner, who is the conservation chair of the Garden Club as well as an evening division member, had just completed work on a cascading fountain and pool in her garden and was hampered by weather conditions in the spring.

Her garden receives quite a bit of shade and she recommends hostas and astilbe as reliable shade perennials.

Ginny's Dreamy Dessert

On a recent trip to Florida, as usual I found a great recipe for a dessert that I guarantee you will all go crazy over. At least we all did! As is the custom each year, all of the vacationers who live in the same complex, get together and cook up a storm at least once a week.

This particular week, our friend Laura had the dinner served on a large table right outside of her apartment. She made a delicious pasta entree featuring two kinds of pasta and choice meats. Others brought their contributions.

The no-bake dessert was brought by another friend Ginny. It is very easy to make and even though it is calorie laden, it doesn't hurt to indulge once in a while.

Mix all ingredients until smooth and well blended. Before pouring the filling over the

Peanut Butter Pie

1 cup peanut butter
1 1/4 cup powdered sugar
8 ounces cream cheese crust, place the broken Reese cups. Place the mixture over that and refrigerate until hardened and it cuts easily. Additional cream can be put on the top when serving.

Childrens' Activities Continue At Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library is sponsoring several activities for children during the summer season.

Puzzle Crafts is a story and craft program that will be offered tomorrow (Friday) from 2 to 2:45 p.m. at the Wollaston branch, 41 Beale St. Hear a puzzling story and learn how to make different types of puzzles. This program is for children ages 5-8. Call the Wollaston branch at 617-376-1330 for more information.

Art To Go - a program for children of all ages. Projects are open-ended so that a toddler can complete them with an adult's help and older children can express their creativity through design and detail.

Craft time is located at the Main Library from 2 to 4 p.m. on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays. This week create a personalized bookmark.

Registration begins on Monday, Aug. 11 for the Aug. 20 and 22nd Tiny Tot Tunes program. The program is for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult. Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. For more information visit the library or call the Children's Room at 617-376-2411 to register.

Registration begins on Monday, Aug. 11 for the final Monday Night Craft program for children ages 8 and older, bookmaking on Aug. 18. Create a personalized book to use as a diary, scrapbook or whatever you want. This program will take place at the Main Library from 7 to 8 p.m. The program is limited to children ages 8 and older. Registration is required and limited to Quincy residents only. Visit the library or call the Children's Room at 617-376-2411 to register.

Join Jan Ham of the Learning by Design in Massachusetts, a program of the Boston Society of Architects for two special programs on Tuesday, Aug. 19 at the Main Library. Castle Stories and Me is an interactive program for children ages 5-8, at 10:30 a.m. Hear classic and modern stories about castles, play castle characters in a short play, see how real castles were built and try games and toys used in castle times. Build your own model castle using marshmallows, toothpicks and cardboard.

Architectural Explorations for ages 8 and older begins at 12 noon. Take an architectural scavenger hunt of the library through three centuries of building, from the 1880's Richardson building through the 1930's Colletti building and onto the new 2001 CBT addition. Also design and build a model of your favorite place to read. Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. Visit the library or call the Children's Room and register beginning Aug. 11.

16th Annual Storyteller Series - In keeping with this year's arts theme, performers will include music, dance and puppetry with their stories. These programs are for a school-age audience.

This summer's Storyteller Series ends on Aug. 12 with the return of the Act!vated Storytellers (www.activated-storytellers.com). This high energy family troupe travel the country 365 days a year to bring their unique productions to audiences of all ages. Step into the book shaped theatre set for a thrilling adventure that will take you from Mongolia to the 1904 World's Fair with "Eureka! Tales of Discovery."

Prior to the performance, the Act!vated Storytellers will be conducting a half-hour acting workshop for any interested youngsters, age 6 and older, no experience necessary. The workshop is free but limited to 12 participants who will be chosen on a first come basis at 6:30 p.m.

Pajama Time is a drop in storytime presented by storyteller Cheryl Dunford that includes stories, songs, rhymes and a simple craft. Children are welcome to attend in their pajamas. The program is offered as a complement to the Summer Storyteller Series for older children so that younger siblings or children too young for the other program can have a story all their own. Pajama Time is intended for children ages 2-5. Registration is not required.

Family Book Bingo - A new program this summer for the whole family. When your family registers between now and Aug. 15 you will receive a bingo card. After each family member has completed a bingo card, return all of the cards to the library. As a prize for playing your family will receive a bright green Read! Think! Create! book pack, while supplies last. Each family will also receive a summer reading certificate.

For more information about these programs visit the Thomas Crane Public Library's website at <http://ci.quincy.ma.us/tcpl/>.

Buckley Proposes Seniors Volunteer Program With Schools

School committee candidate Brian Buckley proposes the establishment of a volunteer program to further the partnership of the community and the Quincy Public Schools.

Buckley said his proposal would connect Quincy's Council On Aging and the school system by having seniors sign up for participation. Buckley said his past service to the council, as its director, allowed him to reflect on the program's potential.

"Seniors have an abundance of knowledge and enthusiasm that can be used within the classrooms of Quincy schools," Buckley said.

Willing participants would sign up for service through an applications process at senior complexes and neighborhood centers. The Council On Aging could play an integral part in providing the necessary transportation to make the volunteer effort a reality, Buckley said.

Buckley said he sees the director of Quincy Public School's Community Partnership program as the coordinator for the effort. Through the director, teachers could apply for needed services and a volunteer could be matched to the school's need. Currently the director is responsible for business partnerships. Buckley noted that this position would not be an additional burden on the budget.

"This program is an excellent way to open the doors of the school to the community and to tap a valuable resource within the city, its seniors," Buckley said.

DAVID WAHLSTROM (center) of Quincy, a 1980 graduate of Wentworth Institute of Technology and associate vice president of business and finance at Wentworth, receives the Gold Leopard Award, the alumni association's highest award. 'Ca$h For Class' Raises $1,500 For Schools

A year-long program, "Ca$h for Class," at South Shore Plaza has raised $17,450 for schools, including $1,500 for four public schools in Quincy.

Beechwood Knoll and Squantum Schools are to receive $400 each and Bernazzani and Wollaston Schools will get $350 apiece.

For every dollar a shopper spent at South Shore Plaza from Aug. 1, 2002, to May 15, 2003, five points were given to the school of their choice.

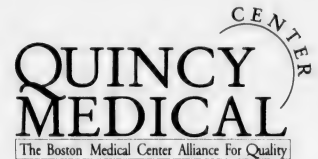

The schools that got the most points during the program received the largest dollar donation for the programs. St. Brendan School in Dorchester had most points, 2,678,331.

A new "Ca$h for Class" program will kick off Aug. 1, 2003. Call 781-843-8200 for information on how to participate.

Finn Files 1,200 Signatures

Joseph Finn, seeking a second term as city councillor at-large, reported he filed his nomination papers with 1,219 signatures last week.

The signatures, he said, were collected by him and his committee throughout the city, many of them door-to-door.

"This is a good way, going door-to-door, to get a good sense from voters as to what their issues and concerns are regarding city government," Finn said.

He said he found most voters were concerned with the basics, streets and sidewalks, public safety and education.

"These are still the most pressing concerns," he said.

Finn said, "I look forward to meeting with voters over the next few months and continuing my efforts and advocacy for the working families of the city."

Anyone wishing to contact him can do so by calling 617-376-1359 or 617-770-1917.

Peter Shea Appointed Senior Vice President, Operations, Retail Banking At Bank of Canton

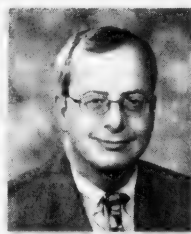

The Bank of Canton recently announces the promotion of Peter Shea to the position of Senior Vice President, Operations and Retail Banking.

Based in the Bank's main office at 557 Washington St. in Canton, Shea's expanded responsibilities include overseeing back office operations and branch administration (which includes systems and check processing), as well as human resources, marketing and compliance.

"We're very pleased to recognize Peter's outstanding contributions with this promotion," said Bank of Canton President and CEO James D. Egan.

"Peter has been part of The Bank of Canton since 1989, and, in many ways, represents the things this institution stands for: great service, highly capable employees, and a commitment to the community-at-large."

Shea holds an undergraduate degree in business management with a concentration in finance from Bentley College, as well as a Certificate from the Fairfield University National School of Banking's three-year management program. Prior to joining The Bank of Canton as vice president of Operations, Shea served in several capacities at the former Lincoln Trust Company.

Shea lives in Norwell with his wife, MaryBeth, and their three daughters, ages 14, 12, and 10.

Dating from its incorporation as a mutual savings bank in 1835, The Bank of Canton has proudly served the community for nearly 170 years. While it has remained true to the mutual savings bank tradition of being a source for home mortgages and commercial lending programs, The Bank of Canton offers customers a full range of home/consumer loans, commercial services, and personal banking options, including investment services through Inflex Financial Group.

In addition to its main office at 557 Washington Street, branches are found at: 259 Turnpike Street/Route 138 in Canton, 275 Quincy Ave. in Quincy, and 67 North Main St. in Randolph. Drive-up tellers are available at all locations, and expanded hours make it easier for customers to take care of all their banking needs.

For more information on The Bank of Canton please call 781-828-1690.

Phelan To Hold Neighborhood Meeting In Quincy Point Tonight

Mayor William Phelan will continue his neighborhood meeting program by hosting a Quincy Point meeting tonight (Thursday) from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse.

The meeting will also feature a free barbecue sponsored by Phelan.

Phelan will update neighborhood residents on city projects and solicit concerns from resident in an effort to address neighborhood issues.

"This program has been successful in reaching out to the community and soliciting the concerns that our residents have," Phelan said.

"I hope that we can continue our success in Quincy Point and tackle those issues that affect the residents of that neighborhood."

The next scheduled neighborhood meeting is for Thursday, Aug. 21, at the Roche Brothers Supermarket Community Room to address the concerns of the South Quincy/Faxon Park neighborhoods.

Johanna Anshewitz Is Marine Engineer

Johanna P. Anshewitz of Houghs Neck has graduated from the Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzard's Bay as a marine engineer.

She is the daughter of John E. and Justine E. Anshewitz of Malden and the granddaughter of John E. and Katherine Anshewitz of Quincy and John F. and Johanna P. Roman of Houghs Neck.

She is following in the footsteps of her uncle, John

Volunteers Sought For Marie Curry Walk

The Marie A. Curry Fund is seeking volunteers to recruit walkers and teams for the 6th Annual Marie Curry Walk, to be held on Sunday, Sept. 7 from 8 a.m. to noon at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

Each year, the Marie A. Curry Walk raises funds to benefit the award-winning Marie A. Curry Fund, which provides free breast cancer screenings and breast care services at Quincy Medical Center to women without health insurance or with inadequate coverage.

The four-mile, non-competitive event is sponsored by the Mayor's Commission on Women in the City of Quincy and Quincy Medical Center. Last year, the walk drew more than 700 participants and raised more than $131,000.

To learn more about the Marie Curry Walk or to volunteer, call 617-376-5493 or visit www.quincymc.org.

Public Safety Day, Family Barbecue Saturday

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti and Stop-A-Shop will host a Public Safety Awareness Day and Family Barbecue on Saturday, Aug. 9 from noon to 2:30 p.m. at Bishop's Field, Holbrook Rd., near the Montclair School.

The event is organized in collaboration with Mayor William Phelan's office, the Quincy Police Department, the Quincy District Court Probation Department, Fallon Ambulance and the Quincy Park and Recreation Department.

It will feature a hands-on view of many public safety vehicles, information on a wide variety of public safety programs impacting all ages, the opportunity to interact with personnel from various public safety agencies, a barbecue and children's entertainment.

There will be components of community policing, motorcycle units, Emergency Management's recently acquired disaster preparedness trailers, and K-9 officers, motorcycle units and a command unit from the Sheriff's office.

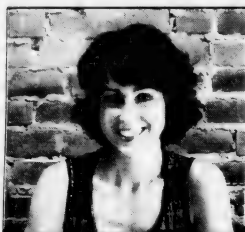

Sheriff's office personnel will be available to explain youth programs as well as the "Are You OK?" senior citizen telephone monitoring system. Representatives from the Quincy District Court Probation Department will highlight their collaborative role with the police, other agencies and the community.

In the event of inclement weather, activities will be held at the Montclair School.

Thomas Crane Library Booklet Wins Library Assn. Top Prize

The booklet created for the dedication of the Thomas Crane Public Library addition has received the Massachusetts Library Association's First Prize in its Public Relations category.

Designed and printed by the Ink Spot of Quincy, the 24-page, wirebound booklet features a full-color photograph of the library building. Inside, stories about the library's history and its people are interspersed with photos and architectural drawings.

Although the booklet was created for the dedication ceremony, it has been a popular item among patrons and visitors who want to learn about the library's rich history, according to Ann McLaughlin, director of libraries.

The text was written by the library's Jessie M. Thuma. She collaborated with the Ink Spot's President Mary Weafer to create the award-winning booklet.

"We are pleased that the Massachusetts Library Association recognized our library and the Ink Spot for the dedication booklet," said McLaughlin. "Jessie and Mary so wonderfully captured the history and spirit of the Thomas Crane Public Library and this project."

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC Library employee Jessie M. Thuma (left), and Ink Spot President Mary Weafer worked together to help produce the award-winning booklet that was created for the dedication of the addition to the library in 2001. The text was written by Thuma, and the booklet was printed and designed by the Ink Spot.

McLaughlin said the booklet is a testament to those in the community who made the project a reality. "So many people contributed, both financially and in other ways, to get this new building created. To have this project chronicled in this beautiful book adds to the library's history," she said.

This is the third major award associated with the new building. The Massachusetts Historical Commission bestowed its 2002 Historic Preservation Award on the library for demonstrating an outstanding commitment to preservation. The Massachusetts Architectural Access Board recognized the library last year with its Honors Award for Accessible Design in Public Architecture.

Flagship Cinemas Open With Games, Ribbon-Cutting

Flagship Cinemas re-opened the eight-screen Quincy Center cinemas last weekend in a flurry of free popcorn, games, giveaways and a ceremonial ribbon-cutting by Mayor William Phelan.

Patrons won gifts ranging from movie posters and T-shirts to free drinks and movie passes, including an Admirals' Pass entitling the holder to free movie admission for a full year, in the "Spin the Wheel of Prizes" event.

Local clown favorites "Sparkles" and "Chubby Cheeks" provided entertainment on both Saturday and Sunday with face-painting and balloon art for the youngsters.

For those who are interested in the answers to the "Identify the Movie Quotes" contest, they are:

"Leave the gun, take the cannoli," Richard Castellano in "The Godfather I."

"I'll be back," Arnold Schwarzenegger in "The Terminator."

Craig MacDonald Receives Degree

Craig Joseph MacDonald of Quincy graduated from Massachusetts College of Art with a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in film.

"Are you talking to me?" Robert DeNiro in "Taxi Driver."

"I see dead people," Haley Joe Osment in "The Sixth Sense."

"Where does he get all those wonderful toys?" Jack Nicholson in "Batman."

"... do I feel lucky? Well, do ya punk?" Clint Eastwood in "Dirty Harry."

"Here's Johnny," Jack Nicholson in "The Shining."

"I love the smell of napsalm in the morning," Robert Duvall in "Apocalypse Now."

"Bond, James Bond," Sean Connery, George Lazenby, Roger Moore, Timothy Dalton or Pierce Brosnan in any James Bond picture.

"That's shagadelic! Yeah, Baby!" Austin Powers in "Goldmember."

"Snakes . . . I hate snakes," Harrison Ford in "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

"Every man dies. Not every man truly lives," Mel Gibson in "Braveheart."

"Here's looking at you, kid," Humphrey Bogart in

"Casablanca."

"May the force be with you," Harrison Ford in "Star Wars."

"ET, phone home," ET voiced by Pat Walsh in "ET — the Extra Terrestrial."

"Say hello to my little friend," Al Pacino in "Scarface."

"You're going to need a bigger boat," Roy Scheider in "Jaws."

And for those who took part in the "Guess the Number of Goldfish in the Bowl" game, there were 1,757 — at least there were when the game started, that is.

Despite the new carpets, wall coverings, concession stand and traditional nautical decor, admission to the complex remains at $5.50 for all matinee seats, children and seniors, and $7.50 for adults in the evening.

The company also offers a "Film Fanatic" program that gives cardholders a free movie after every nine paid admissions and a free movie on your birthday. Entry cards for the Film Fanatic club are available at the box office.

'The Big Dig' Topic At Quincy College Open House

David Kruh, a local author who was once its spokesman, will explain "The Big Dig" at an open house at Quincy College Wednesday, Aug. 13, at 7 p.m. in Coddington Hall.

The lecture and slide presentation will begin at 6 p.m., conclude after 8 p.m. and is open to the public free of charge.

The event is part of an open house planned to welcome the community to the campus for those interested in education, teaching and learning. Musical entertainment and refreshments will follow the lecture.

"We're opening the doors for visitors to learn more about the campus," said Tom DeStantes, spokesman for the college.

"A variety of informational sessions on our nursing program, academic offerings, financial aid, as well as a display of student art, and an opportunity to meet our faculty are planned as part of the evening."

Faculty and staff will be available to answer questions from prospective students interested in careers in nursing, surgical technology and college degree programs. A financial aid and workshop will offer advice.

David Kruh, the lecturer, has worked as a disc jockey, writer, computer programmer, radio producer, radio engineer, actor, stand-up comedian and spokesman for the Big Dig.

His first book, "Always Something Doing," chronicled the history of Scollay Square, once the lusty entertainment center of Boston, now the government center.

His second effort, "Presidential Landmarks," was written with his father, Louis. He also wrote a musical, "The Curse of the Bambino," which had its world premier at Boston in 2001.

Elder Services Offers Hawaiian Picnic Aug. 27

South Shore Elder Services will hold its 11th annual picnic, a Hawaiian Luau Luncheon, Wednesday, Aug. 27, at 11 p.m. to 2 p.m. at Pageant Field, One Merrymount Parkway.

Cost of the luncheon is $3. All reservations must be made by Monday, Aug. 20, by calling the Nutrition Department at 781-848-3910.

Those attending are urged to dress for the weather with light clothing, sunblock, sunglasses and hat. Bring a sweater and a chair.

Entertainment will be provided by Bob Riley's "Legends of Music."

The lunch menu, served at 12 noon, will consist of Hawaiian chicken breast, Polynesian rice, vegetable medley, dinner roll, strawberry peach upside down cake, slush and punch.

Dependable Cleaners' 'Read To Ride'

Three Local Youngsters Win Bicycles In Reading Incentive Program

Three Quincy children have won bikes in the first three weeks of Dependable Cleaners' fifth annual "Read to Ride" summer reading incentive program.

Winners are six-year-old Joshua Labodie; six-year-old Erin McMillen and 11-year-old Christopher McGroarty.

Labodie, a student at Clifford Marshall School, won a new bicycle and helmet for reading in The Small Pond by Denise Fleming.

McMillen, a Wollaston School preschooler, won when her winning entry was drawn for reading The Pokemon Book of Colors by Diane Muldrow.

McGroarty (a triplet) is a six-grade student from Point Webster Middle School. He won his new bike and helmet for reading The Arctic Patrol Mystery by Franklin Dixon, one of the Hardy Boys series.

Dependable Cleaners sponsors Read to Ride annually as a way to encourage children, ages 6-15, to keep reading over the summer by giving them the chance to win a bike and helmet (valued up to $275) for every book completed.

"The program is doing terrific," said Dependable

Cleaners' President Christa Hagearty. "I can't believe that more than 2,300 entry forms have been submitted in three weeks of the contest. Even through the summer, children are picking up those books. It's great to see them reading in their spare time."

Entry forms for the Read to Ride program are available at all 17 Dependable Cleaners locations throughout the South Shore and Boston. Entry forms can also be obtained at Anderson Bicycle Shop at 380 Washington St. in Quincy.

For more information on Read to Ride, to obtain an entry form, or to find the nearest Dependable location, call 617-471-1900.

REAL ESTATE

ST. CATHERINE'S CHURCH, located at 157 Beale St., Wollaston, is on the real estate market for $1.2 million. The sale of the 12,170 square foot structure, built in the late 19th century, is being brokered by Century 21 Annex Realty in Quincy.

INSIDE THE CHAPEL of St. Catherine's Church, considered a symbol of Quincy's religious history and a root of Unitarianism on the South Shore.

Historic House Of Worship In Wollaston Listed At $1.2 Million By Century 21 Annex Realty St. Catherine's Church On Real Estate Market

Century 21 Annex Realty, with offices in Quincy and Hanover, has been chosen to broker the sale of St. Catherine's Church, one of the South Shore's most historic landmarks.

The 12,170 square foot structure, which was built in the late 19th century, is located at 157 Beale St. on the corner of Farrington St. in Wollaston.

The building and its property are listed at $1.2 million.

The property's owners, the South Shore Hellenic Association (SSHA), hired Art Foley, Broker/Owner/Licensed Appraiser, to oversee the sale of this architectural treasure. "This is a unique property that offers many features in addition to its primary function as a place of worship," Foley said.

St. Catherine's rich history dates back to its groundbreaking in 1870, when author D. Foster Taylor proclaimed the property full of "wide open spaces and promises for the future." The site began as the Wollaston Unitarian Church and later merged with the United First Parish Church of Quincy in 1960. It became St. Catherine's in 1962. Today, the church is considered a vital symbol of Quincy's religious history, and the root of Unitarianism on the South Shore.

Boasting the classic style of the 1880s, the church's design evokes the work of William Ralph Emerson, Peabody and Stearns. Often recommended for nomination to the National Register of Historic Places, its masterful blend of granite tiles and rough shingles creates a rustic look that complements the neighborhood's stately Victorian homes. The building features a series of asymmetrical gables with dramatic shingled slate roofs covering each gable.

Inside, the church offers modern, functional restrooms, a kitchen and large hall built to accommodate festival crowds, and a classroom, where the congregation's Greek school classes have met for more than 40 years. The building operates on gas and heat forced by hot water.

Current congregants will merge with a Cohasset congregation and move to a new seven-acre location on Braintree Common. The merger will increase their membership from 240 families to 700 families.

Parishioners have mixed emotions about the upcoming move because many of them consider St. Catherine's as a second home.

"I've been a member of St. Catherine's since I came to America in 1964," said Evangelos Pappas, St. Catherine's assistant treasurer. "I was married here; my children were baptized here. It's where we've raised our family."

Anyone interested in purchasing the property or with questions related to the sale, should contact Art Foley at 617-472-4330 ext. 311.

"This is an ideal building for people who place an emphasis on family and tradition," Foley said. "It's a great location for groups who host a lot of social and community activities such as festivals, classes or holiday meals."

New Garden Tools Help Achieve, Maintain Beautiful Lawn

(NAPS)—The latest generation of garden tools makes it faster and easier to achieve — and maintain — a perfectly groomed lawn. Less effort and reduced yard maintenance mean that homeowners can spend more time enjoying the "outdoor living room."

According to the experts at Honda Power Equipment, manufacturer of a complete range of power equipment for rental and consumer applications, today's models are stronger, lighter, quieter with less vibration, and safer to handle.

Trimmers such as Honda's new HHT25SLTA are great for horizontal cutting challenges presented by grasses and weeds that grow around walls, fences, shrubs, trees and mailbox posts where mowers can't reach. The HHE31CA stick edger is a popular choice for producing deep, vertical cuts along hard surfaces or planting bed lines, and a smart choice for preventing the unsightly creep of aggressive grass varieties.

"Homeowners value leisure time now more than ever, and they view the lawn and garden as the new family room during temperate months," according to Kristin Delaney, Honda product planner. "Our newest 4-stroke inclinable trimmers and edgers are designed to give serious yard hobbyists the most efficient tools for the job — and plenty of time to sit back and enjoy the results."

Even with an arsenal of new tools, however, Honda offers some important lawn "order of operations" tips. "Most people pick the big job to do first — the mowing," Delaney says. "Edging first, followed by trimming and then mowing actually allows for quicker cleanup. Because clippings are picked up and mulched along with the grass clippings while mowing, the result is reduced raking and bagging."

Using the right equipment for the right job and in the right order saves today's lawn enthusiast both time and energy — and produces a perfectly groomed lawn to enjoy with family and friends.

Safety Tips While You're Away

(NAPS)—Property crime makes up approximately three-quarters of all crime in the United States, according to the U.S. Department of Justice.

Here is a pre-vacation checklist:

A Few Days Out

- Ask a neighbor to keep an eye on your house and to pick up the mail and newspaper. The typical burglar looks for a vacant home, so you want to have that "lived in" look while you're gone, said Dale.

- Install deadbolts on every entry door. Deadbolts that are grade 2 or higher offer the best security.

- Make sure back doors, walkways, and entrances to garages and basements are well lit at night since burglars prefer the cover of darkness.

- Linking outdoor lighting systems to motion sensors startle would-be intruders by instantly exposing them to light.

A Day Before

- Install timers on lamps in several rooms to create the appearance that someone is home. From the street or sidewalk, your house should look occupied.

- Look for timers that stagger when the lights go on and off from day to day. These are the best because they prevent a potential intruder from detecting a pattern.

- Clean up your yard so that all debris is removed and all patio furniture is secured in case of a storm.

Just Hours Away

- If you use gas, turn off the pilot light on your hot water heater, stove, oven and clothes dryer.

- Turn your main water valve off.

- Make sure all controls on your stove are turned completely off.

- Pull plugs on appliances, including computers and televisions, to guard against a power surge.

You're Off

- Lock all doors and windows and the garage door. And then double check. Don't be one of those travelers who has to return to make sure the front door is locked.

South Shore Co-Op Forms Mutual Holding Company

South Shore Co-operative Bank has received the required federal and state banking regulators' approvals regarding the bank's request to change the organization of the bank from a mutual bank to a mutual holding company, with the bank as its subsidiary.

Participants attending a special meeting of shareholders of the bank had overwhelmingly voted in favor of the directors' recommendation for reorganization.

John J. O'Brien Jr., president and CEO, who described the corporate restructuring, said:

"The purpose of forming the holding company is to preserve the bank's mutual-ity, independence and community focus that have been the foundation of the bank since its inception in 1890. A significant advantage of the mutual holding company structure is that it also affords the bank access to additional sources of capital and greater flexibility in responding to future opportunities."

Although the bank technically becomes a stock-form organization, its mutual-ity will be preserved because South Shore Mutual Holding Company, a mutual entity, will own 100 percent of the issued stock, it was noted.

The bank's customers will experience no changes in their deposit or borrowing relationships. All officers, employees and directors will continue as the officers, employees and directors of the reorganized bank. The name "South Shore Co-operative Bank" will remain the same.

South Shore Co-operative Bank, headquartered in Weymouth, offers full-service banking for consumers and businesses through its three branches in Weymouth, Quincy and East Bridgewater and its commercial banking and mortgage lending divisions.

South Shore Co-Op Forms Mutual Holding Company

South Shore Co-operative Bank has received the required federal and state banking regulators' approvals regarding the bank's request to change the organization of the bank from a mutual bank to a mutual holding company, with the bank as its subsidiary.

Participants attending a special meeting of shareholders of the bank had overwhelmingly voted in favor of the directors' recommendation for reorganization.

John J. O'Brien Jr., president and CEO, who described the corporate restructuring, said:

"The purpose of forming the holding company is to preserve the bank's mutual-ity, independence and community focus that have been the foundation of the bank since its inception in 1890. A significant advantage of the mutual holding company structure is that it also affords the bank access to additional sources of capital and greater flexibility in responding to future opportunities."

Although the bank technically becomes a stock-form organization, its mutual-ity will be preserved because South Shore Mutual Holding Company, a mutual entity, will own 100 percent of the issued stock, it was noted.

The bank's customers will experience no changes in their deposit or borrowing relationships. All officers, employees and directors will continue as the officers, employees and directors of the reorganized bank. The name "South Shore Co-operative Bank" will remain the same.

South Shore Co-operative Bank, headquartered in Weymouth, offers full-service banking for consumers and businesses through its three branches in Weymouth, Quincy and East Bridgewater and its commercial banking and mortgage lending divisions.

Striving For The Perfect Family Vacation Can Cause Unnecessary Stress

By ALAN JACOBSON

Like any occasion that generates high expectations, a vacation can wind up being a minefield for an unsuspecting family. Even relatively simple vacations rarely come cheap, and the combination of the money spent and the time invested sometimes creates a totally unrealistic pressure to have the perfect vacation.

Family therapists strongly caution against a goal of perfection. Every vacation has good and bad moments, and it's key not to let the minor problems become overwhelming.

So what can you do to help ensure your family vacation is more fun and less stressful? Honest discussion, advance planning and maintaining a sense of humor can go a long way toward helping short circuit potential conflicts.

Discuss As A Family

When deciding on a vacation, not every family member always wants to do the same thing. Perhaps Mom wants to return to that favorite vacation spot on Cape Cod, but the teenage son wants to head to the mountains for camping and hiking. And maybe his sister would really prefer to stay home this year, while Dad on the other hand might prefer a sailing trip with other adults.

It's very common for family members to have different ideas of how to spend their vacation, but if the decision is made to spend the time together, it's vital that everyone has discussed it, had their concerns addressed, and has reason to look forward to the vacation site that's been chosen.

Plan Ahead

Another common vacation problem is disappointment with facilities and activities. Both of these factors should be researched well ahead of time, so that there are no unhappy surprises once you reach your destination. Go online and look at places to stay and find out what local activities are available that will provide a special treat for each member of the family.

What To Do If The Vacation Turns Out Less Than Perfect

If your family vacation doesn't turn out to be perfect, don't let it ruin the whole trip. Just try to keep your sense of humor. And remember that 20 years from now it might be that badly decorated motel room or the not-so-fun park that evokes laughter and warm memories — just because you weathered them together as a family!

If every member of the family is honest about vacation preferences and everyone's needs are considered, you will be off to a good start. And if you refuse to let minor problems become major ones, your vacation is likely to provide both the instant gratification and the long-term memories that you're expecting.

Joseph Morrissey Appointed President Of Milton Hospital

Joseph Morrissey has been appointed president of Milton Hospital, succeeding George Geary who stepped down in January.

Morrissey, who had been serving as Acting President, previously was vice president of Financial Services at Milton Hospital from August 1988 through January.

"Joe has demonstrated outstanding leadership and managerial skills in the past seven months," said Richard Ward, chairman of the Board of Directors at Milton Hospital. "Milton Hospital is privileged to have someone with such experience and knowledge of the institution leading us into our next 100 years."

JOSEPH MORRISSEY

Morrissey, of Norwell, received his bachelor of arts degree in economics and accounting from the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester in 1976 and his masters in business administration from Suffolk University in Boston in 1985.

Previous to working at Milton Hospital, Morrissey was controller of Brockton Hospital and vice president at St. Margaret's Hospital for Women.

Red Cross Offering CPR, First Aid Courses

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay Training Institute is offering the following courses at its Quincy office, 1495 Hancock St., from now until Aug. 18.

Adult CPR/AED: Aug. 7, from 6 to 10:30 p.m. Cost is $55. This course teaches rescue breathing, first aid for choking and CPR for children over eight years of age.

First Aid: Aug. 12, from 6 to 10 p.m. Cost is $50. Course teaches bleeding, shock, poisoning and other common first aid emergencies. Completion of course awards a first aid certificate valid for three years.

The American Red Cross is also accepting registration for Home Health Aid/Certified Nursing Assistant class starting Sept. 2. Cost is $595.

Pre-registration is required for all courses. For more information call 617-770-2600, Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Blood Drive Aug. 19 At Milton Hospital

The uncertainty of the times in which we live require a new commitment to maintain a 5-10 day community blood supply.

That's why Milton Hospital and the American Red Cross are teaming up to help ensure that a safe and adequate blood supply is available when needed.

A blood drive will be held Tuesday, Aug. 19 at Milton Hospital, 92 Highland St., Milton. Donor hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

For an appointment call 617-696-8810. Walk-ins are welcome.

Nearly 1,600 units of blood are needed each day to help those in need in the local community. It is a challenge to collect enough blood to meet the needs of hospital patients year round.

It only takes about an hour of time - and one small pinch - to become a hero to someone in need. Giving the "Gift of Life" is one way to help those in need. Every blood donation is an opportunity to help an accident victim, a surgical patient, or a child battling leukemia, to name a few.

Anyone 17 years of age or older, weighing 110 pounds or more and feeling in good health may be eligible to donate blood. Call 1-800-GIVE-LIFE (1-800-448-3543) with any questions about donating blood, or visit our website at: www.newenglandblood.org

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

BONING UP ON IMPLANTS

The best dental implant candidates have jawbones with sufficient density, width, and depth to accept the implant. The cylindrical, screw type, or "root form," implant is similar in shape to the root of a tooth, with a surface area designed to promote good attachment to the bone. In cases where the jawbone is too narrow or short for immediate placement of root form implants, the area may be supplemented with bone grafting. Where the jawbone is too narrow and not suitable to bone grafting, a special narrow "plate form" implant may be used. And in cases of advanced bone loss, a "subperiosteal" implant may be used, which rests on top of the bone under the gums.

The advantages of implant surgery can dramatically change a person's life. The ability to smile, chew, and function with confidence and without embarrassment can lead to a whole new outlook on life with a new sense of freedom. Our goal is to help preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we take the time to be gentle and provide the best possible dental care in a friendly and comfortable environment. PH: 617-479-6220. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Most dental implants are made of titanium, which has proved to be very effective in fusing with living bone, a process known as osseointegration.

Quincy Gearing Up For Babe Ruth World Series

SPORTS

By CHRIS POISSON

It has been anything but a summer vacation for the members of the Quincy 14-year-old Babe Ruth team.

Just plenty of baseball the past two months as Quincy gears up for probably the biggest baseball games it will ever play — the National Babe Ruth World Series scheduled to begin next Friday at Adams Field.

Between practices, exhibition games, regular Quincy Babe Ruth League games and Suburban League games, the players and coaches have been waking up and falling asleep thinking hardball.

By the time they step onto the diamond next Friday night at 8:30 against the New England champion, Quincy, which has been playing baseball six days a week, will have had about 40 to 45 games under its belt.

"Since the third week of June we've had either a game or practice six out of seven days," said manager Bob Griffin. "If it rains we go to the batting cages. The kids have been getting one day off a week. Their commitment has been great and the key is they're enjoying it. I told them the key is we have to practice a lot so we can put the best quality on the field."

So far, Quincy has played exhibition games against the Quincy 15-year-old team and 14-year-old teams from Scituate, South End and Weymouth, which will be participating in the World Series. This week, it is scheduled to play another exhibition game against Plymouth, which is also competing in the World Series as the Eastern Massachusetts state champion.

Quincy's participation in the Suburban League 15-year-old Division this summer has proved to be a valuable tool in preparation for the World Series. Quincy and Weymouth were granted permission to play in the league in the beginning of July, and both were among the eight teams in the 17-team league that qualified for the playoffs.

"We're most grateful for the 15-year-old teams allow-

Five Teams Set For Babe Ruth World Series

Five of the 12 teams competing in the 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series beginning Aug. 15 at Adams Field are known.

Joining hosts Quincy and Weymouth are Italy, Eastern Massachusetts champion Plymouth and Southwest champion Jefferson Parish of Louisiana.

The remaining seven teams will be decided this week as their tournaments are wrapped up. They will represent the Pacific Southwest, Pacific Northwest, New England, Ohio Valley, Midwest Plains, Middle Atlantic and Southeast.

Welcoming Signs Available At Rogers Jewelry

Signs welcoming the Babe Ruth World Series are available at Rogers Jewelry, 1402 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Donation is $20 for the 2-by-3 waterproof signs. All proceeds will go to Quincy Tourism to help expand its programs. For delivery, call Rogers Jewelry at 617-773-3636.

NQ Alumni Soccer Game Sept. 6

DRESSING DOWN

Three of the biggest enemies of the serpentine belt that drives many of the accessories in a vehicle are heat, misalignment, and chemical contamination. The third of these factors may be either intentional or unintentional. That is to say that a vehicle owner may apply belt dressing, an old-fashioned quick fix for noise and slippage. This is a symptomatic treatment that does nothing to treat the underlying cause of the problem, which is almost always improper tensioning (squeal) or misalignment (chirp). Silicone or wax-based dressings lubricate the belt/pulley interface and may actually contribute to slippage and overheating. Sticky dressings of the gum, tar, and rosin varieties are supposed to enhance grip but may actually act as lubricants under operating temperatures.

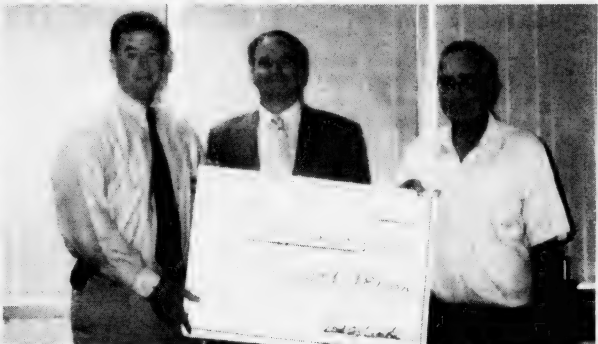

To prevent problems while on the road regularly make sure your car's belts are in good condition. If you need maintenance or repairs, don't hesitate and bring your car to us. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO our friendly, professional ASE Certified service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), will gladly answer all your questions. We also use the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Give us a try. We'll earn your trust!

HINT: Many experts recommend that vehicle owners replace the belt(s) under the hoods of their vehicles every four years or as belt failure warrants.

Missing: Craig Hines, Bobby Couture.

Yellow Cab Captures Junior Farm City Crown

Yellow Cab recently captured the Quincy Youth Baseball Junior Farm League city championship with a hard fought extra-inning victory against BZ Auto.

Yellow Cab was led by seven three-year players: Tom Lester, Paul Mulvey, Justin Keenan, Mike Brooks, Harry Maxfield, Terrence Rooney and Sam Lawlor.

Coach April Keenan praised second-year pitchers Bobby Couture and Kyle McKay and outfielders Mike Adduci, Craig Hines and Mike Murphy.

Yellow Cab will be left in good hands with returning players Colin Donnelly, Ryan Mock, Steven Roche and Anne Dowd, who pitched six no-hit innings against Team Timmins during the season.

The coaching staff, Moe Maxfield, Martin Mulvey, Steven Roche, Keenan, thanked league president Sandy Verhault, the umpires, parents, and Tom Koch and his department for having the fields (Pageant, Atlantic) in shape despite the rain in April.

Spillane Softball Bows To Braintree

The Spillane Law Offices Under 19 travel softball team ended its season last week with a heartbreaking 7-5 extra-innings loss to Braintree at home in the quarterfinals of the Norfolk County League playoffs.

Kim Walsh turned in a nice outing from the mound, pitching all eight innings with three strikeouts.

Mely Ho once again led the offense with a double, triple, two RBI and a run scored. She also made a sparkling play at third base, snagging a line drive that was headed for left field. She finished the season with a .464 batting average and a .887 slugging percentage.

Sheila Lynch (.400) finished the season strong, laying down a perfect sacrifice bunt that put the tying runs into scoring position in the seventh inning. Caitlyn Miller followed with another perfect bunt, which plated Ho and Kelly Barden (.375) with the tying runs.

Marilyn Power, Beth Goodrich (.303) and Lisa Schifone (.382) scored the other runs.

The team thanked its sponsor, David Spillane.

Granite Can't Crack Win Column, Fall 20-19

The Quincy Granite dropped a 20-19 decision to the Charlestown Townies last Saturday night on the road to remain winless this season.

The Granite botched two extra-point attempts in the third quarter that ended up costing them the game.

"That was a good Charlestown team and we outplayed them," said head coach Greg Wilson. "We're a good football team and we're just starting to come together. We play so hard week in, week out. The effort has been amazing. We still have a chance of making the playoffs."

In a battle of 0-4 teams, Quincy travels to Roxbury Saturday afternoon at 3 to face the Panthers, which are coming off a 42-7 loss to the Middleboro Cobras.

Quincy heads to Marlboro the following week and has consecutive bye weeks before returning home Sept. 6 against the Randolph Oilers.

Quarterback Matt Scott did not play and is out indefinitely after sustaining concussions in both Weeks 2 and 3. Fullback Randy Campbell will start in his place Saturday against Roxbury.

Against Charlestown (2-2), all-purpose player Derek Wright lined up behind center and turned in a strong performance with over 200 total yards and three touch-down passes.

Speedster Wayman Payne had two TDs and 100 yards receiving and tight end Jeff Powers caught his first touch-down of his career.

Cornerback John Morant received Eastern Football League Defensive Player of the Week honors.

ing us to play in their division," Griffin said. "The Suburban League has been a very positive experience. We've faced top-notch 15-year-old pitchers and that has helped us immensely as we prepare for the Babe Ruth World Series. We've been able to try different things and that has helped identify what positions players should be playing at and where they should be slotted in the lineup."

Quincy, which finished with a superb 9-5 record, dropped a 6-5 decision to Braintree Sunday in the first game of the double-elimination tournament.

Quincy was scheduled to face Cedar Grove Tuesday night in the second game, although it would be short-handed. Three players — Tom Power, Chris Rooney, Wendell Cosgrove — were scheduled to play in the Quincy Babe Ruth championship between Morrisette and Police.

In the Braintree game, Quincy fell behind 5-0 after two innings but showed its resiliency by rallying to even the score. In the third inning Joe Ferris tripled and scored the first run on a passed ball.

In the fourth Tom Power (single) and Chris Rooney (fielder's choice) reached base and moved to second and third on a passed ball. Kevin Bossart knocked in Power with a fielder's choice and Jon Pelletier ripped an RBI single that plated Rooney to make it 5-3.

Paul Doolan sacrificed both runners to second and third. Bossart crossed home plate on a wild pitch and Lambros Papalambros executed a suicide squeeze that scored Pelletier to tie the game.

Jared Tucker pitched three scoreless innings in relief, but Braintree produced a run on a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning to pull out the victory.

Morrisette Reaches Babe Ruth Championship

Facing elimination, Morrisette recently rolled to consecutive victories over Gold Print and Quincy Police to reach the Quincy Babe Ruth championship game.

Last Thursday at Merrymount Morrisette bested Police, 6-1, as Matt Breslin scattered seven hits in a complete-game performance.

Morrisette jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead when Breslin's Texas leaguer knocked in Drew Loud and Steve Connolly.

Mark Hutchins made it 3-0 with an RBI single that plated Tommy Power (single). In the fifth inning Power scored again on Loud's RBI double to right-center field.

Morrisette added a pair of insurance runs in the sixth.

Breslin singled and advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Nick Peters. Woody McPherson singled, Doug Haskins walked to load the bases and Power lined a two-run single.

Anthony Gilbody turned in the defensive gem of the game in the fourth inning. Police had men on first and second with two outs when Gilbody raced in from right field to make a terrific diving stab of Steve Kussman's sinking liner.

Police threatened again in the sixth with Robert Rinalli on second and Ray Marchand on first, but Steve Connolly fielded a sharply hit ground ball, stepped on third and fired a strike to first to complete the inning-ending double play.

Connolly turned his second double play of the game in the final frame, leaping high in the air to snare a line drive and quickly throwing to second to double up Police. Rinalli singled home Chris Rooney to spoil Breslin's shutout.

For Police, Matt McHugh, Marchand, Kussman,

Rooney and Rinalli all hit safely. Joe Griffin went the distance.

Last Tuesday at Pond Street Morrisette routed Golden Print, 21-8, as Loud blasted a two-run homer in the fourth inning and never looked back.

Loud worked Print's pitchers for three walks, the home run and a single, while collecting four RBI, scoring five runs and stealing four bases. Power (4 runs) and Hutchins (3 runs) each went 3 for 4.

Hutchins picked up the win and Power notched the save.

Josh Brabason, Connolly, Breslin, Peters, McPherson, Haskins, Gilbody and Flynn contributed to the offensive attack. McPherson made a sterling catch in center field robbing Sean Lynch of extra bases.

Red Cross South Area Golf Tourney Raises $26,000

Proceeds Provide Assistance To Disaster Victims

The American Red Cross of Mass Bay South Area recently raised more than $26,000 at its 18th annual Golf Classic at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

The money raised helps ensure that work providing assistance to disaster victims in the area will continue.

So far this year, the South Shore Chapter's Quincy Center office has met the emergency needs of hundreds of families by responding to 266 disaster incidents.

Daniel Flynn, owner of Daniel J. Flynn & Company, sponsored the event for the second time. Robert Petrie, senior vice president of South Coastal Bank, served as general chairperson.

Petrie, also a South Area Council member, acknowledged and thanked Bay State Federal Bank, Brookline, for being a major contributor.

This year, Colonial Federal Savings Bank made a major contribution to the event to mark the retirement of Jerry Dacey from their institution. Dacey is chairman of the South Area Council and golf tournament committee member.

Comets Softball Defeat Hull, Brockton

The Quincy Comets girls' softball team closed out its season in the South Shore League with victories over Hull and Brockton to finish with a 6-5 record.

In the Hull game, Ashley Mac Isaac fired a four-hitter to lead the Comets to a 6-1 victory. The only Hull run against Mac Isaac came in the seventh inning on an error.

Nicole Murray blasted a three-run homer over the center fielder's head in the fourth inning.

The Comets broke a scoreless tie in the third inning when Alyssa Fontana singled, Kaitlin Fish walked and Jessie Powers signaled to load the bases. Murray walked to force in a run and Mac Isaac stroked a two-run single.

In the Brockton game, the Comets outslugged the opposition, 17-12. Quincy jumped out to a 3-0 first-inning lead on base hits by Fish, Powers, Mac Isaac and Christine Perry.

After Brockton came back to tie the score, Quincy erupted for five runs in the third inning on singles by Murray, Christine Foley, Mac Isaac and Perry, and a double by Jackie Mullen.

In the fourth inning the Comets scored five more runs, as Murray belted a two-run homer and Jess Guerriero, Mullen and Melinda Mooney also knocked in runs.

Brockton rallied to close the gap to 13-8, but Quincy put the game out of reach in the fifth on Murray's second homer of the game and RBIs from Guerriero, Mullen and Fontana. Mac Isaac picked up the win.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Many people strive to leave an estate made up of land, stocks and bonds, and money in the bank. This can not be faulted for it is not fundamentally wrong, of course... But there is a different kind of estate that never needs, or even can be probated...

The very best estate is an honorable name, a good reputation, a record of righteous, useful living... A legacy of an honorable name, a legacy of profound respect for facts, a deep reverence for character, a thirst for wisdom, a dedication for work - is far more important and more meaningful than money itself. These things can NEVER be detrimental, while money and assets at times CAN be.

A legacy of decency is NOT an impossible legacy... It is an estate ANY parent can leave to his or her children... In the funeral home field we have witnessed it time and again... And if you look back, we are sure you can say the same thing with equal or perhaps even more emphasis.

We welcome and appreciate any comments or thoughts you may have considering the thoughts you read here...

PRAYER TO THE BLRESSED VIRGIN (Never Known To Fail)
"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. (Make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein that you are my Mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this prayer in your hands (3X). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days. You must be published and it will be granted to you."

Edward C. Lucas, 81

Retired Suffolk Superior Court Stenographer

A funeral service for Edward C. Lucas, 81, of Quincy, a retired Suffolk Superior Court stenographer, was held Monday at Keohane Funeral Home, 333 Hancock St.

He died July 31 at Quincy Medical Center.

Mr. Lucas served in the Air Force and Navy in World War II and the Korean War and was a member of the American Legion.

While in the service he was also a court reporter, according to his military discharge.

He liked animals and supported the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Born in Weymouth, he lived in Hull before moving to Quincy 40 years ago.

He is survived by his wife, Emily E. (Redmond) Lucas of Quincy; a stepson, William Entwistle of Florida; a stepdaughter, Linda McCallum of Weymouth; five grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; and two nieces and two nephews.

Burial was private in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Donations may be made to MSPCA, 350 S. Huntington Ave., Jamaica Plain 02130.

Funding by the city for the school has to be in place before the state will consider the 90 per cent reimbursement that has been promised at a later date.

Even with the bond issue approved by the City Council, construction of the new high school will still be a long way from reality.

Since the Faxon Field site, next to the present Quincy High School, is a wetland building on it will require permits from the Department of Environmental Protection and the Army Corps of Engineers.

Then, Quincy is ninth on a preliminary list of 28 "most urgently needed projects" for state reimbursement and the Department of Education has a waiting list of more than 300 ahead of the fortunate 28.

Golden Files Over 300 Signatures

Stephen Golden filed more than 300 signatures with his nomination papers for School Committee on Monday.

Noting that only 50 are required get his name on the ballot, Golden said:

"I am very pleased that so many people signed my nomination papers. Collecting signatures has been the focus of my campaign for the past two months. The response I have received from voters across Quincy has been great."

Golden, who teaches at an alternative high school program in Brockton, officially announced his candidacy for School Committee last month.

Blue Cross To Show Teachers How Big Business Works

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts (the Blues) will host four business and technology teachers from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools for a four-day teacher extern program.

The program will be held Monday, Aug. 11, through Thursday, Aug. 14, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on each day in four different venues.

Aug. 11 at Landmark Center, 201 Park Drive, Boston; Aug. 12 at the Customer Service Department, 100 Newport Ave., Quincy; Aug. 13, at the Claims Department, 100 Hancock St., Quincy; and Aug. 14 at 100 Hancock St. Quincy.

The Blues, in cooperation with the Quincy School-Community Partnership, is attempting to give the teachers, and through them their students, a working familiarity with a large-scale business.

The first-hand experience is expected to enable teachers to better illustrate to their students how school is preparing them for their future careers in a business setting.

Quincy, Waterford, Conn. Meet 8:30 p.m. Friday At Adams Field Over 80,000 Expected At Babe Ruth World Series

By CHRIS POISSON

After two and a half years, Quincy Babe Ruth President Dick Lombardi's dream has come true.

The 2003 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series has finally arrived in the City of Presidents.

"I'm looking forward to it," Lombardi said. "It's been a long wait and it's finally here. We've been working for two and a half years for this to come to Quincy. I know I'm going to enjoy it and I hope everyone else will too."

The World Series is scheduled to launch tomorrow (Friday) at the newly renovated Adams Field in Merrymount Park and conclude Saturday, Aug. 23, with the championship game.

A small ceremony will be held at 1 p.m. and the opening ceremonies will take place around 7 to 7:30 p.m. prior to Quincy's 8:30 p.m. game against Waterford (Conn.).

Special World Series Section

Two pre-World Series events will take place today (Thursday). At noon, a home run derby, featuring three players from each team, will be held at Merrymount Field. At 7 p.m., a World Series banquet will be held at the Boston Marriott Quincy with over 800 guests.

Babe Ruth officials expect over 80,000 hardball enthusiasts for the fifth annual event for the 14-year-old division.

"Every place you go you hear people talking about the World Series," Lombardi said. "It has brought the talk of baseball back to this area. Quincy has always been a baseball town. It's a great thing for this city. It's great to see how everyone came together. Everyone worked hard to make this a reality. It will be a success, as long as it doesn't rain."

The event will feature 12 teams, including an international team from Italy, all vying for the distinction as World Series champion.

School Committee Also Reaffirms Faxon Field Site New QHS Plans Get Green-Light

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The School Committee Monday night approved changes in construction plans for the proposed new high school and reaffirmed its commitment to building the school at Faxon Field.

In a special meeting held at the Quincy High School auditorium, the committee voted 6-0 to modify construction plans for the new high school, which preserves some wetlands at the site and relocates tennis courts to the top of a parking structure. Committee member Ron Mariano was not present.

Under a modified plan ironed out by city and state officials, two and a half of the six acres of wetlands would be preserved on the Coddington St. site. The remaining three and a half acres would be filled in, and the city would have to replicate them somewhere else.

Design Plan

Committee members characterized the plan as a compromise that will allow the city to obtain the necessary environmental permits to build on the site.

"This is a compromise to move this project forward," said committee member Elaine Dwyer.

Committee member Michael McFarlane said the vote was necessary to show state education officials that the city is committed to the project.

"In order for us to move forward, we have to show, as a city - the school committee, the city council and the mayor - that we are still totally committed to this project so that we may get what we need from them, which is approval of the ultimate project, after we have all of our regulatory approvals."

Quincy is eligible to be reimbursed 90 percent of the cost of construction because

Second Phase Of Concourse Plan Generates Support

At a public hearing Monday night, residents and members of the business community expressed support for the second phase of the Quincy Center Concourse plan.

The city is seeking up to $2 million in state grant funds for the second phase of improvements to the Concourse.

The city filed a Public Works Economic Development (PWED) Grant Application for up to $2 million with the Massachusetts Executive Office of Transportation and Construction. The application is being reviewed by the Executive Office and the state Highway Department, according to the mayor's office.

Grant funds would be used for preliminary and final design of downtown streets, including construction on sidestreets and land acquisition for the concourse.

"This is a pivotal piece for the redevelopment of the downtown area," said Mayor William Phelan. "This will make the downtown more pedestrian-friendly and will provide part of the infrastructure necessary to move the project forward."

During the meeting, held at City Hall, sentiment for the project was positive.

"If the city is successful in securing this grant money it will save the taxpayers of Quincy up to $2 million," said Ron Coglian, community development manager for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. "We applaud Mayor Phelan for seeking these funds. It will improve traffic flow and allow businesses to grow and expand. This, in turn, will create more jobs and have an overall positive effect on our local economy."

Coglian, who attended the hearing, said support for the project was "overwhelming."

City Engineer Fran Sandonato and DPW Commissioner Jay Fink presented an overview of the project to residents.

New Quincy High Plans Get Green-Light

the city is able to utilize the state School Building Assistance program.

Gov. Mitt Romney, however, ordered a moratorium on new projects for the program, which meant the city was in danger of losing the funding.

But state Education Secretary David Driscoll allowed the project to stay on the list, with the condition that the city would take certain steps prior to Aug. 29, McFarlane said.

The school committee's approval of a site design and location satisfies the Department of Education, he said. In addition, the city must sign off on a funding mechanism for construction of the project, he said. If those steps are not taken before the deadline the project would be placed in limbo until the moratorium is lifted on July 1, 2007, McFarlane said.

At next week's city council meeting, Mayor William Phelan is expected to submit a bond, estimated at $80 million, to cover the costs of the project. The council will be hard pressed to approve the measure.

Phelan said he hopes to answer all questions from councilors about the financial plan.

In the meantime, the city must secure environmental approval from the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), the Army Corps of Engineers and the local Conservation Commission.

School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said he was confident the city would be able to obtain the necessary environmental permits.

"We should have more of an indication this fall whether the site can be approved for permits or not," he said. "We are confident at this time working with the regulatory agencies that this will be the site of the new high school," said DeCristofaro.

The compromise plan preserves about two and a half acres of wetlands but eliminates the outdoor basketball courts and relocates tennis courts to the parking structure associated with the new Central Middle School. Originally, the entire six acres of wetlands were to be destroyed and replicated somewhere else in the city.

Phelan, chairman of the school committee, said the revised plan addresses the concerns of area residents and environmental agencies.

"We were able to incorporate the concerns of the neighborhood and the environmental agencies by preserving some wetlands and devising a flood control plan that is far superior to the one currently in place," he said.

The new design also calls for the construction of footbridges to allow students to walk over the wetlands area.

Committee member JoAnn Bragg said the school department would incorporate the wetlands into the school's science curriculum. "It will be a great program for science students," said Bragg.

At the meeting Phelan stressed the importance of the flood relief plan that is being designed along with the new high school. The plan is designed to alleviate flooding problems for residents near Russell Park.

But Phelan said the flood relief proposal is tied to the construction plan for the new high school. "If the high school doesn't move forward we will have to reconsider exactly where, if at all, we will get the funds for that," Phelan said.

Prior to the meeting, the school committee held a public hearing regarding the proposed new high school. Only four people stepped forward to voice their concerns.

Robert Haley, vice president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association and a Quincy resident, registered his opposition and said the plan is not fiscally sound.

"As a parent I was hoping to come here tonight and voice my support for this project," said Haley. "I am disappointed I cannot do that. There are too many unanswered financial questions concerning this proposal."

Julie Berberan of 14 Riverview St. criticized the process, saying the city should secure the proper environmental permits before signing off on a financial plan for the new high school.

"The city must prove that Faxon Field is in fact the best location for the high school," she told the committee. "Without this vital piece of information it is impossible for the City Council to determine the cost of the project."

Roy Johnson of 12 Harrison St. said he was concerned whether the new high school would be big enough to accommodate future enrollments.

Kao Li, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., reminded the committee how the city was able to obtain the 90 percent reimbursement from the state for the construction of the new high school. Since the city has a racially imbalanced school, the Parker Elementary School, it was able to apply for the 90 percent reimbursement. A majority of the students at the school are Asian.

"It is very important, as the school committee develops plans for the entire city to consider the value that Asians have brought to the city," Li told the committee.

A $60,000, 30% Election

City Clerk Joseph Shea estimates the Sept. 16 city preliminary election will cost about $60,000 but doesn't see a big voter turnout.

The only contests are for nominations for mayor, school committee and the Wards 1 and 6 city council seats.

He thinks the mayoral run-off between incumbent William Phelan and challengers Joseph Newton and Harvey Kertzman will help spark interest. But not enough to bring out a heavy vote.

"The heaviest voting will be in Wards 1 and 6 but overall city-wide I don't think the turnout will be more than 30 percent," he says.

There are approximately 51,500 registered voters at the present time.

A 30 percent turnout would mean something like 16,500 voters going to the polls. And 35,000 staying home.

But Shea will have to print 51,500 ballots — or whatever the number of registered voters there are at the time of the Sept. 16 election.

That is just in case that miraculous election day arrives when every registered voter actually votes.

"We are required to have a ballot for every registered voter," Shea explains. "Imagine if every voter turned out and we didn't have enough ballots."

Other costs for the preliminary election include: 180 election workers, six for each of the 30 precincts, and approximately 40 police officers.

Incidentally, Shea is now a Certified Municipal Clerk. He graduated last week from that course at Salve Regina College in Rhode Island.

He received his CMC diploma after completing the course given one-week a year over a three-year period. Joe, we think you could have taught that course.

JOE NEWTON and his fiancée, Laura MacKnight, have changed their wedding date.

NEWTON

Originally set for this Nov. 15, the wedding has been moved to Jan. 10.

"But it had nothing to do with the mayoral campaign," says Newton. "We changed the date before I decided to run for mayor because the priest we wanted to perform the ceremony (Fr. James Hickey of Holy Family Church, Rockland), could not do it Nov. 15."

Newton took an early buyout from his job at State Street and now with the new wedding date can ease up a little on finalizing the wedding plans.

"Now I can campaign full-time," he muses. "Maybe changing the wedding date was a good omen."

Although he had thought of running for mayor if City Council President Dan Raymondi did not, Newton's final decision to do so came as a surprise to even his closest friends.

He didn't even mention it while talking with one friend outside City Hall just before he went in and took out his nomination papers on deadline day.

HARVEY KERTZMAN, the other challenger in this year's mayoral race, says his love for Quincy was a major factor in his decision to run.

"I love Quincy," he says. "I'm proud of Quincy, its history, and everything it means. I even get passionate over a piece of Quincy granite."

Kertzman, incidentally, is getting in a little person-to-person polling and campaigning while pumping gasoline at his Quincy Ave. gas station.

He asks customers if they are from Quincy and if they are, tells them he is running for mayor and asks: "Do you have any concerns you would like to discuss?"

KERTZMAN

A FIRST ANNIVERSARY Mass for Paul Harold was celebrated Tuesday at St. John's Church, Quincy Center.

HAROLD

Hard to believe a year has gone by since his death Aug. 12 at age 53 after a long battle with cancer.

Paul's public service career spanned a quarter century as city councillor, city council president, state senator and Norfolk County register of deeds.

His career was founded on principles and "putting people first."

His death was a major loss to the community he loved.

He was a breath of fresh air when he burst on the political scene and remained so.

He never lost the common touch and never forgot the people.

He will long be missed.

BRIAN BUCKLEY, former executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging now heading up the Norfolk County Sheriff Department's intergenerational programs and a candidate for school committee, has a cherished photo with the late Bob Hope.

BRIAN BUCKLEY and BOB HOPE

It was taken in the 1980s in Boston's North End where Hope was visiting the owner of a restaurant who catered some of Hope's dinner functions.

"When he arrived, I asked him if he would mind posing with me," Buckley says. "He was very friendly and said, 'I'd be happy to pose with you, son.'"

Buckley's brother, Brett, snapped the photo and it was used for Buckley's Christmas card that year.

Buckley managed to get a celebrity to pose with him for his Christmas card every year for nearly 25 years. The last one was Christie Brinkley in 2000 when Buckley retired the series.

Buckley says most of the celebrities were accommodating. Among them: Ray Charles, Shaquille O'Neal, Johnny Cash, Bobby Orr, Bobby Hull, Lee Trevino, Rafer Johnson, Monty Hall, Reggie Jackson, Burt Reynolds, Bo Derrick, Carroll O'Connor, Rodney Dangerfield.

Only two turned him down: Gene Autry and Penn State football coach Joe Paterno. But Paterno could be excused. It was right before the game kick-off. Autry just said "no."

Like the other celebrity photos, Buckley appreciated the one with Hope when it was taken, but now that he is gone, he cherishes it.

"Bob Hope," he says, "is an American legend who will live on forever. He is to entertainment what Babe Ruth is to baseball, what Michael Jordan is to basketball and what George Washington is to the presidency."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1913 real photo postcard is a view of the rocky beach along Quantum's eastern shore. Rarely seen except by local residents, this is probably the stoniest beach along Quincy's almost 30 miles of shoreline. At one time, there was a wharf built out here to deeper water. Atop the hill on the left was the Seal Rock Inn, a three-story hotel that after 50 years burned to the ground in 1913. The Inn's name came from a cluster of rocks out of sight to the right. The X marks the spot where the sender of this postcard swam everyday.

We Should Make Firefighters' Jobs As Safe As Possible

When OSHA became a federal law, the jobs we all worked on were very unsafe places.

Years later, even with the safety laws, people go to work and get hurt and die. A few weeks ago a 40-year-old electrician left his wife and four children to go to work. That day the lives of his wife and children were changed forever. He was electrocuted and died at work. He knew his job, but still lost his life.

In Quincy, our firefighters respond when we need them. These firefighters get to a fire and without regard for their own safety, run into places they may never return from. They do this to try to save the lives of our families, neighbors and friends.

If we can, we should work to make their jobs as safe as possible. OSHA made our jobs safer; it wasn't part of a negotiated contract and shouldn't be. If one more person at our door in four minutes saves our family and a firefighter's family from having to go through the sudden loss of life, we should find a way to do it.

Would the firefighters in Worcester have lost their lives if more firefighters were there sooner? If the building could have been checked and cleared sooner could everyone have gotten out? If one more firefighter had been to the fires in Quincy, could the lives lost in Houghs Neck and other parts of Quincy been saved?

For years the city has been studying these problems. Some are saying wait for a report on the study to come out. Will the new study meet the same fate as past studies, put in the drawer and never acted upon?

I think the seven councilors that voted for NFPA 1710 should be thanked for helping to bring this problem out in the open. They voted for this politically hot issue in an election year; and to me that says great things about their character.

Mayor Phelan should start the process of working toward better manning of our fire equipment. It's man power that may save our lives. It's time to work on a solution, not a veto. There needs to be a creative solution to our manning problems. The Quincy firefighters need to have safer jobs and we need to have a fire department that works at its best to save lives. To settle for less is just wasting our money.

'Ten Commandments,' Not 'Ten Suggestions'

The recent election of the Rev. V. Gene Robinson as Episcopal Bishop of New Hampshire, points to a growing drift within mainline Protestant denominations, away from basic Christian Doctrine.

Homosexual behavior is contrary to the teachings of the Bible, and the "Ten Commandments" are no the "Ten Suggestions."

Thank You For Publicizing Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive

We would like to thank you for publicizing the 19th Chris Peter Blood Drive in The Quincy Sun. From the very beginning you have been there for us and we appreciate your continued support.

Our total this year was 120 pints of blood collected. Our 19-year total is more than 2000 pints. We feel humbled by the generosity of our donor for reach such numbers.

We could not do it without the help, and The Quincy Sun did help. Without the Sun we know we would not be reaching the wide audience we do and from the bottom of our hearts we thank you.

Soviet Spy Money May Be Buried Here?

The FBI reported this week that a Soviet spy ring may have buried money in Quincy.

The expense money for the spy ring (estimated at between $50,000 and $1 million) was allegedly hidden at five locations in New York State and in Quincy. The money was believed to be part of the funds managed by accused Soviet master spy Rudolph Abel.

FURCOLO NAMES RYAN CHAIRMAN

William Ryan, Quincy director of recreation, was appointed chairman of the State Citizenship Participation Committee on Recreation, by Gov. Foster Furcolo.

Ryan was past New England chairman for the National Recreation Association and a member of the national advisory committee of the association.

He received his Bachelor of Science degree in recreation from Springfield College and did graduate work at Springfield and Boston University. Before assuming his post in Quincy two years ago, he was director of recreation in Dedham and Holliston.

CAMP MASSASOIT

COMPLETED RECORD YEAR

Camp Massasoit, the Quincy Boy Scout reservation camp in Plymouth, completed what was termed a "record season" this summer.

More than 250 boys attended the camp for a week or more, while the camp had a 100 percent increase in its independent camping program. Wesley Wright, camp director and Scout executive of the Quincy Council, urged those interested in attending Camp Massasoit for the 1958 season to make reservations early.

SS MOBIL POWER LAUNCHED

The 29,000 deadweight ton tanker, Mobil Power, was launched in ceremonies at Fore River this week. It joins the American Flag Fleet of Socony Mobil Company, for whom Fore River this year was scheduled to complete a $50 million five-ship program. Some 400 guests attended a reception at the Neighborhood Club following the launching. Sam Wakeman, manager of Fore River, was master of ceremonies.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Childrens' Activities Continue At Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library is sponsoring several activities for children during the summer season.

Art To Go—a program for children of all ages. Projects are open-ended so that a toddler can complete them with an adult's help and older children can express their creativity through design and detail.

Craft time is located at the Main Library from 2 to 4 p.m. on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays. This week create a personalized bookmark.

Registration begins on Monday, Aug. 18 for the Aug. 29 Tiny Tot Tunes program. The program is for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult. Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. For more information visit the library or call the Children's Room at 617-376-2411 to register.

Join Jan Ham of the Learning by Design in Massachusetts, a program of the Boston Society of Architects for two special programs on Tuesday, Aug. 19 at the Main Library. Castle Stories and Me is an interactive program for children ages 5-8, at 10:30 a.m. Hear classic and modern stories about castles, play castle characters in a short play, see how real castles were built and try games and toys used in castle times. Build your own model castle using marshmallows, toothpicks and cardboard. Architectural Explorations for ages 8 and older begins at 12 noon. Take an architectural scavenger hunt of the library through three centuries of building, from the 1880's Richardson building through the 1930s Colletti building and onto the new 2001 CBT addition. Also design and build a model of your favorite place to read. Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. Visit the library or call the Children's Room and register beginning Aug. 11.

If your family has been playing Family Book Bingo this summer please finish up your game and claim your prize. Remember that Friday, Aug. 29 will be the last day to claim your prize.

For more information about these programs visit the Thomas Crane Public Library's website at <http://ci.quincy.ma.us/tcpl/>.

Pam Rosenblatt Assistant Editor At Independent Magazine

It may not be as readily available as The New Yorker or The Atlantic Monthly, but the new renaissance holds its own in terms of writing quality and intellectual stimulation.

Seeking greater exposure to the literary world, Pam Rosenblatt, a longtime Quincy resident, recently took a volunteer position as assistant editor of the new renaissance (tnr), an independent, bi-annual magazine devoted to excellence in writing and poetry.

Founded in 1968, tnr is the oldest independent literary magazine in Massachusetts and one of the oldest in the country. Through the years, more than 175 accomplished writers and artists have gone on to garner accolades such as NEA awards, Rockefeller Fellowships and PEN International Awards.

The magazine also translates poetry and stories from other languages into English.

The magazine's circulation is approximately 1200, with 130 copies going to libraries worldwide.

"I've always wanted to work for a magazine like tnr because it deals with issues and situations in a healthy, positive way," said Rosenblatt, who worked as an event planner at Quincy College for many years. "The magazine has a variety of pieces that make you think. But it hasn't changed much in 35 years."

Rosenblatt's roots run deep in Quincy. She is the daughter of Dr. Gerald Rosenblatt, the well-known cardiologist who worked at Quincy Hospital for more than 30 years. Although retired since the early 1990s, Dr. Rosenblatt continues to aid the sick and needy by volunteering his services in Florida. He divides his time between Florida and New Hampshire.

Her mother, Lorraine, was a nurse at Quincy Hospital, and a probation officer at Quincy District Court for more than 10 years. And her brother, Michael Rosenblatt, is a practicing attorney in Quincy.

In addition, Rosenblatt's grandmother, Molly Silverman, worked at Cummings retail store in Quincy Center for many years.

Rosenblatt said independent magazines like tnr have more difficulty publishing because they do not accept advertising from private companies. Instead, private donations and fundraising events keep the publication afloat, she said. She hopes her experience at tnr will serve as a springboard for her own career in writing. Rosenblatt said she is currently writing fiction and non-fiction work. She also dabbles in poetry.

"I want to develop my writing skills and what better way to do that than to work at such a high quality magazine like tnr," she said.

Rosenblatt, 41, devotes approximately 30 hours per week to the publication. She works alongside Editor-In-Chief Louise Reynolds of Arlington. They work from Reynolds' home.

"She's a wonderful editor - you submit something and she turns it into gold," she said of Reynolds.

Rosenblatt graduated from Boston University with a Bachelor of Arts degree in English. She also has worked The Quincy Sun and The Patriot Ledger.

She will be participating in a fundraising event for the magazine this fall.

"We really need more donations and more support to sustain it," she said. "Most literary magazines are not profitable and since we do not accept advertising it can make it difficult."

The tnr Gala Celebration, will take place on Saturday, Nov. 8 in New York City. For more information about the magazine or fundraising event contact Louise T. Reynolds at 781-646-0118. Tnr's website is www.tnrjmag.net.

Andy And Ann Rearick Celebrate 50th Wedding Anniversary

If may be the most important word in the lives of Andy and Ann Rearick of 78 Norton Rd., Wollaston.

If Andy (short for Anderson) hadn't been a newly commissioned flyer headed for his first billet at the Naval Air Station in Brunswick, Maine...

If he hadn't paused en route to visit a friend at Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston...

If he hadn't met Ann Cubie, a student at the college, that day in the spring of 1952...

Well, to make a long story short, they were married June 6, 1953, five days after Ann graduated, in Granville, Vt., by her father, the Rev. James M. Cubie.

This year, four children and eight grandchildren later, they're celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary.

About 150 people, including children, grandchildren, other relatives and friends, showed up at a dinner at the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene to help them celebrate.

Andy was gone on overseas assignments for nine of the first 12 months of their marriage and Ann taught mathematics at Brunswick High School.

He was discharged from active duty in October, 1954, and immediately reported for training for the FBI. He served his first year as a special agent in Birmingham, Ala.

He ended up in the New York office with the Bank Robbery-Fugitive Squad, then as Bank Robbery coordinator in the Garden City Resident Agency on Long Island.

ANDY and ANN REARICK

The Rearicks had always been active in Church of the Nazarene as lay persons, so when Andy retired from the FBI in 1978, he and Ann entered the ministry.

They pastored the Community Church of the Nazarene at Massapequa Park on Long Island for 14 years, during which time they completed additional studies and were ordained.

Ann earned a masters degree in pastoral counseling and also served as chaplain for the Nassau County Juvenile Detention Center and Long Island Hospice organizations.

Council On Aging Plans Trips

The Council on Aging's Department of Elder Services is planning trips for senior citizens to Lake Winnepesaukee, N.H., and Foxwood Casino in Connecticut during the month of September.

In 1991, at the request of the president of Eastern Nazarene College, they resigned as pastors and Andy returned to the college where he and Ann first met to serve as director of Safety, Security and Risk Management until June, 2000, when he again retired.

Ann was director of Alumni Relations at Eastern Nazarene for a year before becoming director of Pastoral Care at Quincy Medical Center where she continues to serve as part-time chaplain.

The bus will leave Marina Bay at 8 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 18, for Lake Winnepesaukee and Thursday, Sept. 25, for Foxwood Casino.

Call Dot Dow at 617-376-1508 for reservations.

Elizabeth Bloomer To Enter Holy Cross College

Elizabeth Bloomer of Quincy, a member of the National Honor Society and salutatorian of the Class of 2003 at Archbishop Williams High School, will enter Holy Cross College in the fall.

Bloomer, who will major in English at the Worcester school, also was awarded the 35th annual David Maglio Scholarship for "zeal, loyalty, and service to the school, unselfishness, interest in the welfare of others, appreciation of the opportunities existing here for students and efforts and accomplishments in light of ability and talent."

ELIZABETH BLOOMER

She also presented a speech at the United Nations where she spoke out against child labor in Pakistan, an interest she developed as a middle school student in the Quincy public schools.

She has also received the Beatrice Priest Award, a Peer Leadership Award, a Christian Ambassador Award, a Theater Award and a Book-store Award and participated in soccer, basketball, softball and track at Williams.

QHS 1948 Class Planning Sept. 5 Reunion

The Quincy High School class of 1948 will hold its 55th anniversary reunion Friday, Sept. 5, at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

The cocktail hour will be from 4 to 5 p.m. followed by a clam bake.

Elizabeth Anderson, Angelo Balboni, Pauline Bando, Ann Barton, Fred Bennett, Francis Bartoni, Edward Bourke, James Costello, Marjorie Dolan, Barbara Cole, David Johnson, John King, Rose Marrone, Angelina Grippi, Daniel Ford, Richard Ojala, Warren Rainey, Virginia Reddington, Robert Manley, William Madden, Robert Sousa, Kenneth Tong, Margaret Tonchias, Sabra Turner, William White, Donald Wilson, Elizabeth Stone.

The committee is seeking information or addresses for a number of "missing" classmates. Anyone with information is asked to contact Alice Moscardelli Pecce at 781-335-7301.

The classmates sought are:

Christopher Bell Appointed To Elder Services Board

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti announces that Christopher Bell, director of outside programs and community corrections for the Sheriff's office, has been named to the South Shore Elder Services board of directors.

Bell, 40, of Quincy, previously was an advisory council member of South Shore Elder Services, and he is responsible for building Sheriff Bellotti's senior citizen safety initiative, known as TRIAD, which now operates successfully in each of the county's 38 communities.

"For the last five years Chris has been a valuable touchstone for the elder population in Norfolk County," Bellotti said. "He's an outstanding choice for the board of directors, and I know he'll do a great job."

South Shore Elder Services has been dedicated to helping seniors, just as Sheriff Bellotti has been for so many years," said Bell. "I'm proud to be part of these great efforts."

The organization provides a wide range of in-home services to ill and frail low-income seniors in 11 communities on the South Shore.

Some programs, such as the successful "Meals on Wheels," are available regardless of income.

"South Shore Elder Services has been dedicated to helping seniors, just as Sheriff Bellotti has been for so many years," said Bell. "I'm proud to be part of these great efforts."

Bell is also a commissioner of the Massachusetts Neighborhood Crime Watch, as well as the Merrymount Neighborhood Association and the Massachusetts Crime Prevention Officers Association.

Medical Center Ahead Of Third Year Goal

David Ryan, vice president of Human Resources at Quincy Medical Center, has announced that the hospital is ahead of its goal in the third year of its five-year plan since affiliating with Boston Medical Center.

He spoke at the 50th anniversary spring luncheon of the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary at the Wollaston Golf Club at which new auxiliary officers were installed.

Ryan recognized the contributions of volunteers who devote many hours to hospital work. Plans are in progress for publication of a monthly volunteer newsletter.

Yolanda Romanelli, auxiliary treasurer, reported that volunteer services totaling 40 hours weekly in the hospital gift shop from March 2002 to May 2003 have resulted in a credit of $28,000 for the hospital.

New officers installed included:

Jack Dayle, president; Caroline Bernstein, first vice president; Clarus McKeon, second vice president; Ilda DiMascio, recording secretary; Lorraine Edwards, corresponding secretary; Yolanda Romanelli, treasurer; Natalie Fossati, assistant treasurer.

Directors installed were Leona Pawlowski, three years; Katherine Mahoney, two years; and Genevieve Fossati, one year.

The second annual Auxiliary Scholarship Award went to John Harizi, a Boston College High School graduate who will attend Boston University to study physics.

The scholarship goes to a student who has volunteered at least 100 hours at the hospital.

Harizi has been a member of the Boy Scouts for several years and also volunteers at the Braintree Food Pantry.

Chairman Caroline Bornstein welcomed the invited guests to the luncheon.

Kathryn Kelly On Bucknell Dean's List

Quincy resident Kathryn M. Kelly was named to the Dean's List at Bucknell University for the spring semester.

A student must earn a grade point average of 3.5 or higher on a scale of 4.0 to receive recognition.

Damage Minimal As Flood Strikes Library

"We lucked out big time," said Director Ann McLaughlin after a leak from a broken air conditioning unit Monday morning sent the staff of the Thomas Crane Public Library into a panic but did little or no damage.

"If it happened over the weekend while there was no one here there would have been thousands of dollars damage. Fortunately, we were able to keep ahead of it by wiping it up on the spot and turning the water off."

It started about 10:30 a.m. Monday when a belt broke in the air conditioner in the attic of the Richardson Building, the old section of the library, and water started spilling through the light fixtures into the reference room.

ANN McLAUGHLIN

The emergency sent the staff of the library into furious action, putting sheets of plastic over books and other valuables and sopping up the water almost as fast as it came through the ceiling.

"Luckily, the water came down into a section where there were no books," said McLaughlin. "There was no permanent damage. The only expense will be repair to the air condition unit."

And the repairs will consist mostly of replacing the broken belt and filter.

"The system is about 10 years old," said McLaughlin, "and it hasn't been maintained as well as it should. The unit is in the attic because the building is a national historic landmark and it had to be out of sight."

McLaughlin said the library got unexpectedly fast service from the air conditioning people, Heat Pump Specialist of Quincy, who sent a man within the hour despite the warm humid day that kept them busy.

The new wing of the library, completed only two years ago, was unaffected by the flood.

Gutro Hosting Cookout For Clay St. Seniors

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and Quincy's Community Policing program is hosting a summer cookout for senior residents at 80 and 91 Clay St., on Aug. 20 from 4:30 to 7 p.m. at Tobin Towers.

"Wollaston Center has seen a few changes during the past year," said Gutro. "This will be a great opportunity to update seniors on area issues, enjoy a nice barbeque and socialize a bit with the residents of Wollaston Manor and Tobin Towers."

Gutro credited Community Police Officer Ralph

Radzevich and Officer Roger White for coming up with the idea.

"When they contacted me with the idea a month ago, I loved it," said Gutro. "If it works out well we might make it an annual tradition."

Mayor's Annual Garden Party Benefits Quincy Tourism

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN, who hosted his second annual Garden Party at the Adams Mansion site with First Lady Tracey Phelan, Congressman William Delahunt and Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park. The party was moved into the Carriage House because of rain and the Boston Landmarks Orchestra's free concert was shifted to the Quincy High School auditorium. The event raised $22,000 for Quincy tourism with money still coming in.

A GINGERBREAD cookie fashioned after the Quincy City Seal was presented to Mayor William Phelan by Beth Veneto Jeannetti (left), owner of Ginger Betty's Bakery and Jacqui Niosi, manager, who created it.

FIRST LADY Tracey Tobin, her sister-in-law Joyce Phelan, Patty Henley, Mayor William Phelan's sister, and his daughter, Brianne, got together outside in the garden before the rains came.

RALPH YOHE, executive director of the South Shore YMCA; James Mullaney, chairman of Quincy 2000; and Barry Welch, director, Quincy Recreation Department, enjoyed the party.

JOANNE DONDERO, owner of Abigail's Crossing gift shop, was quite appropriately dressed for the occasion.

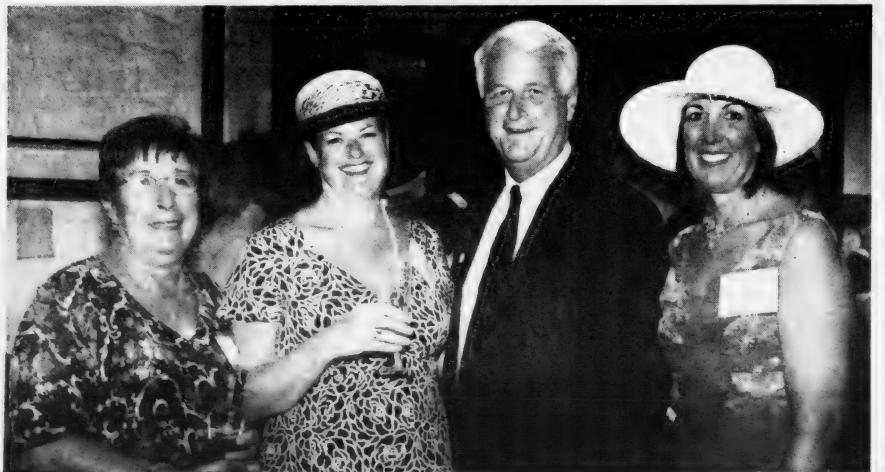

CELESTE MCGLONE and Kristin Priscella, aides to Mayor William Phelan, looked stunning in their party hats.

RETIRED CITY AUDITOR Robert Foy, his wife, Mildred, and Tom Fabrizio, director of the Office of Constituent Services, paused for a moment amid the merriment.

NINA TOBIN, Celeste McGlone, Congressman William Delahunt and Susan Canavan, owner of Aura Salon, had big smiles for the camera.

Special Historic Tours For Babe Ruth Visitors

Quincy Tourism is pulling out all the stops in an effort to make their stay in Quincy a memorable one for those who traveled here for the Babe Ruth World Series.

There's even a Babe Ruth Hotline, 617-376-1392, for those needing information.

Special historic tours of the City of Presidents, called "Ships, Stones and Statesmen," are offered for Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 19 and 20.

The tours will include visits to the Adams Birthplaces, Penn's Hill, the Harbor Express, the Quincy Historical Society, Adams Field, the Adams National Historical Park, City Hall, the Church of the Presidents, Hancock Cemetery, Marina Bay and downtown Quincy.

Tours will leave the Boston Marriott Quincy on the trolley roughly every 20 minutes from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Passengers are also able to board the trolleys at six other stops around the city.

They are: the Boston Marriott Quincy, the Harbor Express (with connection to the Boston Harbor Islands National Park), Adams Field, Marina Bay, the Best Western Adams Inn and the Quincy Historical Society.

All-day tickets are available for $5 per person on the trolleys.

Each tour will be led by a knowledgeable Quincy Tourism Tour Guide and passengers are invited to get off at any of the stops to sightsee, dine or shop and catch the next trolley in the loop.

Passengers should plan to be on the trolley back to the origination point at 4 p.m.

A guided walking tour will be offered on both Aug. 19 and 20 at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., beginning at the Adams Academy with a special stop at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, which will be open especially for the occasion.

These guided tours will take a closer look at the historic building and sites in Downtown Quincy.

For more information, call the Babe Ruth Hotline at 617-376-1392.

Late Diplomas Offered To Non-Grad Korea Vets

Quincy students who left school before graduating to fight for their country in Korea more than 50 years ago can still get their diplomas at this late date.

A graduation ceremony from Quincy or North

Quincy High School for the aging veterans is planned for Nov. 11, the official end of the 50th anniversary of the armistice that ended the Korean War.

Any veteran who left school to fight in that war before receiving a diploma and is interested in participating in the ceremony is invited to notify Quincy Veterans' Services, 24 High School Ave., Quincy, or call 617-376-1192 for more information.

'Welcome To Kindergarten' Program Wins Praise From Stice

School Committee member Linda Stice visited the "Welcome to Kindergarten" class at Beechwood Knoll School and pronounced it a hit with both youngsters and their parents.

"What I saw this summer was terrific," said Stice of the pre-kindergarten summer program that is designed to prepare the kids to enter kindergarten in the fall.

"While we work toward providing full-day kindergarten for children whose parents want that as an option, we have the opportunity to expand what we offer young kids during the summer, when space is not such an issue," said Stice.

"In the fall, I'll meet with the Early Childhood Team to talk about an expansion of 'Welcome to Kindergarten' and other ways we can use our buildings next summer to build more early childhood programs."

Stice extolled the program at Beechwood Knoll.

"With two outstanding teachers, Jane Cobban and Nancy Brennan, children got a wonderful exposure to what kindergarten is all about," she said.

"Some parents were trying to decide if their child is ready for kindergarten; I think that seeing one of our kindergartens is action was helpful to them in their decision making."

Stice visited the classroom three times and also observed the post kindergarten program at Snug Harbor School. That program is for children who are entering the first grade.

South Shore Security Recognized As 'Patriotic Employer'

Anthony Froio, president of South Shore Security, with offices in Quincy, Boston and Worcester, announces the company was recently recognized by the National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve (ESGR) as a "Patriotic Employer."

ESGR sponsors an awards program that recognizes employers for incorporating policies and practices that support their staff's participation in the National Guard and Reserve. According to ESGR, more than half of the men and women serving in the armed forces are members of the National Guard and Reserve, and their performance must meet the same standards as full-time members of the U.S. military.

"South Shore Security stands behind the efforts of all our staff who are National Guard and Reserve members," said Froio. "Maintaining a strong national defense is vitally important. It is an honor to be recognized as an employer that values its employees and their work to defend our freedom."

The Secretary of Defense has said that anytime the United States is conducting a significant military operation, Reserve forces will be called upon to serve alongside their active duty counterparts. South Shore security plays an important role in enabling these individuals to uphold national security interests.

All employer recognition and awards originate from nominations by individual Reserve members. South Shore Security employs a number of National Guard members and Reservists, including Manager of Operations and Internal Audit Unit Investigator Kevin Maloney.

Emilio Favorito Named Quincy 2000 Planning And Development Director

Quincy 2000, the city's non-profit economic development, recently announced the hiring of Emilio Favorito as Planning and Development Director.

The move follows the hiring of the Dean Rizzo as Executive Director.

"The twin hirings provide us with a much broader range and depth of expertise than we have ever had before on our staff," said Executive Board Chairman James Mullaney. "They will allow Quincy 2000 to expand its role in creating and insuring a vibrant future for our community."

Favorito, a 20-year resident of the city, is a graduate of Boston Latin School, Harvard College and Suffolk University Law School.

He has 30 years of experience in land use, zoning, transportation, environmental policy and planning. He also managed extensive MEPA studies, and was a recipient of the Commonwealth Citation for Outstanding Performance in 2001.

Among the positions he has held are Policy Planner/Counsel for the Boston Redevelopment Authority, Airport Development Manager and Deputy Director of Strategic Planning for the Massachusetts Port Authority and Staff Director for the Chairman of the House Committee on Transportation. He was appointed to the Quincy Planning Board by Mayor William Phelan last year.

"I am delighted at Emilio's selection for this position," said Phelan. "I know that he shares many of my visions for the downtown and the city."

Welcome To The Babe Ruth World Series

A Two-Year Wait For Friday Night For Quincy It's Been Practice And More Practice!

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy 14-year-old Babe Ruth team has been preparing the past two seasons for tomorrow (Friday).

That's when thousands of people from across the country — and even as far away as Italy — will arrive at the newly renovated Adams Field in Merrymount Park for the opening day of the 2003 Babe Ruth World Series.

Let's play ball.

Since May, the 15 kids and three coaches have spent countless hours on the diamond, honing their skills in preparation for the most celebrated baseball tournament they'll ever participate in.

"You have to be realistic and realize that Quincy has never won a regional tournament and has never gone to a World Series," said manager Bob Griffin. "On the other hand, there hasn't been a team that has practiced as hard as these kids. So I hope that somehow pays off."

The team has played baseball on a professional level, training six days a week between practices, exhibition games, Quincy Babe Ruth house games and Suburban League 15-Year-Old Division games.

"It's been busy," said left fielder Wendell Cosgrove. "We started in early May and it's been almost every single day. We've been training very hard, with practices and games. It's been tough. It's no easy job. You have to be prepared."

"It's not really even like a summer," said pitcher and first baseman Jared Tucker. "It's all baseball. We've been practicing almost every single day."

"There's been no summer," echoed pitcher and first baseman John Allen. "Baseball every day. I like baseball so it's not bad. But it's been tough sometimes."

"If we didn't have a game, we either worked on hitting one night or did just fielding another night," said catcher Kevin Bossart. "Practicing every night has paid off. We've changed a lot since last year."

Quincy's roster features no standout slugger smashing home runs every at-bat or a stud pitcher pumping gas by every hitter. Realizing that right away, the coaching staff implemented a "small ball" game plan: pitching, defense, speed, contact hitting.

On the mound, Quincy has 10 kids with the ability to throw strikes: starters Allen, Tucker, Jon Pelletier, Paul Doolan and Chris Rooney, and relievers Joe Garland, Mike Garland, Joe Ferris, Lambros Papalambros and Tom Power.

"We have a lot of pitching," Griffin said. "I've been surprised by the development of some kids. That has given us a lot of options. I have 10 arms that I'm not afraid to put in there."

"We looked for kids that could pitch," said coach Wendell Cosgrove. "We don't need kids to go seven innings all the time. That's not necessary if you have kids that can come in and throw one, two, three innings. That means the starters only have to go four or five innings, whatever the case may be."

One of the surprises over the summer has been Allen, who was a member of the North Quincy High School varsity team last spring.

"We definitely have one power pitcher and Johnny Allen is clearly a power pitcher," said coach Bob Bossart, who worked with the pitchers on mechanics twice a week. "In the Suburban League he really controlled the 15 year olds. That was quite exhilarating for us to discover that."

Defensively, Quincy is sound across the board. The kids feel comfortable as they have played in the same spot for two seasons now, rather than bouncing back and forth between positions.

Bossart and James Fitzpatrick are behind the plate. Around the infield are Rooney and Zach Stiffler, third base; Doolan and Fitzpatrick, shortstop; Papalambros and Jay Lewis, second base; and Allen, Tucker and Pelletier, first

For The Coaches: A Three-Way Balancing Act

Manager Bob Griffin and coaches Wendell Cosgrove and Bob Bossart have been together the past two seasons coaching the Quincy 14-year-old baseball team.

Volunteer jobs, their commitment has never been tested more so than this season when they coached baseball six days a week to get their team ready for the 2003 Babe Ruth World Series.

Balancing family, work and baseball has been like a high-wire act.

Griffin, a lawyer in Boston, has two sons, ages 12 and 15.

"I miss a lot of their games," Griffin said. "It's very difficult but it's a commitment you make. When there's a game I have to scoot out of work early, around 4:15, 4:30. Practices are at 5:15. And the days we don't practice, I work until 8 o'clock to catch up for the time I missed. I try to balance it as best I can."

Cosgrove, who has worked for the federal government in Government Center for almost 25 years, has a son, Wendell, on the team.

"It's been an incredible amount of time," he said. "I wouldn't give it up. I would have done it even if my son wasn't selected. But it's been extremely difficult. Since May we might have had 10 days off, if that. So that means

I get to work at 6 a.m. Sometimes you have to leave early, then you have to work at night. It's tough on the family, too.

"It's a once in a lifetime event," he added. "I've watched World Series on TV, and here I am coaching in one. It's worth it. It's a sacrifice of love, to coin a phrase. You wouldn't do it if you didn't have your heart and soul into it."

Bossart, a self-employed photographer, also has a son, Kevin, on the team.

"There's quite a commitment this year," Bossart said. "Balancing work and baseball has made for long days. I can make my own hours. I think being at a 9-to-5 job would certainly impact the ability to give the hours I have been given."

Griffin grew up in Connecticut where he played high school ball at Northwest Catholic High School. He also played American Legion baseball in Connecticut and in Hull. Griffin coached 10 years in Hingham Babe Ruth and has spent the last seven years coaching in Quincy Youth Baseball.

"I enjoy watching the kids learn together as a team, support one another and put on a good performance, whether they win or not," he said. "They really are a great group of kids. Their parents should be proud of them."

Cosgrove, who never played high school baseball, has been involved with Quincy Youth Baseball for eight years, the last seven with Griffin.

"I like to see how happy the kids get as they succeed as baseball players and also as young adults," Cosgrove said. "I try to teach them what to do in negative situations. If they strike out, it's not the end of the world. It's how you react, not what you do. You'll see these kids react to a negative situation in a positive way. That's really gratifying to me."

Bossart was raised in Pennsylvania, two hours from Williamsport, home of the Little League World Series. He played Little League, Babe Ruth and high school varsity baseball there, and also coached a Babe Ruth team there at age 20.

In Quincy, Bossart coached a prep league for 13 year olds for two years and has been coaching in Quincy Youth Baseball the past 10 years.

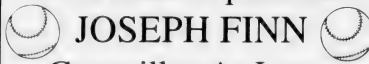

"I think after the World Series is all said and done, we'll demonstrate that we have good baseball players here, we understand how the game is played and we can play it as well as anyone else," he said. "That doesn't mean we're going to win the World Series, but that does mean we'll be able to compete. I'm really hoping that gets translated through their efforts."

Over 80,000 Expected At Babe Ruth World Series

Quincy is serving as the host team, with Weymouth as the co-hosts. The teams will be divided into two divisions, American and National.

The American Division includes: Quincy, Italy, Waterford (Conn.), New England region; Jefferson Parish (La.), Southwest region; Willamette Valley (Ore.), Pacific Northwest region; LaCresecenta (southern Calif.), Pacific Southwest region.

The National Division includes: Weymouth, Plymouth, Eastern Massachusetts state champion; Etowah County (Ala.), Southeast region; Gibbsboro Vorhees (southern N.J.), Middle Atlantic region; Shoreview (Minn.), Midwest Plains region; Youngstown (Ohio), Ohio Valley region.

World Series pool play will be held Friday through next Wednesday. Each team will play four games against teams in their division. Quincy will play Waterford Friday, Italy Saturday, LaCresecenta Sunday and Willamette Valley next Tuesday.

"We're looking forward to the World Series," said Quincy manager Bob Griffin. "We hope to represent the city well. We appreciate all the support everyone has given us."

The single elimination portion of the World Series will begin next Thursday. The third-place team in the National Division will battle the second-place team in the American Division. The winner will meet the first-place team in the National Division next Friday.

And the third-place team in the American Division will play the second-place team in the National Division. The winner will face the first-place team in the American Division next Friday.

The championship game will be held next Saturday.

One of the most anticipated games of the World Series — and expected to draw the biggest crowd — is the Quincy-Italy showdown Saturday night at 8:30.

"I'm hoping that it's going to be a big game, but not too big where we don't have enough room for everyone," Lombardi said. "That has generated a lot of interest inside and outside of the city."

Saturday will be the busiest day of the World Series with a five-game slate scheduled, beginning with the first game at 10 a.m. There will be a 50/50 raffle at all five games, with half of the proceeds going to the Jimmy Fund and the other half to the winner.

For Quincy Team It Has Been Practice, And More Practice!

base. In the outfield are Mike Garland and Cosgrove in left field, Power in center field and Joe Garland and Ferris in right field.

"Defense is clearly one of the strengths of the team," coach Bossart said. "Many of the kids have played together for a while. The middle infielders are comfortable with each other. The outfield is pretty well-established."

Offensively, Quincy is not your 2003 Boston Red Sox lineup. You'll more likely see an RBI groundout than a thunderous moon shot over the fence. Leading hitters are Power, Rooney and Bossart, who have hit in the .300's this summer, and the so-called power hitters are Ferris, Pelletier and Tucker.

"We have kids with great bat control," coach Cosgrove said. "We don't have kids that hit home runs every other pitch. We try to teach them to do other things: go the other way, sacrifice, hit line drives and not pop-ups, advance runners over. That's the kind of ball Bob Griffin has preached the last two years."

"We're kind of short on power hitting," coach Bossart said. "We don't have three or four guys who are going to hit the ball over the fence. That really doesn't translate to a lot because we have a lineup that can hit the ball and put the ball in play. And we have speed. It's a whole different philosophy."

When Quincy steps onto the field tomorrow night at 8:30 against New England representative Waterford (Conn.), the butterflies are sure to be dancing among the players.

"Playing in front of a couple thousand people will be nerve-racking," admitted left fielder Cosgrove. "We just have to block out the crowd, focus on the game and play up to our potential."

The coaching staff has tried to get the kids ready for any tense obstacles they may encounter in this World Series. The kids have played in an older league, played exhibition games against two World Series participants and have been put in difficult game situations.

"They've been put through some challenging game situations," Griffin said. "I have not shied away from putting a kid in there with the bases loaded and a tied score, and see what he can do."

"If we didn't prepare them for pressure situations the last couple of years, then there's no way they would be able to face it now," coach Cosgrove said. "I think they'll be a little nervous, but that's OK. We've told them that once you go between the stripes, it's like any other field. Anything can happen in baseball. It always has."

And we'll find out what happens when Quincy goes to bat beginning tomorrow night. Stay tuned...

Sponsored By Quincy Sons Of Italy Italian Team Coming The Greatest Distance

By CHRIS POISSON

When Quincy Babe Ruth inked a contract to host the 2003 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series back in March 2002, the idea of adding an international team into the mix was brought up.

John Norton, spokesman for the Quincy Sons of Italy and a member of the Babe Ruth World Series board of directors, attended that banquet at Boston Marriott Quincy with Jack Brown Jr.

The following day they met with President John DeCarli, Vice President Jack Brown Sr., charity committee members Harold DiMattio and Sam Masotta, and Board of Trust chairman Dan Grant to discuss the possibility of sponsoring an Italian national team.

And the Sons of Italy was soon granted permission to finance the $15,000 for the cost of the flight from its charity fund.

"That was 16 months ago and it has been full of excitement every since," Norton said. "All of the membership is talking about it. There's ethnic pride for the Italians. It adds international flavor and brings an already exciting World Series to another level."

"Everyone is hyped up about this," DeCarli said. "A lot of the members are volunteering for the nine days at Adams Field."

The Italian team was scheduled to arrive in Boston from Rome Tuesday evening and will depart Sunday, Aug. 24. The players will be staying with seven host families in Quincy, Weymouth and Milton.

Large crowds are expected to attend all of the Italy games, especially Saturday night's showdown with host Quincy. DeCarli is scheduled to throw out the first pitch prior to the 8:30 start.

"We expect a huge crowd for that game," Norton said.

Besides the baseball games at Adams Field, the Italian team's itinerary will be filled with many other activities.

The host families, captained by Jackie Loud, will take the players on a half-hour tour of Fenway Park Tuesday, Aug. 19. Later that day, the Sons of Italy will host a banquet at 6 p.m. at the lodge for the players and host families. Fasano's Catering in Braintree will provide the food.

Also, the players will be taken to several local restaurants to feast on breakfast lunch and dinner, including The Egg and I, Giomatti's, Mannion's and The Red Sauce.

"There is a tremendous amount of excitement about the Italian team's arrival," Loud said. "We've had many offers to entertain the boys, but we can't over commit them. Our responsibility as host families, along with having the players feel welcome and comfortable, is to be sure that they are prepared for baseball, which means eating well, being well rested, and in the right frame of mind. Other than the tour of Fenway Park on the day they don't have a game, we won't schedule anything until we speak to their coaches."

In addition to sponsoring the Italian team, the Sons of Italy has also assisted the Babe Ruth World Series by hosting fund-raisers and donating its lodge to Quincy Babe Ruth for its committee meetings.

Tonight At Boston Marriott Quincy Former Yankee Star Guest Speaker At Banquet

Former New York Yankee Bobby Richardson will serve as guest speaker at the 2003 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series banquet tonight (Thursday) at 7 Boston Marriott Quincy.

Richardson joined the New York Yankees at age 19. Over the next 12 years, he played in more than 1,400 games while the Yankees were winning American League pennants in nine of his first 10 years.

Named the Most Valuable Player in the 1960 World Series (still the only player from a losing team to be so named), Richardson still holds numerous World Series records, including RBIs in a game, RBIs in a series and hits in a series. He also holds the record for having played in 30 consecutive World Series games.

BOBBY RICHARDSON

Richardson finished as runner-up to Mickey Mantle in the voting for the American League MVP in 1962. He was a member of seven American League All-Star teams and won five consecutive Gold Glove Awards.

After retiring from the Yankees at age 31,

Richardson became the baseball coach at the University of South Carolina. In 1975, his team compiled a record of 51-6, losing to Texas in the final game of the College World Series.

After having also coached at Coastal Carolina College and Liberty University, Richardson stepped down as athletic director at Liberty in 1990. He is still active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and served for 10 years as the president of the Baseball Chapel.

Richardson received many honors over the years, including two honorary doctorates, the Order of the Palmetto from his home state of South Carolina and the prestigious Golden Gavel Award from Toastmaster International.

11 Bat Boys, 1 Bat Girl

Eleven local boys and one girl will serve as bat boys for the 12 teams participating in the Babe Ruth World Series.

They are: Robert Ranalli, Italy; Martin Bowes, Willamette Valley; Nick

Couture, Watford; Kevin McDonagh, Jefferson Parish; William Campbell, LaCresecenta; Tyler Costa, Youngstown; Matthias Costa, Shoreview; Victoria

Virtue, Gibbsboro; Vorhees; David Griffin, Quincy; Devin Djerf, Etowah County; Brendan Haines, Weymouth; Mike LeBel, Plymouth.

Morrisette Shuts Out Police, 2-0, For Title

Morrisette recently captured the Quincy Babe Ruth championship with a 2-0 victory over Quincy Police.

It was a season that would never end. Delayed by travel team's districts and state finals, Morrisette finally got to play in the elusive city playoffs. Rain delays and scheduling further prolonged its date with destiny.

In the championship, the baseball gods again saw fit to postpone the game with inclement weather. No sooner had the fans settled in last Monday night at Merrymount Field, the skies opened up and after three-plus innings the showdown had to be continued the following day.

Quincy Babe Ruth

And Morrisette and Police picked up where they left off.

Morrisette's Marc Hutchins and Police's Ray Marchand both pitched brilliantly, carrying shutouts in the sixth inning.

Morrisette scored both of its runs on hits by Anthony Gilbody, Tommy Power, Drew Loud and Steve Connolly. Loud and Power knocked in the runs. Marchand got out of the inning when Matt Breslin lined out to center field with the bases loaded.

Hutchins methodically kept Police off the board and for the most part off the base paths throughout the game.

Police, however, with the season on the line threatened in its last do-or-die at-bat. Marchand singled, Matt McHugh doubled and Chris Rooney walked to load the bases.

With two outs, Hutchins fielded a difficult tap down the third base line, rose and set himself, and fired the ball to Loud to end the game and preserve the title.

Woody McPherson, Josh Brabazon, Breslin, Loud and Hutchins ended their Babe Ruth careers in grand fashion.

Quincy High Girls Soccer Preseason Starts Aug. 21

The Quincy High School Girls Soccer preseason program gets underway Thursday, Aug. 21, from 3 to 6 p.m. when candidates report to Coach Don Martin at Therrien Field, next to the Quincy Elks Lodge on Quarry Street.

The Kick Off Dinner for the girls soccer team and their parents or guardians will be held on Thursday, Aug. 28, from 7 to 10 p.m.

at the Roche Brothers function room (upstairs) on Falls Boulevard in Quincy Point.

For more information, call Coach Martin at 617-328-5655.

Wollaston Wins Senior Babe Ruth East Division

Wollaston recently captured the East Division championship of the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth League.

In the second round of the playoffs, Wollaston defeated Cedar Grove, 2-1, in the best-of-three series.

In Game 3, Gary Dalton came in for injured starter Ryan Conley to pick up a 9-5 series-clinching victory.

Wollaston scored two runs in the first inning with singles by Steve Reardon, Chris Kirschner and Shaun Gibbons.

Wollaston broke the game open with a six-run second inning. After Matt MacNeil, Dan Cosgrove and Jeff Tam singled to load the bases, Conley cleared the bases with a double.

Reardon (2 hits, 2 RBI, 2 runs) followed with an RBI triple and scored on Chris Dolbear's RBI single. Dolbear stole second and scored on Andy McAllister's single.

Second baseman Gibbons, shortstop Reardon and left fielder Dolbear turned in strong defensive games.

In Game 2, Wollaston evened the series with a 7-5 win as Conley and Tam combined to scatter seven hits and strike out seven.

In the third MacNeil tripled to right-center field to lead off the inning. Tam followed with a walk and Reardon stroked a two-run single.

In the fifth Tam tripled to score MacNeil. Reardon (2 hits, 3 RBI) singled and Dolbear doubled and both scored on McAllister's two-run single. Conley pitched well in relief, allowing two hits and striking out four in 2 1/3 innings.

In Game 1, Reardon broke a scoreless tie in the fourth inning with a mammoth two-run homer that also scored MacNeil (single).

Cedar Grove scored a run in the third and three more in the seventh to pull out the 4-2 win.

Dalton pitched good enough to win, allowing seven hits with four strikeouts, but Wollaston's bats were silent.

Wollaston opened the playoffs with a first-round sweep of South Boston, winning 6-2 and 10-6.

In Game 1, Dalton punched out eight, walked two and gave up eight hits for the win.

Down 2-0 in the fourth inning, Mike McLaughlin and Gibbons each singled and scored on Tam's two-run double. In the sixth Dalton helped himself by ripping a two-run double to right that scored Kirschner and Conley.

In the seventh Gibbons plated McAllister and Dolbear (both singled) to finish out the scoring. Reardon, Dalton, McAllister and Gibbons each had a pair of hits.

In Game 2, Wollaston exploded for five runs in the first inning. McAllister and McLaughlin each stroked RBI doubles, MacNeil added an RBI single and Conley crushed a towering two-run triple.

Leading the 13-hit attack were Kirschner, (2 hits, 4 RBI), McAllister (2 doubles), Dalton (2 hits) and Conley (2 hits, 3 RBI). Reardon notched the win by allowing seven hits and fanning three.

Quincy Soccer Preseason Schedule

Quincy High School boys' soccer coach Kevin Orcutt announces the 2003 preseason schedule.

• Physicals: Aug. 14, from 8 a.m. to noon at Quincy High School.

• Condition: Aug. 18-20, from 5:30 to 8 p.m. at Quarry Street field (next to Elks Club).

ONCE AND FOUR ALL

When shopping for a sport utility vehicle, you should know the difference between four-wheel-drive (4WD) and all-wheel-drive (AWD). To begin with, the driver must engage true 4WD systems manually, while AWD is permanently active. If you are a driver who tows a boat on slippery ramps or likes to drive off road, then part-time 4WD is your best choice. While these systems are not designed for use on dry roads or at speeds in excess of 50 m.p.h., their lowest gear range will enable you to get most of the engine's power on the ground. On the other hand, if you rarely venture off-road and simply want better traction in poor weather, AWD is your best bet.

Problems with your AWD or 4WD? Bring your car or SUV to us. Don't hesitate to ask any questions about anything related to your car when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified service technicians available in the area. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We're A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored.

HINT: Regardless of whether you have a vehicle with AWD or 4WD, traction is largely dictated by the grip of your tires on the road.

City Receives $25,000 Grant From State Home Loan Program

Quincy has been awarded $25,000 to help families buy homes through the state's SoftSecond Loan Program.

The funds will be used to help low- and moderate-income first-time homebuyers purchase a new home or condominium. Over 50 cities and towns across the state have just received additional mortgage funding totaling $1.96 million.

"Without the state's investment, owning a home would be far out of reach for many low- and moderate-income families," said Jane Wallis Gumble, director of the state Department of Housing and Community Development, which administers the program in conjunction with the Massachusetts Housing Partnership.

A SoftSecond loan combines a first mortgage from a bank with a state-subsidized second mortgage, meaning a typical first-time homebuyer earning $48,000 can now afford a $200,000 home or condo as opposed to $162,000 home with a conventional mortgage.

For more information contact the Massachusetts Housing Partnership at 1-800-752-7131.

Real Estate Agents Ease Process Of Parting With Years Of Memories

By CHRISTOPHER HARADEN

Although most people think about the financial aspects of real estate, selling a home is an emotional process. Families have memories built into their homes - from marks on the walls noting the children's growth to the kitchen floor tiled by hand.

Maureen McCaffrey, president of Jack Conway & Co.'s Relocation division, said that although it can be difficult to watch other people walk through your home, there are ways to ease the process and help turn your emotional investment into a financial gain.

• Enlist a professional. Let a professional salesperson talk to the customer. Conway, a member of the RELO network of 1,100 independent real estate firms across the country, can market your home to people already living in the community as well as those thousands of miles away who are looking to move to the area soon. The agent can address the selling price, terms, closing date and other details.

• Attendance is not mandatory. You do not have to be present during your home showing. This may be a great time to treat yourself to a movie, shopping, massage or dinner. Let the agent know how to reach you, however, since an offer could be waiting.

• Avoid crowds. Potential buyers will feel like intruders and want to hurry through the home inspection if there are too many people around. Send the kids over to a neighbor's or take them down to the ice cream parlor when the real estate agent shows your home.

• Put Fido outside. Dogs may be man's best friends, but not when showing your house. Keep all pets out of the way and not underfoot.

• Silence is golden. Keep the televisions and radios down - or off. Let the real estate agent and buyers talk freely without having to yell over noise.

• This is not a social call. Be courteous and friendly, but don't try to force conversation with potential buyers. They are there to inspect your house, not to be social. Let the salesperson do the talking.

— Stay in the background. The real estate agent knows what the buyers need and are looking for; the agent can best describe and emphasize the best features of your house. Don't tag along. If there are any questions, the agent will ask you for information.

• Do not apologize for the appearance of your home. If something out of the ordinary should happen to mar the home's appearance, inform the salesperson when you are first called for the showing.

Should any negative comments or objections be offered, let the trained professional salesperson answer them.

• No garage sales. A showing is not the time to try to unload unwanted furniture or furnishings. Offering additional items may complicate a potential sale.

Through its alliance with RELO, Conway Relocation can assist individuals relocating to virtually any community in the United States or abroad with purchases, sales, school reports and comprehensive community data.

For more information, contact Conway Relocation at (800) 283-1030 or visit our World Wide Web site at www.jackconway.com.

FEMA: Now Is The Time To Buy Flood Insurance

Even as communities hit by Hurricane Claudette recover, officials of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security's Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) remind renters and property owners that the most active portion of the 2003 hurricane season is still ahead.

And they urge those in Atlantic and Gulf Coast states to purchase flood insurance policies quickly to obtain financial protection from floodwaters and storm surge.

"Buying flood insurance is one of the most important things people can do to help themselves recover from flood damage," said Michael D. Brown, FEMA Director and Under Secretary of Homeland Security for Emergency Preparedness and Response.

"It's especially critical during hurricane season for residents along our coasts and inland to safeguard their property against the devastating effects of widespread floods."

The National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP), administered by FEMA, makes federally backed flood insurance available in communities that adopt and enforce floodplain management ordinances to reduce future flood losses by regulating new construction. Currently, more than 4.4 million policies representing $640 billion worth of coverage are in force in nearly 20,000 participating communities — most communities in the U.S.

"Flood damage, unlike wind damage, is not covered by homeowner's or business insurance policies," Brown said. "This coverage must be purchased separately and is available only in communities that participate in the NFIP. There's usually a 30-day waiting period before a new flood insurance policy becomes effective, so don't wait until the water is rising."

Brown also had a warning for people who think they can rely on federal disaster assistance in lieu of flood insurance.

"Disaster assistance is only available when the President issues a major disaster declaration," he said. "Even then, it is quite limited — and usually in the form of a loan that must be repaid, with interest. It is hardly a substitute for flood insurance, which also covers losses from small, localized flood events."

"Food insurance may be purchased through most insurance companies and licensed insurance agents," said FEMA's Mitigation Division Director Anthony S. Lowe, who administers the NFIP.

Lowe said the maximum coverage amounts for a single-family home are $250,000 for the structure and $100,000 for its contents.

Renters may also purchase up to $100,000 of coverage for their personal belongings. Maximum coverages for businesses are $500,000 for buildings and $500,000 for contents.

The NFIP is a self-supporting program. All claims and operating expenses are paid from policyholder premiums, not tax dollars. Furthermore, it is estimated that NFIP building standards prevent $1 billion in flood losses annually and reduce the burden of disaster relief costs on all taxpayers.

For more information about flood insurance, property owners should contact their insurance agent or call the NFIP's toll-free information line at 1-800-427-4661. Flood insurance information is also available on FEMA's Web site (www.fema.gov/nfip).

On March 1, 2003, FEMA became part of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. FEMA's continuing mission within the new department is to lead the effort to prepare the nation for all hazards and effectively manage federal response and recovery efforts following any national incident. FEMA also initiates proactive mitigation activities, trains first responders, and manages Citizens Corps, NFIP and the U.S. Fire Administration.

Jack Conway Honors June Top Producers

Jack Conway & Co. recently announced its top producer awards to recognize the agents in each sales office who excelled in listing and selling homes during June.

In the Quincy office, Donna Williams was the top seller and Kathy Ostroff was the top lister for the month.

"We're very proud of these agents and their accomplishments," said Conway President Richard F. Cahill. "They are involved in their communities and give quality service to buyers and sellers across the region."

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 710 associates in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

The Awesome Apple:

Why An Apple A Day Keeps The Doctor Away

(NAPS) — We're all familiar with the aged-old saying, "an apple a day keeps the doctor away." But, do you know why this frequently uttered phrase is true?

According to nutritionists, both apples and apple products are loaded with a variety of nutrients that have been shown to help maintain your health:

- Just one apple contains as much soluble fiber as a piece of whole wheat bread or a half cup of raw broccoli. This type of dietary fiber has been shown to both help maintain healthy cholesterol and blood sugar levels.

- Apples, apple juice and apple sauce are great sources of both the natural sugar, fructose and water — which provide a natural source of energy to keep you moving and hydrated throughout the day.

- At just 80 calories, an apple is a low-calorie, tasty treat for those watching their weight.

- Apples and apple products contain between 3 and 8 percent of the Daily Value for potassium. Consuming 3,500 milligrams of this essential nutrient each day may help reduce high blood pressure.

- Apples are also a good source of the antioxidant aids in guarding the body against damaging free radicals; those nasty compounds that accumulate in our bodies and ultimately wreak havoc on our healthy cells. Apples provide about 10 to 15 percent of the recommended daily intake

(DV) of vitamin C.

On top of all of those fabulous nutrition facts, apples are naturally 100 percent cholesterol, fat and sodium free — which make this fruit a nutritious nibble for those concerned with their heart's health.

As you can see, there are a number of reasons to dive into a jar of apple sauce or grab an apple for an on-the-go treat. However, researchers only recently discovered the true power behind one of America's favorite fruits.

In the September 2002 issue of the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, Dr. Paul Knekt and colleagues reported that eating apples regularly may help reduce the risk of asthma, heart disease, lung cancer, stroke and type 2 diabetes. This is just one of several studies that have linked health benefits to a newly discovered class of compounds that are abundant in both apples and a variety of apple-based foods.

"Nutrition scientists have identified other disease-fighting compounds, besides vitamin C, in apples," said Dr. Jeffrey Blumberg, an associate director and chief of antioxidants research laboratory at the Jean Mayer USDA Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University.

He explains that these compounds, called flavonoids, are powerful antioxidants that are associated with reducing the risk of many diseases associated with aging — such as cancer, heart disease and Alzheimer's.

According to nutrition researchers at Cornell University, almost all of the apple's disease-fighting fury comes from these recently revealed phytonutrients.

"Just one small fresh apple with the peel (approximately 100 grams) provides the total antioxidant activity equal to 1,500 milligrams of vitamin C," said Dr. Rui Hai Liu, assistant professor in the Department of Food Science at Cornell. And, "while it's the peel that's highly concentrated in these phytonutrients, all parts of the apple contribute to its health-protecting benefits," said Lori Stern, R.D., a nutritionist with Mott's, Inc., the nation's leading producer of branded apple juice and sauce.

But, the good news doesn't stop there. If you're a fan of apple sauce and apple juice, research has found that these foods contain many of the same nutrients found in the whole apple. Just remember, every time you pour yourself a glass of refreshing 100 percent apple juice, dive into a jar of apple sauce, or grab a piece of this fantastic fruit, you're not only satisfying your sweet tooth; you're also helping your body defeat disease.

Eye Exams Can Help Prevent Falls By Elderly

As Congress debates adding prescription drug benefits to the Medicare program, elderly health care is front page news.

The leading cause of injury and death for adults over age 65 is falls, which cost billions of dollars every year and which can be prevented. Many falls are caused by poor vision.

According to Lighthouse International, a non-profit health organization, studies show more than one-third of adults aged 65 and older fall, and of those who fall, 20 to 30 percent suffer moderate to severe injuries that reduce mobility and independence.

The non-profit, non-partisan

Alliance for Aging Research says, older people's loss of independence costs $26 billion annually.

"It's a domino effect," said Jeffrey Smyth, the director of resource development at Senior Citizen Services of Metropolitan Atlanta Inc. "The falls lead to health problems which lead to loss of independence. And, of course, this adds to our national health care costs."

A number of factors — from thick-soled shoes to poor balance to over-medication — can cause falls, but the Framingham Eye Study reports falls from vision impairment are responsible for 18 percent of hip fractures by older Americans at a cost of treatment of $2.2 billion each year.

"Regular eye exams can help discover what we call the 'sneaky eye diseases' like glaucoma and age-related macular degeneration or AMD," said Reza Haque, M.D., principal clinical scientist at Novartis Ophthalmics North America. The company is the maker of Visudyne (verteporfin for injection), the only drug treatment for the wet form of AMD. There is no treatment for the dry form of AMD.

The National Eye Institute says diseases that affect the elderly such as AMD will have an increasingly important social and economic impact in the United States. According to the institute, "as the size of the elderly population increases in this country, AMD will become a more prevalent cause of blindness than both diabetic retinopathy and glaucoma combined."

"People with glaucoma don't realize they are gradually losing their peripheral vision," said Haque. "People with AMD gradually lose their central vision. Both diseases cause blindness over time, but the vision loss can be controlled with early treatment."

In addition to eye exams, there are other things senior citizens can do to prevent falls, said Smyth.

- A regular exercise program: Exercise builds strength and improves balance and coordination. Lack of exercise leads to weakness and increases chances of falling.

- A safe home: Remove throw rugs and clutter that can be tripped over from stairs and floors; improve lighting; keep frequently used items in cabinets that can be easily reached; install grab bars in the tub or shower and next to the toilet; use non-slip mats in the bathtub and on shower floors; install handrails and lights on all staircases; wear shoes with good support and thin, non-slip soles. Avoid slippers and thick-soled athletic shoes.

- A medication review by a doctor: Medication or combinations of medications can make seniors drowsy or light-headed, which can lead to a fall. Doctors should be informed of all medications, even over-the-counter products, taken by their elderly patients.

- A regular eye exam: Seniors may be wearing the wrong glasses or be in the early stages of a "sneaky disease" like glaucoma or AMD. Early treatment can prevent vision loss.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A MATTER OF LIFE AND BREATH

If you suffer from bad breath (halitosis), you may be interested to know that new research links it to types of bacteria that dominate the back portion of the top of your tongue. Researchers found species of the same three bacteria prevalent among five people with fresh breath. The most common of these germs found on these peoples' tongues, Streptococcus salivarius, appeared on only one of six people with halitosis, at very low levels. In addition, six species of bacteria were linked to halitosis, and several of those germs were not found on the tongues of people with fresh breath. It is still not clear why some people have colonies of one bacterium or another on their tongues.

Bad breath is likely to be experienced by most adults at least occasionally. Bad breath, either real or imagined, can have a significant impact on a person's social and professional life. We hope that you include gentle brushing of the tongue as part of your daily hygiene. Join us at 44 Greenleaf Street, and enjoy the experience professional and expert dental care can accomplish. We invite you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Let us help you smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Combat bad breath by scraping your tongue and using oral care products containing zinc.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"What is time?" The shadow on the dial, the striking of the clock, the running of the sand-day and night, summer and winter, months, years, centuries—these are but arbitrary and outward signs, the measure of time itself. Time is life of the soul." — Henry Wardsworth Longfellow.

To each of us, it seems that we never have enough time in our days, and yet we are allotted the same number of hours. How we use our hours is our own choice. We came across some thoughts on time that we think are good and we want to share them with you:

Time is money... we have no time to waste it.
Time is power... we have no right to dissipate it.
Time is influence... we have no right to throw it away.
Time is life... we must value it greatly.
Time is God's... He gives it to us for a purpose.
Time is a sacred trust... we must answer for every moment.
Time is wisdom... we have no right to be ignorant.
Time is preparation for eternity... we must redeem it.*

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Host Families Needed For Foreign High School Students

Foreign high school students are scheduled to arrive soon for academic semester program homestays, and the sponsoring organization needs a few more local host families.

According to Pacific Intercultural Exchange (P.I.E.) Executive Director John Doty, students are between the ages of 15 and 18, are English-speaking, have their own spending money, carry accident and health insurance, and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families.

P.I.E. currently has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year, where the students attend local high schools.

For more information, call 1-800-631-1818.

NOTICE OF PETITION FOR PROBATE OF WILL
To all persons interested in the above captioned estate, a petition has been presented praying that a document purporting to be the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed, and that BARBARA C. MCCARTY of WEYMOUTH in the County of NORFOLK and ROBERT A. MASIello JR. of ROSINDALE in the County of SUFFOLK or some other suitable person be appointed executor, named in the will to serve without surety.

IF YOU DESIRE TO OBJECT THERETO, YOU OR YOUR ATTORNEY MUST FILE A WRITTEN APPEARANCE IN SAID COURT AT CANTON ON OR BEFORE TEN O'CLOCK IN THE FORENOON (10:00 AM) ON AUGUST 27, 2003.

In addition, you must file a written affidavit of objections to the petition, stating specific facts and grounds upon which the objection is based, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

WITNESS, HON. DAVID H. KOPELMAN, ESQUIRE, First Justice of said Court at CANTON this day, July 15, 2003.

State Professional Firefighters Honor Sheriff Bellotti

The Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts (PFFM), representing more than 11,000 firefighters across the state, recently honored Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti at their annual Legislators' Night in Dorchester for his ongoing support of Norfolk County fire departments.

According to PFFM President Robert McCarthy, the

"This special recognition award was given for the sheriff's genuine concern for firefighters," said PFFM President Robert McCarthy.

Bellotti said he was greatly honored for being accepted "into this community of outstanding public officials."

"Their work is tantamount to safety needs in every community, and it is my privilege to assist and support them in any way I can."

Bellotti humbly accepted the shimmering, bronzed award that features the top piece of a Pike Pole, which is a spear-like tool with a large hook near the tip that is commonly used by firefighters to take down walls and ceilings when fighting fires.

The one-foot section of pole is mounted on a natural wood base with a plaque dedicating the special award to the sheriff.

Bellotti distributes annual grants to each fire department in Norfolk County. Last year, he awarded a total of $28,000 locally, plus another $2,000 to the State Fire Marshal and $3,000 to PFFM for fire safety education, training and new equipment.

Additionally, Sheriff Bellotti works closely with local fire chiefs in the successful implementation of the sheriff's senior citizen safety initiative known as TRIAD.

TRIAD provides many services to Norfolk County seniors, including the "File of Life" medical information cards that assist firefighters and other emergency personnel in making a quick diagnosis when responding to a residential call.

"This collaboration with local firefighters has been productive beyond measure, and I hope to continue our relationship," Bellotti said.

The objective of the PFFM is to organize all professional firefighters in Massachusetts and encourage the formation of local unions affiliated with the International Association of Fire Fighters and the PFFM.

By William Traynor

On Sept. 2, the city council will vote on one of the most expensive projects in the city's history, a $110 million financial plan for a new Quincy High School and a renovated Central Middle School.

Mayor William Phelan, in a rare appearance before the city council Monday night, unveiled a $110 million financing package which includes the construction of the new high school, renovation of the existing high school, construction of two parking garages, road and water system upgrades and extensive site preparation.

State education officials extended the city's deadline to submit a financing plan for the project. Originally, the deadline was Aug. 29, but Education Secretary David Driscoll agreed to move the date back to Sept. 2.

Phelan stressed the importance of the council's upcoming vote, saying any further delays would jeopardize the city's standing with the state Department of Education (DOE), which has promised 90 percent reimbursement for construction of the new high school and a renovated Central.

According to the mayor's plan, the city would have to foot $30 million of the bill to pay for the high school. Over a 30-year period, including interest on the bond, the city would end up paying approximately $60 million for the high school and Central. The figures are based on current construction costs, according to Hal Goyette, one of the architects of the plan.

Phelan, Bythrow, Keener, Iacobucci In Top Spots Ballot Positions Drawn For Sept. 16 Primary

Mayor William Phelan, Joanne Bythrow, William Keener and Ronald Iacobucci will have the top ballot positions in the four preliminary election contests on Tuesday, Sept. 16.

The ballot lineup for mayor, Ward 1 and Ward 6 city councillor and school committee was determined last Friday at City Hall.

The ballot positions as drawn:

Mayor: William Phelan, Joseph Newton and Harvey Kertzman.

Ward 1 Councillor: Joanne Bythrow, Leo Kelly, Jim Bottary, Joseph Keegan, Sean McArdle.

Ward 6 Councillor: William Keener, Maryann Mahony, Mark Bracken, Alicia Gardner, Brian McNamee.

School Committee: Ronald Iacobucci, John Rodophele, Theresa Lord-Piatelli, Brian Buckley, David McCarthy, Linda Stice, Elaine Dwyer, Stephen Golden.

City Clerk Joseph Shea conducted the drawing, along with assistance from Denis Tardo and William Dracchio, members of the Board of Registrars.

On Sept. 16, voters will nominate two candidates for mayor, two candidates each for the Ward 1 and 6 races, and six candidates for school committee. They will meet in the final election on Nov. 4.

Shea said the city has ordered approximately 50,000 ballots to ensure that every voter is accommodated for the preliminary election.

20 New Police Officers

The city was scheduled to swear in approximately 20 new police officers in a ceremony yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. in the city council chambers.

Thomas Largely, Mayor William Phelan's executive secretary, said many of the new hires will replace retiring police officers.

The list of new recruits was not available at press time.

One of the new recruits, Paul Holland Jr. is on active duty in Japan with the Marine Corps. The city is asking the Legislature to keep his slot open for another year so that he may continue to serve overseas without losing the opportunity to become a police officer.

A team of police officers finished conducting background checks and interviews with the candidates. The list was forwarded to Police Chief William Falco, who made his recommendations to Phelan. The mayor made the final appointments.

"This is an exceptional group of recruits," said Largely. "After an exhaustive and intense screening process, we believe this group will represent the city very well."

Largely said the new recruits will enter the police academy Aug. 25.

City Council Moves To Protect Marine's Right To Become Police Officer

The City Council moved Monday night to secure the rights of Marine Paul Holland Jr. now on active duty in Japan, to become a Quincy policeman.

It passed a home rule petition asking the Legislature to reserve a slot for Holland and hold it open a year longer while he serves his country in the Armed Forces.

"He scored well on his exam but he was unable to appear for an interview," said Council President Daniel Raymondi, who filed the petition.

Holland's mother, Susan, said her 25-year-old son is due out of the Marines in December and will be ready to continue his efforts to become a police officer in January.

Raymondi said Sen. Michael Morrissey is considering filing a statewide bill so that other servicemen in other towns won't be faced with problems similar to Holland.

Council Calls For Repeal Of Senior Home Loss Law

The city council Monday night approved a home rule petition asking for the repeal of a newly-passed law which expands the ability of the state to recover the cost of medical care from the estates of former Medicaid recipients who have died.

Contained in the Massachusetts state budget as section 329, the new law is retroactive and applies to seniors who receive Medicaid benefits. The state Division of Medical Assistance (DMA) estimates the new law would bring in an additional $10 million a year in revenue.

In the past, when a Medicaid recipient died, the state could turn to probate estates when it wanted to recoup the cost of the medical care it had paid for in nursing homes and other long term settings.

That meant if the ownership of assets such as homes was removed by legal means from the probate process, those homes could not be taken to pay Medicaid claims.

The new law allows

DMA to make a claim against any property outside of probate.

"This new law is a tragedy," said Council President Dan Raymondi, who co-sponsored the home rule petition. "All of the professional advice relied upon by seniors has evaporated."

At the very least, the Legislature should repeal the retroactive portion of the law, Raymondi said.

Interests in real and personal property would fall under the jurisdiction of the law, including assets that pass to a survivor, heir, or assignee of the decedent through joint tenancy, tenancy by the entirety, life estate, living trust, right of survivorship, beneficiary designation or other arrangement.

"This particular law goes too far," said Senator Michael Morrissey, who has filed a bill to repeal the law.

New Minimum Manning Ordinance First In State Council Overrides Mayor's Veto Votes For More Firefighters

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

In a historic vote Monday night, the city council voted to adopt minimum-manning standards for the fire department, designating Quincy as the first community in the state to approve such a measure.

Despite opposition from Mayor William Phelan and Chief Paul O'Connell, the city council approved an ordinance that calls for the city to staff each piece of apparatus with one officer and three firefighters. The ordinance adopts a portion of the National Fire Protection Association's (NFPA) standard.

Currently, the fire department staffs one officer and two firefighters for each piece, although O'Connell said some engines do staff one and three periodically.

While estimates vary, the city would have to hire 20 to 40 more firefighters to satisfy the NFPA standard.

The 7-2 vote by the council was a defeat for Phelan, who vetoed the measure in June. The mayor said enacting the ordinance could lead to layoffs and the possibility of closing fire stations.

Phelan and O'Connell said they were concerned with the costs of hiring the additional firefighters. Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick estimates that the proposal could cost approximately $8 million by the time it is fully implemented.

After the override vote, Phelan said he would work with councillors to implement the ordinance.

"I will work with the council to see what we can afford," he said Monday night.

The ordinance could be phased in over a five-year period, so the financial impact would not hit the city all at once, according to William Armenti, president of the Quincy Firefighters Association Local 792. He said the city also has the option of putting off the implementation for one year if fiscal constraints dictate it.

Council President Dan Raymondi said the vote was necessary to ensure the safety of firefighters and the public.

"This is a measure that protects firefighters and provides for the safety of the citizens," said Raymondi. "We need to make sure that the public is protected in the face of all the talk about closing fire stations and the fact that we have taken pieces of equipment out of service. This is a recognition that we need a minimum standard to protect the public."

During the special council meeting, Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, said the council was overstepping its authority by directing the mayor and fire chief on how to utilize city resources. Under the city's charter, the mayor has the sole authority to propose spending on specific items. Some city officials are questioning whether the council has the authority to compel the mayor to spend money on a specific item.

"There has been zero input from the public on this issue," Largey told the council. "You are substituting your judgment for the mayor's, and your judgment for the fire chief's."

Despite Phelan's veto, the council held firm, replicating its June vote on the ordinance. Only Councilor Frank McCauley and Ward 5 Councilor Doug Gutro sided with the mayor. Both maintained that the city should undertake a fire study before adopting the ordinance.

McCauley said the council's move was interfering with collective bargaining issues between the city and the firefighters union.

"As long as this matter is on the table the council should not touch it," he said. "We are doing an end around."

Gutro said he was fearful that adoption of the ordinance could lead to increased taxes or massive layoffs.

"No other community in the state has adopted this ordinance," he said. "Are we going to cut from the schools or close fire stations or take engines out of service?"

But Ward 6 Councilor Joe Newton disagreed, saying, "If you have a fire at your house, do you want three firefighters or four firefighters coming to your house? The lights flashing mean nothing, it's the men on the truck that means everything."

Charlie Sweeney: Someone Special

Charlie Sweeney would probably have said: "Look, don't make a fuss over me." We won't. Well, maybe just a little.

Quincy lost someone special when he died Aug. 13 at age 86, a victim of pancreatic cancer.

He was a true, dedicated public servant with a passion for education and who did all he could to see to it that the youth of Quincy got the best.

Charlie was a member of what Frank McCauley calls the politically prestigious "20 Year Club," one of only 14 individuals in the city's history to serve 20 years or more in elective municipal office.

Charlie served his 20 years on the Quincy school committee where he saw the need for and was a major player in bringing about the Vocational Technical High School, the Lincoln Hancock Community School and major additions to North Quincy High School and the Merry Mount elementary school.

As a member of the farsighted College Courses, Inc., he was a co-founder of Quincy Junior College now Quincy College chartered in 1958. Classes were actually being held for two years earlier in homes.

And at the time of his death — 45 years later — Charlie's deep affection for the college was still there, serving as a member of its Board of Governors.

Education was in his veins. It flowed there as a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and Dartmouth College. And at the University of New Hampshire where he did graduate work and where he met Betty Harriman, a pretty co-ed and his bride to be.

Although his own political career came to a close in 1977, he remained active in the election process as a member of the Board of Voter Registrars.

And was always available to young, first-time candidates seeking political advice.

Charlie was a Purple Heart veteran of World War II, wounded as a rifleman with the 26th Yankee Division in Germany in November, 1944.

He seldom talked about the war but the veteran in him came out when anyone showed disrespect for the flag. They usually got a lecture earful from him.

After the war he was named Chief Contact Officer at the Veterans Administration in Boston. An appropriate appointment as Charlie was a veteran's veteran and a veteran's friend, always.

He was also a fun person to be with. And there were those funny stories you find yourself fondly remembering.

Like those Yankees for example.

Charlie was a loyal Yankee fan and no one could convert him over to the Red Sox. His Yankee roots were too deep.

He was born in New York City and while a youngster, his family lived near Miller Huggins, the legendary manager of the Yankees who took a liking to young Charlie and invited him to games at Yankee Stadium.

Charlie liked to tell about coming home from a game one day and at dinner time happen to say: "Please pass the damn butter."

"Charlie! You know we don't use the word damn in our house," he was scolded by his parents.

"Well," Charlie replied in self-defense. "Babe Ruth uses it. I sat near him in the dugout and he used it all day."

Charlie's love of the Yankees could be seen at the wake at the Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home in East Milton. Beside him was his cherished Yankee baseball cap.

Charlie, incidentally, had a keen appreciation for the theater which may have started with meeting another of his New York neighbors, George M. Cohan.

He was also a rabid fan of the TV program "Jeopardy" and usually had the answers before the contestants did. He was so wrapped up in the show that friends knew better than to call when it was on. He wouldn't answer the phone.

Hitting his 80's didn't stop him for quite awhile from climbing Mount Washington or skiing or taking Betty canoeing on rivers in New Hampshire and Maine.

It also didn't stop him from buying a snappy new candy apple red convertible.

And spinning around town in it or down to Foxwoods where he showed them the art of playing blackjack, spinning home a winner most of the time.

And, of course, there was his famous rose bush. The one he ordered by mail and faithfully watered every day but never got a bud. Until one day, he came home from playing golf and found, to his delight, a couple of blooming beauties.

Proudly, Charlie showed the roses off to a neighbor. The neighbor looked closely and said: "Hey, Charlie, these are artificial roses."

"They can't be," Charlie insisted. "Who ever heard of artificial roses on a real live rose bush?"

Well, Betty did and confessed: She got tired of Charlie complaining about the bush not producing. So, when he went off to play golf, that day, she went off to buy a couple of artificial roses and artistically attached them to the bush so that they looked like the real thing.

Charlie took some ribbing on that one — but in stride. He could give and take in the ribbing department.

Charlie was a staunch Republican but he crossed party lines when he saw a good Democrat on the other side.

One was the late Paul Harold whom he liked as both a person and candidate. Whenever Paul was running in a Democratic primary, Charlie would register as a Democrat to vote for him and then register back as a Republican.

Ironically, Charlie died one day after the first anniversary of Paul's death, also from cancer.

Charlie was a long-time community leader active down through the years in many worthy causes such as the Red Feather and United Fund campaigns to ringing the bell for the Salvation Army.

He was recognized by various organizations but one of his proudest honors was serving with Betty as a Grand Marshal in Quincy's Flag Day parade in June shortly before the diagnosis of his terminal illness. It was his last public appearance.

But he took the most pride in his family, a close knit, loving family: Betty, seven children: Joanne, Allan, Tom, Donald, John, Robert and the late Charles, better known as Rusy. And 13 grandchildren and three great grandchildren. He was devoted to them.

There have been many tributes to Charlie but perhaps one little one said it all. It was a remembrance at the funeral service at Christ Church, Quincy, Saturday, by his son, Donald: "He walked on a path of honesty and never strayed."

To many of Quincy's newest residents Charlie's name is not as familiar as it was to families in his younger years. But what he did those 20 years on the school committee still has a positive effect today for their children.

Charlie was one of those refreshing, unique individuals. What you saw was what you got. It you wanted his opinion, you got it — with no phony baloney.

He was one of those rare nice guys that, unfortunately, don't come along often enough in this world.

He was someone special.

Someone who will be missed.

A lot.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 real photo postcard showing the original Squantum Yacht Club built in 1904 on Wollaston Beach. The youngsters are playing in the mouth of Sachem Brook, which at this time was an open waterway meandering from the Montclair peat bogs through Wollaston to the beach. The space between the yacht clubs was home to Stuart's boatyard for many years before and after the boulevard was built. The Victorian style yacht club was badly damaged by fire in 1930, and it was rebuilt with expanded second floor facilities including private lockers along both sides and a double tiered porch in the back. In 1961 the bay froze and the ice seriously damaged the porch which was removed. Then in 1976 a disastrous fire completely consumed the clubhouse to the top of the pilings. Students of the North Bennett Street School in Boston built the present building in 1978. Sachem Brook now flows through two miles of pipe and large concrete culvert dominates this spot.

READERS FORUM

Against $110 Million New School Building Plan

There are $47 million reasons the (City) Council should be encouraged to vote against the $110 million plan to convert Quincy High School into Central Middle School and to build a new smaller high school.

The 1997 School Building Needs Report estimated the total building needs for Quincy High School, Central Middle School and the Center for Technical Education at $20 million. Based on the report the recommendation was made to replace Central Middle School for building need and overcrowding reasons even though structural, mechanical, electrical, plumbing, asbestos, seismic and HVAC studies have never been done to evaluate Central, and with 53 rooms and 32 classrooms Central is not overcrowded for 600 students.

There is no reason for a smaller high school. Quincy High School sits on a 26-acre campus and with 134 classrooms it has capacity for 3100 students. Much work has been done to separate academic classes from the fumes and noises of the auto body vocational programs. Cole & Goyette Architects who designed the Marshall School, which has had serious overcrowding, site design and air quality problems have designed a new Quincy High School with capacity for 1500 students. Students will lose a baseball field and outdoor basketball courts and the tennis courts will be rebuilt over a parking garage. Biology, chemistry and social studies classes will be above auto body shops and 15 classrooms will not have windows.

One of the reasons the City of Quincy has not received a Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency Certificate is because they could not prove that this plan is the best alternative to renovation. The report the City submitted to MEPA states incorrectly that Central Middle School has a timber frame, that it has no auditorium, no green space or playing fields and that the project will cost $30 million. However, Central is brick and granite with a steel frame superstructure. It has an auditorium and there is a shady pond on campus. Central students use now and will continue to use Veterans Memorial Stadium, which is 1/5 of a mile from Central and one mile from Quincy High School and the project will cost $110 million.

According to DOE 603 CMR 38.06 the maximum allowable 90% grant for 900 high school, 600 vocational and 600 middle school students is $63 million. With the new building plan the City of Quincy will have a $47 million debt and the city will be responsible for the interest payment on the entire $110 million loan.

Our school department is already struggling financially. Quincy High students are on waiting lists every year for carpentry, plumbing, electrical and other vocational classes because of a lack of teachers. Students have to pay to be on sports teams. The school department recently decreased educational programs and according to the accreditation report Quincy High School lacks books and supplies.

Taxpayers and students would be best served if the council voted against this $110 million school building plan. The City of Quincy should repair our large schools for $20 million instead of burdening our city with $47 million debt for a high school campus that is too small and a middle school built in the wrong neighborhood.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Torchlight Parade To Show Support For FDR's NRA

Quincy was preparing for a mammoth torchlight parade in support of the National Recovery Administration (NRA), a set of business codes designed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to help bring the country out of the Depression.

"The first major engagement in the Great War of 1933," it was called by Newell A. Clark, who was styled a "general" in the NRA's penchant for military terms. Anna N. Swenson, a typist at NRA's Quincy office, was called "captain of the keys."

The parade, organized to show that Quincy is solidly behind employers and businessmen who subscribe to the NRA code, is to move down Hancock St. to South Quincy, then back to Merrymount Park for mass meeting.

Parade marshal will be Commander Jerome L. Sullivan of the John A. Boyd Camp, United Spanish War Veterans; and honorary marshal will be Commander Frederick H. Bishop of the Massachusetts GAR.

Meanwhile, Mrs. T. L. Williams of 74 Edwards St., Quincy Point, won $10 first prize in a contest to select a slogan for the Quincy NRA with "NRA Saves USA."

Contest judges were Mayor Charles A. Ross, Miss Annie Prescott of the Quincy Patriot Ledger and William D. Shields of the Quincy Evening News.

Alicia Gardner Would Like Ward 6 Candidates Debate

Alicia Gardner, Ward 6 city council candidate, says she would like to soon debate the other candidates for that council seat.

"I am hopeful that residents will soon have an opportunity to hear from each of the candidates together at a candidate forum or debate," Gardner said.

"The Quantum Community Association, Atlantic Neighborhood Association, as well as the Marina Bay community, have always been extremely active and diligent in promoting communication between residents and their elected officials.

"I look forward to their participation in bringing out the positions of the candidates running for Ward 6 city council."

A lifelong Quincy resident and long-time community activist, Gardner has lived in Ward 6 for 25 years. She is an active member of the Quincy Democratic City Committee and a longtime aide to Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"Residents should have an opportunity to compare and contrast the candidates at a community forum where they can present their concerns and interests directly to each of the candidates," said Gardner.

The other candidates for the open seat are Mark Bracken, William Keener, Maryann Mahony and Brian McNamee.

Morrissey Hails Restoration Of State Funding For Seniors

Sen. Michael Morrissey has hailed the Legislature's restoration of funding for senior citizens in the Fiscal 2004 state budget.

"Everyone is aware of the severe fiscal crisis that the state and municipalities are experiencing," said Morrissey.

"However, this crisis cannot be used as a reason to abandon our most needy citizens, including low-income elders depending on state services."

Morrissey said the Legislature overrode Gov. Romney's veto of funding for three measures important to seniors.

They included the Home Care program, the Congregate Housing program and reduced grants for local Councils on Aging.

The Legislature's action in maintaining the Prescription Advantage program, which provides prescription coverage for more than 80,000 low income seniors, also drew Morrissey's praise.

"Without Prescription Advantage many more seniors would be faced with the choice of paying for medication or paying for food and housing," said Morrissey.

In the final version of the Senate and House budget Prescription Advantage was funded for $96,372,765, restoring it to its original 2003 level.

First Woman Pilot

Aviation Information Center To Remember Harriet Quimby

Harriet Quimby, the "First Lady of the Skies," will be featured at a meeting of the Aviation History Information Center at Beechwood on the Bay Tuesday, Aug. 26, at 6:30 p.m.

"Harriet was a woman decades ahead of her time," said the Center. "She was a remarkable woman with an extraordinary sense of purpose."

"Like a meteor, she flashed through America and Quincy's skies. She blazed across the headlines, making history so quickly that few took note."

"Her story and her pioneering roles deserve our attention and our respect."

Quimby was the first American woman to hold a pilot's license, the first to fly a night flight and the first woman to fly the English Channel.

This was some 15 years before Charles Lindbergh flew across the Atlantic alone and some 25 years before Amelia Earhart was lost while flying the Pacific.

Her career as America's premier woman aviator was tragically cut short at the age of 37 right here in Quincy.

She took off from what was then the Harvard Aviation Field on East Squantum Street for a 27-mile demonstration flight to Boston Light during a 1912 Aeromeet.

HARRIET QUIMBY

As she turned to come back, the plane nosed down and plummeted into Dorchester Bay.

As a horrified crowd watched, first Quimby's passenger, William Willard, manager of the Aeromeet, and then Quimby herself fell from the plane into the harbor.

The plane came to earth and nosed over. It survived the crash undamaged. Quimby and Willard were killed.

All are invited to the Aviation History Information Center to celebrate Harriet Quimby's life and achievements but reservations are necessary.

Reservations can be made by calling 617-471-5712.

John Cain Candidate For Ward 3 City Council Seat

John Cain of 192 South Central Ave., Wollaston, is a candidate for the Ward 3 city council seat.

Cain, 57, currently a teacher in the Boston Public School System, was president for 10 years of his Wollaston-based computer company. He has over 10 years corporate human resources management experience with high technology companies.

Cain, who will be making his third bid for the Ward 3 seat, said:

"The issues I previously campaigned about continue to exist and reinforced by more Ward 3 residents encouraging me to run. People want to be assured by our actions that what they say or feel about an issue will affect their councillor's behavior and decision-making process in representing Ward 3 and Quincy."

Cain said he continues to believe that a more active approach in behalf of Ward 3 and its residents and businesses will generate better results for the neighborhood and business community.

"With a ward that borders most of the other wards, it is important for the Ward 3 city councillor to participate in and with other ward councillors in establishing a clear set of short-term and long-term community and business goals that also involve input of the other councillors," he said.

"As a school teacher, former business owner, husband, parent and homeowner, my interest is more in common with the kind of city council representation that should exist."

Cain is married to the former Kathleen A. O'Hanley, whose family, he noted, has Quincy roots going back more than 100 years.

He and his wife are parents of three fourth generation children: Ian, 21, a senior at Boston College; Erin, 14, a sophomore at Fontbonne Academy; and Liam, 10, a fifth-grader at the Wollaston Elementary School.

Cain holds a master's degree in education, with emphasis on human resources management from Cambridge College.

He is a coach of Sacred Heart girls' and boys' basketball and Quincy Youth Soccer programs.

19th South Quincy Italian Festival Sept. 6

The 19th annual South Quincy Italian Festival will be held Saturday, Sept. 6, from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Malnati's Block, Liberty Street and Brooks Avenue.

The purpose of the festival is to raise money to fund scholarships for college-bound Quincy students while reuniting family and friends with roots in the South Quincy neighborhood. Last year, the festival awarded seven $400 scholarships.

This year's festival will feature a wide variety of food such as Italian sausages, pizza, calzones, fried calimari, friend dough and a variety of other food and beverage.

There will be craft tables with items for sale ranging from T-shirts, collectibles, shark's teeth, video tapes, children's toys and more.

Children's rides and amusements will be available for a nominal charge. A disc jockey will be there from noon to 4 p.m. followed by the "Shy Tuna" from 4 to 8 p.m.

Both the South Quincy Bocce Club and the Morrisette Legion Post will be open to the public.

Admission is free. Rain date is Sunday, Sept. 7.

Quincy 2000 Offering Acclaimed Business Course Sept. 23

Quincy 2000, Quincy's public/private economic development partnership, will host a business training course in partnership with the UMass-Boston Small Business Development Center (SBDC), Executive Director Dean Rizzo said.

Fleet Bank is providing finance trainers, funding and classroom space for the program and Quincy 2000 is providing tuition reimbursement to income eligible Quincy residents.

Prior graduates of the program are today successfully operating businesses in Quincy and elsewhere on the South Shore, Rizzo noted.

Course graduates who develop convincing plans receive priority access to Quincy 2000's loan funds. These funds are available for most business purposes including start-up and working capital, equipment, inventory and leasehold financing.

SBDC's NxLevel program is a business-training course designed to enhance entrepreneurial skills and assist business people in creating a comprehensive business plan. NxLevel was developed to provide instruction targeted to start-up businesses and those in their first three to five years of operation. Developed by the Western Enterprise Network at the University of Colorado, the materials and curriculum are based on feedback from over 24,000 entrepreneurs in 32 states.

"As such, the course is the nation's state-of-the-art business training program," Rizzo said.

The theme of the course is "Learn it tonight; use it tomorrow." NxLevel is designed to help entrepreneurs learn the skills needed to create, develop and strengthen successful business ventures. Unlike other education courses, NxLevel addresses the special needs of the entrepreneur by providing a practical, hands-on, and common sense approach to developing their business.

The course includes prominent business leaders, professionals and lenders as guest speakers, a comprehensive textbook, workbook and resource guide, and free business consulting. Students will learn how to determine the feasibility of their business, how to write a business plan, how to identify opportunities and markets for their business, and how and where to get funding.

DEAN RIZZO

Rizzo said Quincy 2000's Loan Pool is an exceptional source of funding for Quincy businesses based on the participation of its member banks, Abington Savings, Century Bank, Citizens, Colonial Federal, Eastern, Fleet, Rockland Trust, South Shore Savings, South Shore Co-op, Sovereign and The Bank of Canton. Additionally, Mayor William Phelan has set aside Community Development Block Grant funds through Quincy 2000 for micro-enterprises and job creating companies.

The course will begin Sept. 23 and run for 12 Tuesday evenings from 6 to 9 p.m. The full course costs $195. Income-eligible Quincy residents can receive a full tuition refund. The application deadline is Sept. 16 and class size will be limited. Further information and course applications are available from Quincy 2000 by calling 617-847-1454.

KeySpan Gas Expansion Begins On Brook Street

KeySpan Energy Delivery was scheduled to begin work Wednesday on a construction project that is designed to expand distribution of natural gas in the area of 90-128 Brook St., Quincy.

The work is expected to last for two weeks during which time the road will be open to the public but parking will be limited.

KeySpan Energy Delivery will provide a police detail if necessary and a construction foreman, with proper identification, will be on site to address parking needs.

The work may require some excavation near the foundation of homes and businesses. The foreman on site will notify customers of any interruption of service.

There may be a lag between temporary and permanent restoration of the street and sidewalk, depending on the weather and ground conditions.

Any questions about the project should be directed to Lyne M. Holton, community relations coordinator, at 781-466-5100.

Sara Scolnick Serves On Hebrew Center Women's Health Day Committee

Sara Scolnick of North Quincy North recently served on the planning committee for Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged's second annual Women's Health Day Golf, Tennis & Yoga Clinic.

Scolnick is on the executive committee of the Women's Auxiliary at the Center.

Sponsored by the Center's Women's Auxiliary, the day's event - held recently at the Charter Oak Country Club in Hudson - highlighted women's health issues, featuring a scramble shotgun golf tournament, tennis round robin, and yoga clinic.

Chef Jody Adams of RIALTO was the featured luncheon speaker.

Proceeds from the event

August Moon Festival In North Quincy Sunday

The 16th annual Quincy August Moon Festival will take place, rain or shine, Sunday, Aug. 24 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the parking area of the North Quincy MBTA Station.

Admission is free.

Since its inception in 1986, the festival, now sponsored by Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI), has become one of the premier Asian cultural celebrations on the South Shore.

The north end of the parking area will be transformed into a carnival setting, with an archway of balloons adorning the entrance and a 300-foot long kite with a string of American flags flying.

The program will consist of performances by the vocal group, the Variasians, a dulcimer ensemble, a lion dance and a martial arts demonstration by the Wah Lun Troupe and the Tae Kwon Do School.

There will be traditional Chinese songs, Filipino dance and the Quincy Public School band will also perform. Kiss 108 will provide music and there will be a talent show.

Throughout the day prizes will be raffled off including Moon Cakes donated by Kam Man Foods. There will also be an onsite voter registration at the QARI table, co-sponsored by the office of State Secretary William Galvin.

Chinese food will be catered by the Mandarin King Restaurant and the Punjab Cafe will provide Indian cuisine. There will be ice cream and watermelon-eating contests.

There will be arts and crafts for the kids along with two moon bouncers. Youngsters can win prizes for the ring toss, golf putting and basketball contests in a family friendly environment.

More than 40 companies and city agencies are sponsoring the festivities, including the Fleet Bank, the Patriot Ledger, Comcast, Colonial Federal Savings Bank, Peter Skoler DMD, South Shore Savings Bank, Citizens Bank, eXcel Sign & Design, Sovereign Bank, Joan Beal Real Estate, State Street Bank, South Cove Community Health Center and Kam Man Foods.

The first August Moon Festival in Quincy was organized in 1986 by the Asian American Committee, chaired by the Rev. Adolph Wismar of the Wollaston Lutheran Church to continue an important Asian family tradition.

For more information, call Quincy Asian Resources at 617-472-2200.

FILIPINO DANCERS will return for this year's August Moon Festival Sunday, Aug. 24, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the North Quincy MBTA parking lot.

Newton Fundraiser Reception On Aug. 27

A reception for mayoral candidate Joseph Newton will be held Wednesday, Aug. 27.

The event, hosted by former city clerk, now Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, will be at 7 p.m. at the Common Market, 97 Willard St., West Quincy.

Suggested donation is $25.

Low Mortgage Rates Boost Spring Housing Market

Despite a weak labor market and the late start to the spring-selling season, sales of detached single-family homes continued at a healthy pace across much of Massachusetts in the second quarter of 2003 and condominium sales soared to an all-time record high for a single quarter this spring, according to a report issued today by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors. (MAR)

Home prices, while still rising, also began to moderate in the second quarter. The overall appreciation in the housing market is shifting from a seller's market to one that is more balanced, according to the report.

In the second quarter of 2003, the MAR report found that sales of detached single-family homes rose from 4,325 units closed in the second quarter of 2002 to 4,606 in the comparable quarter this year. Meanwhile, detached single-family home sales declined a modest 4.9 percent, from 13,295 units sold in the second quarter last year to 12,650 from April-June 2003.

Condo Sales Set New Record In Massachusetts

In aggregate, the 17,256 detached homes and condos sold in the second quarter of 2003 is the fourth highest residential sales total for a spring quarter in state history, topped only by second quarter sales in 1998, 1999, and 2002.

Low mortgage rates and a more plentiful supply of homes for sale are two key factors that led to improved buying conditions this spring, noted MAR President Peter Casey, of Prudential Wilnot Whitney Real Estate in Weston.

"Compared to last year, today's market is much more favorable to buyers," said Casey. "Today's low interest rate environment has resulted in increased purchasing power for many households, and the slightly slower sales pace of the current market has led to improved inventory levels and a greater selection of homes from which to choose."

Regionally, in the second quarter, sales of condominiums increased steadily in four regions of the state over year-ago levels, improving by 3.9 percent on the South Shore, 8.4 percent in the Northeast region, 9.6 percent in greater Boston, and 24.3 percent in western Massachusetts. Elsewhere, sales were flat in the Central region (Worcester County and fell modestly in southeastern

Mass. and on Cape Cod and the islands. In the detached single-family home market, sales activity rose 2.1 percent in central Massachusetts and 0.6 percent in the South Shore region, but declined in the remaining regions, from 1.2 percent in the Northeast region to 14.9 percent on the Cape and islands compared to the second quarter of 2002.

Over the first half of the year, home buying activity is up 3.8 percent in the Bay State's condo market vs. year-ago levels, but detached single-family home sales are off 7.2 percent from last year's sales pace in the first six months of 2002.

As further evidence of the condo market's popularity with Bay State home buyers, the MAR data show that nearly 27 percent or slightly more than one in every four single-family homes sold in Massachusetts in the first six months of 2003 was a condominium. At no other time has the percentage of condo sales vs. single-family homes sales ever been greater.

With inventory levels rebounding and supply and demand becoming more balanced, the MAR report found that home prices in Massachusetts are still rising, but the rate of appreciation is slowing. The statewide average selling price for detached single-family homes rose to $375,196 in the second quarter of 2003, a 6.6 percent increase over the 2002 second quarter price of $351,845, but the smallest annual quarter-to-quarter gain in selling price since the fourth quarter of 2001 when the average price rose 5.9 percent. Regionally, selling prices increased in all areas of the state in the spring quarter, with 3-5 percent appreciation in the greater Boston and West regions, 7 percent appreciation in the Northeast and South Shore regions, and more significant double-digit price gains in the Cape Cod and islands, Central and Southeast regions.

In the condominium market, the statewide average selling price increased 9.6 percent in the second quarter, from an average price of $247,287 in the three months from April-June 2002 to $270,987 in the comparable period this year. Every region of the state observed double-digit annual price appreciation in the spring quarter, except greater Boston and western Massachusetts where the average selling price for condominiums rose a more modest 4 percent and 7.5 percent respectively.

Hiring A Home Improvement Contractor

Your home is one of the biggest investments you will make. Improving and remodeling your home can have a large, positive impact on this investment. When hiring a contractor to do a job, use the Better Business Bureau, Inc., as a research tool.

Before you even attempt to find a contractor, have your own detailed plan. Be able to describe exactly what you want. Changes during the remodeling/improvement process are going to significantly affect both the total cost and time spent on the project.

If you decide to change a style of door or flooring or add a window or even move a wall, the contractor may have to change the cost or completion date. Keep this in mind while planning.

Once you establish what you want, select various contractors and have them inspect the site. Get estimates in writing from all of them, or at least more than one. Keep in mind the lowest bid may not be the best. A contractor should use high quality laborers and materials. The lower bid may be lower quality. If a price varies from one contractor to another, ask them why this is. Quality may be the reason.

One of the best ways to assess a contractor is to see their work for yourself. Ask them to provide you with the names and contact information of former clients. If they refuse, this could be a dead giveaway they are not reputable. Talk to former clients and see how satisfied they are and if they would recommend the contractor.

The contractor you choose should have more than just good recommendations from former clients. Check out the company by contacting the BBB for information and Reliability Reports on the contractor at www.bosbbb.org. Though the BBB cannot recommend a business to you, you can get the information on how other customers feel about the contractor.

A contractor with an unsatisfactory record with the BBB may automatically get scratched off your list. If a contractor is in good standing with the BBB, and they are also a member, then they abide by the ethical BBB Membership Standards.

A good contractor will have an appropriate license if required by the state, a permanent business location, and will use quality laborers and materials. They will also obtain the required permits and be properly insured. If they are not properly insured and someone is hurt on the job or on the site, you are responsible. It is extremely important to have a statement of the insurance in the contract.

Another good sign is if the contractor can be easily reached. If you only have a name or address, make sure to get a cell phone or pager number.

Correction

Because of inaccurate information received by The Quincy Sun, the article about St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church in the Aug. 7 issue was incorrect.

Contrary to the article, St. Catherine's parishesioners will not merge with a Cohasset congregation when they move from Quincy to Braintree Common.

The Aug. 7 article focused on the church building being for sale which is accurate.

Renovate Your Kitchen and Bathroom In Style Match Game – Color Matching Grout To Ceramic Tile, Stone

(ARA) Your home is a reflection of who you are. Whether you choose to decorate with bold, bright colors such as reds and oranges, or with natural more muted tones like tans and browns, your home is a place of self-expression.

That's especially true when it comes to choosing flooring. With ceramic tile or stone, there are so many color and design choices for you to decide from that the possibilities are endless. The best approach is to choose a color that best suits your personality.

Ceramic tile and stone are popular with homeowners because they are moisture resistant, making them a natural fit for baths. They're also perfect for kitchens, since they won't scratch, dent, cut or burn. In addition to flooring, ceramic tile and stone are also perfect for countertops and walls.

Overall, ceramic tile and stone bring quality, value and beauty to your home. So, after you've specified the perfect tile or stone for your home, it is important to choose premium installation materials that will accentuate and complete the design you are trying to achieve.

"Selecting the right color grout or caulk is critical to achieving the best look for your tile and stone surface," explained Sandra Eich, marketing manager, TEC., Palatine, Ill., experts in the tile and stone industry.

"When considering installation products, it is important to consider color choice to find a color that best suits your needs, color accuracy to best match your tile or stone, and ease of use for simple installation and minimal clean-up."

With its exclusive AccuColor® Grout colors, TEC delivers all of this, and more. AccuColor Grout colors provide unmatched color accuracy, color consistency and ease of use with colors that accent the latest trends in tile and stone. Offering 32 different color selections, you are able to choose from and array of colors complementing the latest consumer fashion trends in tile and stone.

Some of the colors available with AccuColor Grouts include the following: mist, reminiscent of misty, coastal days; clay, a burnt orange similar to aged terracotta; starry night, a deep, dark navy blue; and more. AccuColor Grout colors are also lab formulated to precise digitally determined color specifications using advanced "color metrics" technology.

Each batch of grout is assured to be the right color using a color computer called a "spectrophotometer," providing superior color accuracy that matches your tile and stone. The TEC AccuColor Grouts colors are available at most home improvement centers, as well as ceramic tile and stone distributors.

To find the nearest outlet, log onto www.tecspecialty.com and search by ZIP or postal code. Courtesy of ARA Content EDITOR'S NOTE: Founded in 1957, TEC is a leading manufacturer of high-quality installation and maintenance systems, including surface preparation products, ceramic tile adhesives, mortars, grouts, exterior insulation finish systems (EIFS), epoxy terrazzo and care and maintenance products especially formulated for premium tile and stone.

Headquartered in Palatine, Ill., TEC also maintains facilities in La Mirada, Calif.; Edison, N.J.; and Gainesville, Fla. TEC is a wholly owned subsidiary of H.B. Fuller company (NYSE: FUL), a worldwide manufacturer and marketer of adhesives sealants, coatings, paints and other specialty chemical products with headquarters St. Paul, Minn.

Knowledge Is Key To Controlling Moisture, Mold

(NAPS) – Ask your architect, builder, contractor or the remodeler working on your new family room about the biggest challenge they are facing these days. Chances are, the answer will have something to do with moisture and mold.

Virtually all construction materials, from carpeting and fabric to glass fiber insulation, lumber and drywall, can become breeding grounds for the growth of mold. The key element for such growth is the presence of moisture, which can result from a number of sources during a building's construction and even after it's occupied. For example, the use of wet building materials, plumbing system leaks, condensation from air conditioning systems and even minor job site flooding can leave remnants of moisture in a specific area.

Because moisture control has become such a critical issue for the construction industry during the past several years, architects, builders, contractors and remodelers are using every tool in their arsenals to minimize such problems. The most effective and economical strategy is to protect building materials and equipment from exposure to moisture during transportation, storage, construction and after completion of the building envelope.

As the construction industry and health experts grapple with the breadth and depth of the issue, as well as the potential health concerns it can pose, building material manufacturers are responding with new products that minimize moisture and mold.

United States Gypsum Company, which invented drywall, has introduced a new line of wallboard called SHEETROCK® Brand HUMITEK Gypsum Panels. The panels are moisture- and mold- resistant from front to back, and are designed specifically for use in interior areas susceptible to moist conditions.

Unlike other types of moisture- and mold-resistant gypsum panels, these panels are installed and finished in a traditional manner – without the need for additional steps that require extra labor.

Recognizing and addressing moisture in the building envelope is nothing new to U.S. Gypsum. In 1983, the company introduced DUROCK Brand Cement Board for use in wet environments, and in 2000 it developed FIBEROCK Brand Underlayment and sheathing products with AQUA-TOUGH water-resistant technology.

After carefully studying the moisture and mold issue, U.S. Gypsum has developed a number of informative resources on the subject and created a special section on its Web site (www.usg.com) devoted to moisture and mold. Homeowners can also call (800) USG-4YOU for more information.

Grumpy White's Expansion Plans Approved By Board

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Grumpy White's Restaurant on Sea Street is heading for a makeover with the addition of 630 more square feet including the enlargement of the dining area from 110 to 182 seats.

Approved by the License Board at Tuesday's meeting, members heard about the renovation from Atty. Carl Johnson.

Johnson said with less demand for alcohol, owner Robert White has opt to reduce the size of the bar and increase the dining area to "better serve the needs of the patrons."

Renovations will be in three phases, and according to White, during the first phase business will continue, but later on it will have to close for a brief time.

The restaurant will also have two new handicapped restrooms.

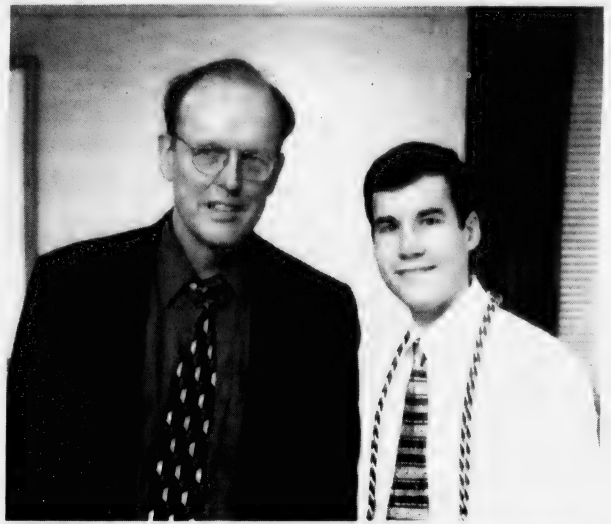

Some of the refurbishing will include the relocation of a dumpster the removal of the front entrance and the addition of a code compliance handicap entrance on the side of the building.

Also the addition of a 1,190 area which will house the kitchen and walk-in freezer.

Johnson said aesthetic improvements will include more green space in the front of the building with new landscaping.

The request will now go to the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission.

SEAN GLENNON (right) of Quincy, recently inducted into Suffolk University's chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, the national political science honor society, receives congratulations from Dr. John Berg, the chapter sponsor. It's the only honor society for students of government in the United States.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

- Granted the request of Marriott Hotel Services, Inc. doing business as Boston Marriott Quincy, One Marriott Drive for new officers and directors. Andrew Upton said the changes will occur in 18 other Marriott Hotels.

- Granted the change of managers from Stephen Fowles to William Corcoran pending fire evacuation plans and new landscaping.

- Granted a three day all alcoholic and food license for the Grecian Festival at St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox church, 157 Beale St. on Sept. 5, 6 & 7. Demetrios Rozantis is chairman.

- Granted a one day permit for the annual August Moon Festival to be held Sunday, Aug. 24 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the North Quincy 'T' Station. Featured will be an ice cream and watermelon eating contest.

- Granted a one day permit for the 11th annual U.S. Marshal William F. Degan Road Race, Sunday, Sept. 14, featuring a walk around the stadium for children ages three to eight years of age.

- Granted a one day beer and wine license to St. Joseph's Church, 550 Washington St. for the awards banquet for the Archdiocesan Union of the Holy Name Societies, Saturday, Oct. 18, from 5 to 10 p.m.

- Granted a one day permit the annual "Dog Jam" a the Stop & Shop Company in Quincy Center Sept. 12 from noon to 2 p.m. to benefit the Quincy Crisis Center.

- Granted a request of Beth Veneto doing business as Ginger Betty's Bakery for a common victualer license and permission to relocate from 10 Tyler St., in North Quincy to 211-217 Samoset Ave. (formerly Samoset Pharmacy)

- Granted four video machines to Ronald Pang, of Kam Man Center, 219 Quincy Ave, with the expectation of more machines after the board's review of an earlier ordinance back in 1981 with the limitation of four machines. Pang was asking for 12 machines.

- Granted a request from Linda F. Mooney doing business as North Quincy Billiards, 421A Hancock St. for a common victualer license and billiards license.

- Heard complaints from John Stanton owner of the Fuji Restaurant managed by Jimmy Laing about deplorable odors from trash and also cars parked near a fire hydrant. Health Commissioner Drew Scheele told the board and Stanton that Laing agreed with the complaint and promised to change barrels of trash from inside the building to outside to be picked up.

World Series 'Wonderful Experience' For Quincy

By CHRIS POISSON

Opening day ceremonies. Three games under the bright lights, in front of gigantic crowds at beautifully renovated Adams Field. Competing against the best players of its age group, home and abroad. TV, radio and print media.

Although it went winless in three games over the weekend, host Quincy soaked up the atmosphere of the Babe Ruth World Series like a sunbather on a steamy August afternoon.

"This weekend has been a wonderful experience for them," said manager Bob Griffin Sunday night. "I told them they should take away the positives, remember the big hits. This will only help them later in their baseball careers. I couldn't be more prouder of the kids."

Quincy, which closed out pool play Tuesday night against Willamette Valley, Ore., opened the World Series last Friday with a 9-0 setback to Waterford, Conn., dropped a 9-6 decision to Team Italia last Saturday and suffered a 7-6 heartbreaker to La Crescenta, Calif., Sunday.

Still, Quincy showed the more the 13,000 fans who attended its three games that it was a host team not to take too lightly.

"I thought we were in the games," said starting catcher Kevin Bossart. "We competed on an equal level. If we played these games again, I guarantee we'd do better."

Despite some dire conditions, Sunday's contest against La Crescenta, representing the Pacific Southwest region, turned out to be the local nine's best — and most hair-raising — game of the three.

Playing for the third straight night and coming off a game against Italy which ended past 12:30 in the morning, Quincy may have been sluggish at the beginning as it committed five errors to fall behind 4-0 after three innings.

In the bottom of the fourth Quincy recorded its first 1-2-3 inning of the World Series when center fielder Tom Power made a sensational diving catch on a sinking line drive to take a hit away from Chad Nacapoy.

Galvanized by the defensive play, the team huddled before its at-bat in the fifth inning.

"I called the kids together before the inning and said it was a do-or-die inning," Griffin said. "I told them to be more patient at the plate."

The kids took Griffin's advice, sending 10 batters to the plate and pushing across six runs for a two-run advantage — its first lead of the World Series.

After Paul Doolan walked with one out, Wendell Cosgrove pinch hit for Mike Garland and also drew a walk. Joe Garland replaced him as a pinch-runner.

Zach Stiffler hit a ground ball to the third baseman, who threw wildly to second allowing Doolan to score the first run. After James Fitzpatrick pinch ran for Stiffler, Jay Lewis grounded back to the pitcher, who also threw wildly to second allowing Joe Garland to score.

Kameron Krise relieved starter Cody Klein and Power greeted him with a single through the shortstop hole to load the bases. Chris Rooney hit a slow roller to shortstop, which took a bad hop and let Fitzpatrick score the third run.

With the bases still plugged, Bossart blasted a fastball over the right fielder's head for a 350-foot triple that gave his team new life with a 6-4 lead.

"It felt great coming off the bat," Bossart said. "Every sound, the crack of the bat, the crowd screaming. Oh man, it was exciting."

Unfortunately, the excitement didn't last long. La Crescenta reached pitcher John Allen, who relieved starter Doolan, for three runs on three hits and an error to regain the upper-hand, 7-6.

Leadoff hitter Chris Johnson stroked a single to center field that plated two runs. With one out Joseph DePinto singled to right to reload the bases.

And then came an abso

Single-Elimination Play Underway, Championship Game Saturday

The single-elimination portion of the Babe Ruth World Series at Adams Field gets underway today (Thursday) and will conclude Saturday with the championship game.

Each of the 12 participating teams in the World Series are guaranteed to play at least four games in the pool play format. After pool play, the first-, second- and third-place teams in the American and National divisions advance to the single-elimination competition.

Teams will be seeded according to the position they finished in pool play. Also, pitching limitations reset at the beginning of single-elimination competition.

Pool play standings are determined as follows:

- 1) Won-loss record;
- 2) If still tied: Results of head-to-head competition;
- 3) If still tied: Fewest runs given up;
- 4) If still tied: Run differential with a maximum of 10 per game. (If, in the event of a three-way tie, the three-way tie is broken before or upon completing the fourth criteria. If a two-way tie still remains, the two teams remaining tied will revert at that time back to the second criteria to break the two-way tie.

schedule:

Thursday, Aug. 21

Game A: 3rd place National vs. 2nd place American, 5:30 p.m.

Game B: 3rd place American vs. 2nd place National, 8 p.m.

Friday, Aug. 22

Game C: Winner of Game A vs. 1st place National, 5:30 p.m.

Game D: Winner of Game B vs. 1st place American, 8 p.m.

Saturday, Aug. 23

World Series championship game, 11 a.m.

SLOGGING IT OUT

Vehicle owners are constantly being advised to have their engine oil changed at regular and frequent intervals so that they may avoid costly engine repairs down the road. Considering the other extreme, what happens if you blatantly disregard this oil-change recommendation? It is possible for the oil inside the engine to thicken into a sticky gel, commonly known as sludge. When motor engine oil is not changed according to the vehicle manufacturer's recommended intervals, this gummy gel builds up around the moving parts of the engine to cause damage. This error is compounded by driving at short, stop-and-go cycles and at cold temperatures, which conspire to create water and fuel condensation that add to sludge buildup.

Maintaining your car routinely can help prevent later problems. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is very proud of our ASE Certified technicians and of the equipment they have on hand to properly service every system of your car. Whether your car needs an oil change, a simple tune-up, or major repairs, see us first. If you are in the market for superior service that you can count on, then visit us today at 258 Quincy Ave., E. lute freaky play. Chris Jacob-Vangas launched a ball to right field that bounced out off the glove of Joe Ferris and into Power's, who ran all the way from center field to back up the play. The go-ahead run scored, but it wasn't a beerhouse.

"Yeah, that's a play we practice all the time," Griffin joked. "I haven't seen a center fielder in the World Series that compares to Power. Obviously, I'm biased. Because of his speed, our right fielders get spoiled."

Left-hander Jared Tucker tossed a perfect sixth inning to keep the game close and give Quincy a shot for victory in its last at-bat.

Tucker, who had no walks in 22 games before the World Series, drew a four-pitch free pass to lead off the seventh inning and reached third base with no outs on Nacapoy's errant pickoff throw to first.

With Quincy's fans stomping on the third-base side bleachers, Nacapoy composed himself by striking out the side, mixed in with a one-out walk to Tucker, to seal the victory.

"We're really down about it right after the game," Fitzpatrick said. "That's two tough losses right in a row."

"Of course it was disappointing," Griffin said about the last inning. "I told the kids that they're going to have other disappointments in life, too. It was just a thrilling game. Both sides hung in there and really wanted the victory."

Saturday vs. Team Italia

Expected to draw the biggest attendance, the showcase game was delayed about an hour and half by thunderstorms. The teams finally stepped onto the field around 9:30 p.m. to 2,600 fans.

Italy jumped all Quincy in the first inning, banging out five hits for five runs and chasing starter Jon Pelletier from the game with two outs. Joe Garland came on in relief and induced a ground ball with the bases loaded to stop the bleeding.

QUINCY AND ITALY players shake hands following Italy's 9-6 win. Because of thunderstorms, the Saturday night game finished around 12:30 a.m. Sunday.

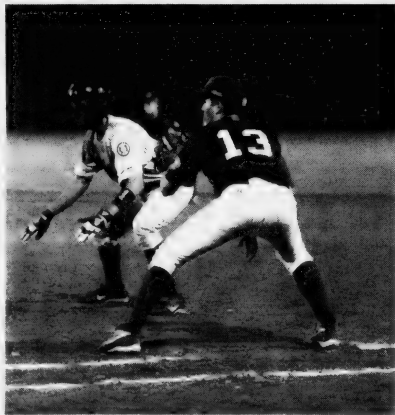

"I'm very happy with the way we played in our first game," said Team Italia pitcher Matt Pizziconi. "I think we surprised many people in the stands."

Quincy got a run back in the bottom half on Joe Garland's bloop single to right that scored Bossart (double). Quincy cut the deficit to 5-3 in the second when Chris Rooney beat out an infield hit that allowed Fitzpatrick to score and, with the bases loaded, Bossart was hit by a pitch, forcing home Allen.

Italy touched Garland for a pair of runs in the third but Quincy answered with two runs in the bottom half. Power lined a single that knocked home Ferris (double) and Rooney walked with the bases loaded to score Cosgrove. Quincy received help when Italy misplayed a pop-up in foul territory and dropped third strikes twice to allow runners to reach base.

"If we make those three routine plays, it's not that close of a game," said Team Italia manager Marco Mazzieri.

Italy made it 8-5 in the fourth with a pair of hits. Quincy had a runner on third with no outs in the bottom half but could not get him home. And it also left the bases loaded with two outs in the sixth. For the game, it left 16 men in scoring position. "We left 16 out of a possible 21 on base," Griffin said. "It was just one of those games where we couldn't get over the hump. A couple of more hits and it changes the whole game."

Tucker pitched the final three innings for Quincy and performed well, allowing just one run in the sixth inning.

Quincy tacked on a run in the seventh when Ferris crushed a ball over the center fielder's head for a triple and scored on Doolan's single.

"I think Italy has very good athletes," Griffin said. "They hit the ball well and they're fundamentally sound. Their pitches had good pick-off moves and they were able to get key outs when they had to. That shows how talented they are."

"It was our first game as a team," Mazzieri said. "They really surprised me. We put this team together at the last minute. A month ago I had tryouts and picked 15 kids that I had never seen play before."

"The kids are enjoying themselves very much," he added. "The families and the people of Quincy are enjoying these kids, too. I can tell by the way they are welcomed at the field every day."

Friday vs. Waterford, CT
The opening day's nightcap attracted more than 7,000 fans to see how Quincy would fare against the New England regional champion.

Waterford's Rob Bono and Quincy's Allen engaged in a pitcher's duel for four innings.

Allen overcame control problems (six walks), allowing just one run on two hits in the third inning, to keep his team in contention. However, in the fifth, Allen tired as he gave up four runs on four hits. He left with two outs in the inning after throwing 97 pitches.

"We stayed close with Waterford until Allen tired," Griffin said. "It slipped away at the end. I think stage fright had something to do with that."

Waterford added four more runs on four hits against Tucker in the sixth inning for the commanding 9-0 lead. Mike Garland pitched well in relief, yielding a hit and walk in the final 1 2/3 innings. Power, Rooney and Pelletier the only hits for Quincy.

Red Sox Walker A Hit With World Series Fans

By CHRIS POISSON

Boston Red Sox second baseman Todd Walker rode into Adams Field Monday afternoon like a knight on a white horse...err...in a white hummer.

Walker was a hit as he joined the Babe Ruth World Series festivities by hosting a half-hour question-and-answer session with nearly 200 players and fans jammed under the Outback Steakhouse tent in right field.

After signing autographs for another half-hour, he headed to the mound to throw out the ceremonial first pitch for the 5:30 p.m. game between Waterford, Conn., and Team Italia. (For the record, the pitch was a little high.)

"This brings back a lot of memories," Walker said following the session. "When you're that age, it's all about just playing, being with your friends and having a good time."

Walker had a busy schedule on his off-day. He returned to Boston at 3 in the morning from Seattle, where the Red Sox wrapped up their road trip. Around 11, he visited the Franklin Park Zoo with his family: wife, Katie, daughter, Riley, 2, and son, Jackson, 8 months.

Walker arrived at Adams Field at 4:30 in the afternoon and spoke briefly about his baseball background before fielding questions.

"I find the kids get bored if I just sit there and talk," Walker said. "I like to have them ask questions."

And the kids fired away like beat reporters. But the baseball veteran had the right answers.

When asked where he wanted to play next year when he was a free agent, Walker replied, "I won't go to the Yankees because I play for the Red Sox. I'd be a traitor." Of course, his audience applauded loudly.

"I think a couple of the parents put them up to it," Walker joked afterwards about some of the tough questions.

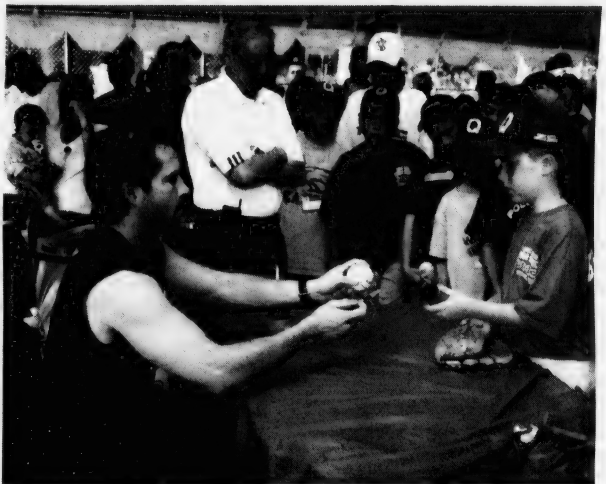

Other questions asked were: The best team he's played on ("This team is the best I've ever played on. I think we can go to the playoffs), favorite player ("Jim Abbott because he had one arm and still pitched), favorite Red Sox player (Hard question. I like them all), who throws a better fastball, Pedro or Clemens ("Pedro is much harder to hit, no doubt about it"), toughest pitcher to hit ("Randy Johnson because I'm lefty").

Walker was also asked what's his best game this season. "Well, I had a 20-game hitting streak earlier in the season and now I haven't had a hit in about a month," he said, drawing chuckles from the crowd. "But my best game was against Philly when I hit three homers."

Joe Edgerly of Quincy, who turned 12 yesterday (Wednesday), enjoyed Walker's visit. "I liked the fact that he told us his favorite baseball player was a guy with one arm, Jim Abbott," he said.

Sean Harrington, 11, of Quincy, said he won't forget some of Walker's advice. "I'll remember that he told us that if you don't give it your all, you'll never make it to the big leagues," he said.

Walker grew up in Bossier City, La., where he played tee-ball, coach-pitch, little league and Dixie (similar to Babe Ruth). His most memorable moment from his childhood career? "When I hit my first home run," he said. "It was sort of an all-star deal like this. I hit it out to left-center." Walker was drafted by the Texas Rangers in high school, but went to Louisiana State University, where he led the Tigers to the 1993 World Series championship and earned MVP honors.

In 1994, Walker was drafted in the first round (8th overall) by the Minnesota Twins and made his Major League Baseball debut in 1996. He has played for the Twins, (1996-2000), the Colorado Rockies (2000-2001) and the Cincinnati Red (2001-2002).

Walker, 30, is batting .270 with nine home runs and 61 RBIs in his first season with the Red Sox.

Inside-The-Park First Series Home Run

It took 16 games, but the Babe Ruth World Series finally had its first home run.

An inside-the-park home-run, though.

Home Run Derby champ Jeff Daniels of Voorhees, N.J., blasted a shot to right-center field that hit near the 371-foot sign on one hop in Monday night's 12-2 win over Weymouth.

Daniels also was the winning pitcher, allowing two runs on three hits and four walks with three strikeouts. The game ended after five innings because of the 10-run rule.

The dimensions of Adams Field are 346 feet down the left-field line, 363 to left-center, 400 to dead center, 371 to right-center and 340 feet down the right-field line.

Wollaston Swept By Milton In Senior Babe Ruth Series

Wollaston's superb season recently came to an end as it was swept by Milton in the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth best-of-three championship series.

In Game 1, Gary Dalton once again pitched well in defeat, allowing six hits and striking out three in a 3-1 loss.

Wollaston scored its only run when Andy McAllister ripped a double and later crossed home plate on Matt MacNeil's groundout. Steve Reardon (2 hits), Chris Kirshner and James Zapata had the other hits.

In Game 2, Milton jumped out to a 4-0 first-inning lead and never looked back en route to a 10-3 victory.

Wollaston scored all three of its runs in the second inning. Dan Cosgrove belted a two-run double to right-center field that plated MacNeil (2 hits) and McLaughlin, who led off with singles. Cosgrove scored when Jason Fidalgo reached on an error.

But that was as close as Wollaston would get as Milton responded with four runs in the fourth frame and a pair if the fifth to close out the scoring.

Wollaston finished the season with a 17-8 record.

Coach Steve Reardon thanked the parents, players, volunteers Peter Delgado and Rich Zapata, and Ray Cattaneo and the Park Department for all their work this summer.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

The Buzz On Bee Stings

There's a buzz in the air and it's not a friendly one. Now that summer is here, legions of stinging insects have begun their carnivorous assault on outdoor activities across America. These hostile marauders often leave in their wake widespread fear, painful stings and even death.

If you find yourself under siege, resist the temptation to launch a counter-strike. This type of retaliatory action is best left to the professionals. If you become a sting victim, a trip to the hospital may be in order.

According to the American College of Asthma, Allergy and Immunology, most insect stings result in a normal reaction. Symptoms include pain, swelling, itching and redness confined to the sting site.

Recommended treatment includes gently disinfecting the area, using ice to reduce the swelling and using topical steroid ointments or oral antihistamines to relieve the itching. Sometimes a normal reaction can be rather large extending well beyond the sting site (a sting on the wrist may cause the entire arm to swell). If this situation persists for more than a day or two, a physician should be consulted.

For 1 to 2 percent of the population, an insect sting reaction will be allergic in nature. This type of reaction is characterized by: hives, itching and swelling in areas other than the sting site; tightness in the chest and difficulty in breathing; dizziness or a sharp drop in blood pressure; unconsciousness or cardiac arrest.

An allergic reaction can occur in minutes after the sting and may be life threatening or even fatal. Immediate medical attention is required and may involve the administration of certain drugs and in some cases intravenous fluids, oxygen and other treatments.

Because there is a 60 percent likelihood of a recurrence upon re-stinging, allergic patients should seek follow-up care from an allergist. This specialist will evaluate a patient's allergic condition and may prescribe an insect sting kit for emergency treatment and/or immunotherapy; a highly effective vaccination program for life-long protection against allergic reactions.

It was recently shown in a study published in the Journal of Allergy and Clinical Immunology that most people who are allergic to insect stings who undergo a two-year vaccination program will have a prolonged benefit and a permanent loss of allergy. This is good news for the 2 million Americans who suffer from potentially life-threatening allergic reactions and the crippling fear associated with them.

For persons interested in learning more about allergic reactions to insect stings, a free brochure written by the American College of Asthma, Allergy and Immunology is available by calling 1-800-23-STING.

Your Teeth Are Fine But What About Your Gums?

(ARA) - When you were a child, you probably remember someone telling you all about the importance of brushing your teeth after every meal.

"Look mom, no cavities," was the expression of the day, and the success of a trip to your dentist's office hinged on how few cavities you had. Now that you're older, the issues surrounding your oral health aren't as clear cut.

While tooth decay could still be a problem, adults have the added concerns of gum disease, which often isn't accompanied by noticeable pain or discomfort as is a lost filling or even a cavity. "We call periodontal disease 'the silent disease' because most times you don't even know you have it," said Lou Graham, DDS section chief of the Zoller Dental Clinic at the University of Chicago. Dr. Graham maintains an adult private practice in Chicago and lectures both nationally and internationally on dental issues.

"If people don't have a toothache, they don't think there's anything wrong and they often won't seek treatment. Unfortunately, this often results in patients requiring more invasive treatments when, if they had been diagnosed earlier, they could have been treated much easier with superior outcomes."

According to the American Dental Association, 50 million American have some form of gum disease, ranging from mild and highly reversible gingivitis to the chronic and more severe periodontitis, which has been linked to heart disease, diabetes, and pre-term low birth weight. Both gingivitis and periodontitis are caused from the bacteria that live inside plaque.

"There's a lot more to plaque than most people realize," Dr. Graham said. "It's full of bacteria and other harmful byproducts. It can cause real problems when it gets into the gums." Gingivitis is caused when bacteria from plaque sit atop the gum line. Your gums are often red, puffy, may bleed upon brushing and you might have bad breath.

Fortunately, a few simple treatments with a hygienist can halt the process and return the patient to smiling health. "Prevention and early diagnosis are the keys to sound, oral health, which is why we recommend routine checkups every three to six months," Dr. Graham said, pointing out that ADA warns that only one-fifth of all Americans with periodontal disease actually seek treatment.

Advanced gum disease, or periodontitis, occurs when the bacteria sitting atop your gums start seeping into the underlying pockets that surround your teeth. Normally these pockets are shallow, but as the bacteria accumulate they release toxic substances that create inflammation along with tissue and bone loss, deepening the pockets.

Early on, your gums may not hurt or bleed, but left unchecked, these symptoms become evident and significant treatment is often required. The first line of defense in combating periodontitis is a deep cleaning of the teeth and gums called scaling and planing.

While this might require multiple visits (each case is different) recent studies have shown that the scaling becomes more effective when it is combined with the use of localized antimicrobials, a treatment that is applied directly and painlessly to the gums following a scaling and root planing.

"Even when a patient comes in for a routine checkup, if an early problem is found we simply clean the area and place a small amount of the localized antibiotic into the pocket to eradicate the remaining bacteria, it's so simple and the patients couldn't be happier because it's quick and painless," Dr. Graham said.

One such treatment is an FDA-approved therapy called Arestin, a powder that contains a low dose of the antibiotic minocycline. The dentist places the powder directly into the pocket, and it develops instantly into a gel-like substance that adheres to the tooth for up to three weeks.

During this time, the antibiotic is released into the pocket to destroy the remaining bacteria not removed by the scaling and root planing. Dr. Graham is quick to remind his patients that treatments like Arestin are no substitute for good dental hygiene.

For more information about locally administered antibiotics and Arestin, call (866) ARESTIN. Courtesy of ARA Content

Free Equipment Evaluations For Seniors

Horizon Mobility is performing free evaluations to determine mobility need for senior citizens and physically handicapped individuals.

This service is performed by trained personnel and done in the privacy of the individual's own home.

Equipment need will be determined by considering the following: Ability to ambulate, medical history, insurance coverage, home accessibility, and mobility goals.

The purpose of this evaluation is to determine which equipment is the safest and easiest for a person to use. Evaluations are designed to help keep patients at home and out of nursing facilities.

Assistance is also available in receiving equipment if necessary.

For more information, call 1-800-594-1225.

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
AN EARLY START

While many parents may think it is okay to wait until age 2 or 3 before bringing their children to the dentist for their first checkups, that may be too late. As many as 20% of children have cavities by age three, and those cavities can be prevented with early checkups. Accordingly, the American Dental Association recommends that children get their first exams by their first birthdays. While fluoridated water ensures that the majority of today's children have healthy teeth, some children develop rampant decay. It is with an eye toward helping these children that early checkups are recommended. In the meantime, when first teeth do appear, parents should start brushing them with a soft brush twice daily.

Teeth should be cleaned as soon as they emerge. By starting early, your baby gets used to the daily routine. The early stages of decay are usually painless. Only regular professional examinations and X-rays can detect early trouble. We're currently accepting new patients and welcome you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Call us today! We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Do not put babies to bed with a bottle. Leaving milk or juice on the teeth overnight exposes them to sugars that invite the growth of bacteria that causes tooth decay.

Charles T. Sweeny, 86 Fondly Remembered For Dedication To Education, Veterans

By TOM HENSHAW

A wounded and decorated soldier in World War II and a graduate of Exeter and Dartmouth, Charlie Sweeny devoted his life to veterans and education.

He served both causes well.

For many years, from the end of the war until his retirement, he served as chief contact officer for the Veterans Administration in Boston.

"When it came to helping anyone, veteran or not, Charlie would do his best," said Henry "Hank" Bradley, director of Quincy Veterans Services. "I am proud to have been considered a friend by this gentle man."

But education was his passion.

He was one of the founders of Quincy College, chartered in 1958 as Quincy Junior College, and a member of the Quincy School Committee for 20 years, two of them as vice chairman.

"He was a public servant with a capital 'P,'" said City Clerk Joseph Shea, who served with him for 10 years on the Board of Voter Registration.

"He was a powerful and eloquent voice on behalf of public education for Quincy school children," said Frank McCauley, who served with him for six years on the School Committee.

Charles T. Sweeny died last Wednesday, Aug. 13, at his Quincy home a month short of his 87th birthday.

A funeral service was conducted Saturday at Christ Episcopal Church by the Rev. Sarah Conner. Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

"The people who knew him have lost a loyal friend and the city of Quincy has lost a respected advocate of the city's public schools and Quincy College," said Daniel Raymond, who also served with him on the School Committee.

"He was a role model of what a School Committee member should be," said former School Superintendent Lawrence Creedon, who attended his funeral.

CHARLES SWEENEY

"It was clear that he loved Quincy College," said Sean Barry, the president of the college. "He was always at our commencement ceremonies where he took a great and sincere interest in our students."

The flag at the college was lowered to half staff in his memory.

In addition to helping to found Quincy College, Mr. Sweeny served on the Board of Governors at the time of his death.

He was also past president of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees, a former director of the National School Board Association and a member of the National Committee for the Support of Public Schools.

He was former chairman of the Quincy Park & Recreation Board.

He won Citizen of the Year Awards from the National Alliance of Businessmen in 1977 and from the Quincy Jewish War Veterans in 1961.

He received citations from the Quincy Junior Chamber of Commerce in 1970, the Disabled American Veterans in 1975 and the Military Order of the Purple Heart in 1977.

Mr. Sweeny was born in New York City and grew up in New York and New Hampshire, where he attended Phillips Exeter Academy and Dartmouth College and did graduate work at the University of New Hampshire.

He was a member of the U. S. Army's 26th Infantry, the famed Yankee Division, (Cont'd On Page 31)

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A tradition is defined as an unwritten belief, law or custom. Generally a tradition is an expression or means of implementing a principle or belief, but as time passes frequently the principle is forgotten. Being the creatures of habit that we are, we continue a tradition because others before us did it that way.

But, if tradition has replaced or smothered principle, it is time for change. . . There is a story told about a young couple preparing their first Ham dinner. In preparing it the young wife asked her husband to "cut the end off the ham." When asked "why" she said, "Mother always did it that way." Mother was called and asked why she always did it that way. Her answer was, "Because Grandma always did it that way." Grandma was then called and asked why. . . Her answer was, "Because the pot was not big enough!"

As we see in this illustration, oft times a principle is continued and the reason forgotten. Grandma followed a principle; others just followed Grandma. Granted, it is not wrong to follow. Traditions are not in themselves wrong. But if our actions are not based on principle, if we follow blindly, if we do not seek after knowledge, we can come to a place of confusion or defeat. . .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Impatience with those who don't keep up with you can cause resistance, which, in turn, can lead to more delays. Best to be helpful and supportive if you want results.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surprise announcement from a colleague could put you on the defensive. Gather your facts and respond. You'll soon find the situation shifting in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Time spent away from a project pays off with a new awareness of options you hadn't considered before. Weigh them carefully before deciding which to choose.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Consider confronting that personal conflict while there's still time to work things out. A delay can cause more problems. A longtime colleague might offer to mediate.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some emerging matters could impede the Lion's progress in completing an important project. Best advice: Deal with them now, before they can create costly delays.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your aspect continues to favor an expanding vista. This could be a good time to make a career move, and taking an out-of-town job could be a good way to do it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Disruptive family disputes need to be settled so that everyone can move on. Avoid assuming this burden alone, though. Ask for — no, demand — help with this problem.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Patience is called for as you await word on an important workplace situation. A personal circumstance, however, could benefit by your taking immediate action.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Don't lose confidence in yourself. Those doubters are likely to back off if you demand they show solid proof why they think your ideas won't work.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A temporary setback might cause the usually sure-footed Goat some unsettling moments. But keep going. The path ahead gets easier as you move forward.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There's welcome news from the workplace. There could also be good news involving a relationship that has long held a special meaning for you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might need to cut some lingering ties to a situation that no longer has the appeal it once held. In the meantime, you can start to explore other opportunities.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your sense of what's right can inspire others if you remember not to push too hard to make your case. Moderation works best for you.

ship here. The people are still here, all around us, we just need to invite them in and welcome them to stay." Olmstead wrote in his first column for the church's newsletter. "Together we stand at the threshold of future possibilities which we can only imagine."

He cited the role of the interim pastor: To help the church grieve the loss of the 56-year pastorate of Rev. Dr. Peter V. Corea and Rev. M. Alicia Corea, to help the congregation define its direction, to put some things away and to gather other together, and to look with hope toward the future of the church.

He said that one of the challenges of the church will be how it addresses change, adding that no one in the church is ambiguous about the idea of change and new direction, but that change is hard.

A native of Worcester, the 40-year-old Olmstead grew up in the First Congregational Church of Shrewsbury. He enjoys fly-fishing, sea kayaking, gardening, music, reading, his dog and three cats.

Sept. 2 D-Day For $110 M School Bond Vote

Phelan, however, said the city would be able to absorb the costs without a Proposition 2 1/2 override or a debt exclusion.

In order to stay qualified for the 90 percent reimbursement, the city must act quickly to satisfy DOE. One of those items is approval of a financial plan to pay for construction costs.

"It is not an ideal situation, but it is one we have to make in order to stay on the priority list," Phelan told the council.

Quincy is eligible for the 90 percent reimbursement because the city is able to take advantage of the School Building Assistance program.

Gov. Mitt Romney, however, ordered a moratorium on new projects for the program, which meant the city was in danger of losing the funding. But Driscoll agreed to allow the project to stay on the list if the city took certain steps. Last week, the school committee satisfied part of DOE's criteria by approving a design plan and site for the new high school. In addition, Quincy must obtain the necessary environmental permits to build the new high school on Faxon Field, next to the existing high school.

Securing the permits is still another 18 months away, according to City Solicitor Monica Conynham. Since the Faxon Field site is complicated, DOE has agreed to waive the city's deadline regarding the permits.

Conynham estimated that construction of the new high school could begin in Spring, 2006, depending on the extent of possible environmental appeals regarding the project.

Phelan admitted that obtaining the environmental permits will prove to be a challenge. "We are not out of the woods yet," he said.

Monday night's council meeting provided a rare public exchange between Phelan and Council President Dan Raymond, who questioned the mayor on the status of Sterling Middle School.

Raymond accused Phelan of dropping plans to renovate Sterling, which has been slated for renovations, also. In 2001 the council voted to borrow $900,000 to pay for Sterling designs.

Under various plans, students at Sterling Middle School would be moved to the existing Central Middle School while Sterling is renovated. In the meantime, Central students would be moved to the existing high school to make way for the Sterling students.

Phelan said state Education officials indicated that only one project could be placed on the priority list for 2003. Construction of the new high school should be addressed first, he said.

The existing high school cannot be converted into a new Central until a new high school is built, so the city can wait on the Central project until the moratorium is lifted in 2007, Phelan said.

The Central Middle School project is eligible for the 90 percent reimbursement because it was a part of a plan that was approved by the council in 1997.

Phelan said the DOE did not consider the Sterling project to be part of the city's original vote on the high school plan. As a result, the state DOE does not consider that project eligible for the 90 percent reimbursement, he said.

But the city is not giving up on the Sterling project, Phelan said.
